SCHOLARSHIP HUNT

COVER STORY

According to the College Board, the average cost of attending an in-state public university is currently around $10,000 per year. The numbers jump to $25,000 a year to attend an out-of-state public school, and two semesters at a private university could cost a student upwards of $35,000 per year. Of course these are averages and the cost will vary depending on a number of factors such as major, housing, food plans etc. Bottom line, a college education isn't cheap.

With the availability of federal grants and student loans, the price tag is less of a barrier now more than ever. Most high school graduates with enough motivation and work ethic can earn a college degree. However, the resulting loan debt can burden them for decades. Students earning a degree in 2016 owed an average of $37,000 in loan debt.

A great way to lessen the financial burden is through scholarships. Sadly, a lot of students fail to take advantage because they were unaware of what exists. Literally hundreds of thousands of dollars are awarded annually by organizations right here in Hendricks County.

So that these potential resources do not go unnoticed, the ICON has compiled a comprehensive list of local, state and national scholarships available to Hendricks County residents.

This list was compiled to the best of our knowledge. We encourage residents who are interested in pursuing one these scholarships to confirm deadlines, monetary amounts, and eligibility requirements with the awarding organization.

New FASFA rules adopted for 2017

By Cleveland Dietz

The office of Federal Student Aid—part of the U.S. Department of Education—is a potential funding source for students seeking post-secondary education. It distributes over $150 billion in financial aid to about 22 million students every year.

Access to its programs, however, requires students, or their parents, to fill out the Free Application for Federal Student Aid each year. Significant changes to the FAFSA were implemented for the 2017 academic year.

The FAFSA opened Oct. 1 for the current cycle—two months earlier than past years. It will open on that date every year from this point forward. The application deadline will remain June 30.

The income tax year that applies to the application has changed. Applicants will use their 2015 income tax information again for the 2017 academic year. For the 2018 academic year, they will use 2016 and so on.

However, the office of Federal Student Aid notes in a white paper, "The FAFSA asks for marital status as of the day you fill it out. So if you're married now but weren't in 2015 (and therefore didn't file taxes as married), you'll need to add your spouse's income to your FAFSA."

The reverse is true, as well. If the applicant was married during the 2015 tax year, but isn't now, they will need to subtract their spouse's income.

For FAFSA purposes, the academic year is defined as July 1 – June 30. If significant changes in income have occurred for the applicant between the 2015 tax year and the 2016 tax year, Federal Student Aid directs the applicant to their university's financial aid office to explore their options.

Former energy CEO gets 33 months in defrauding scheme

United States Attorney Josh Minkler announced Feb. 10 in a press release that Donnis Mizell, 56, of Avon, the former Chief Executive Officer of the Hendricks Power Cooperative (HPC) was sentenced to 33 months in federal prison by U.S. District Judge Sarah Evans Barker following his plea of guilty to having defrauding HPC out of over half a million dollars.

Mizelle had been the cooperative's CEO since 2003. FBI agents and forensic accountants investigated Mizelle's expense report entries dating back to 2009 and found over 1,800 personal purchases that Mizelle fraudulently disguised as legitimate business expenses. In all, Mizelle falsified nearly every one of his expense reports for over six years and caused HPC to pay for over $580,000 in personal expenses ranging from luxury items to every day expenses.

Hendricks Power Cooperative officials released this in a prepared statement: "As we conclude this long and painful journey, we can now report that full restitution was made for this crime. Hendricks Power Cooperative member-owners can rest assured that all appropriate actions have been taken to avoid similar incidents in the future and

"We operate as a not-for-profit service organization, and our primary mission is, and always will be, to serve our members" ~Hendricks Power Cooperative that at no time was their personal or payment information at risk. Like other cooperatives, we operate as a not-for-profit service organization, and our primary mission is, and always will be to serve our members and always will be, to serve our members. We are grateful for the hard work from the FBI and the US Attorney's office for their strong community service and commitment to our case."

'Fairing' well after high school

With spring fast approaching, high school seniors are likely contemplating life after graduation. The decisions made during this transitional period are all about setting oneself up for success. Whether they are concerned with finding a job, joining the service, perusing a degree, or any combination of the three, knowing what's available is a great first step.

Making big decisions is a necessary and sometimes agonizing part of life. The bigger the decision, the more we want to be sure of the outcome. Deciding whether to get married or buy a home, for example, is a commitment because it has far reaching consequences; but so is taking a job, enlisting in the military, and enrolling in college.

"A great accomplishment shouldn't be the end of the road, just the starting point for the next leap forward." ~ Harvey Mackey

Choosing a career path can be difficult enough, but then you need to know how get there.

Fortunately, there's a great opportunity to help you weigh your options just around the corner. The 2017 Hendricks County College and Career Fair will have representatives from over 100 colleges, job recruiters, and four branches of the military to answer your questions. To put it simply, it's designed to make that next big decision easier. Harvey Mackey said, "A great accomplishment shouldn't be the end of the road, just the starting point for the next leap forward."

The fair is Thursday, Feb. 23, 5-8:30 p.m. at the Hendricks County Fairgrounds and Conference Complex, 1900 E Main St, Danville. Not only do I encourage high school students to attend, but also parents and anyone looking to take that next step forward.

All the news that's fit to sprint

HUMOR

By Dick Wolfsie

I recently made the biggest giftgiving mistake of my life. I got Mary Ellen a Fitbit for Christmas. My wife has become somewhat of a health nut, which I should clarify, includes eating about six varieties of healthful nuts. She has wanted to keep track of her walking. I am not a walker myself. Truth is, I have walked back several promises I made when we first got married, as well as three 2017 New Year's resolutions. That's about as much exercise as I'm comfortable with.

Wait, I do walk to my office every day (it's not my fault I work from home) and I walk to the pro shop to get my golf cart. Oh, and to the garage to get on my riding lawn mower. Maybe I've never given myself enough credit.

One of the purposes of the Fitbit is to track 10,000 steps in a day, which is what the NASEWA (National Association of Something Else to Worry About) is now recommending. They say that the average person walks only 1,000-3,000 steps; 10,000 steps a day is equivalent to a few miles, something most people won't consciously do. Unconscious exercise sounds a lot less strenuous.

The Fitbit does not come with instructions. The manufacturer assumes you either know how to hook it up, or you can look up the specifics online. Remember, this is not just a pedometer, a simple device that tracks your paces. This puppy monitors your sleep and your food intake, and then rewards you with elaborate twinkling of lights when you have reached that 10,000-step goal.

Mary Ellen and I had a lot of trouble getting the Fitbit and the laptop to sync, so we called Kevin, our tech guy. Kevin is used to dealing with people who sit in front of a computer all day and he feared that helping them set up their Fitbit could lead his clients to begin a physical fitness regimen—leaving less time for them to download viruses and malware, the bread and butter of his repair service.

"I can't find your dongle," said Kevin to my wife as he fumbled though the Fitbit box. "Does your husband have one?" I didn't know what a dongle was, but I'm pretty sure in Yiddish it's a dirty word. I learned that it's a small plug-in that allows electronic devices to communicate with each other. I always called it a thingamajig.

Soon, Kevin got everything to work. Everything.

"Did you get a good night's sleep?" I asked Mary Ellen the next morning.

"I have no idea. Let me check. Well, it says I did, but for some reason I'm exhausted."

I reminded her that the Fitbit vibrated on her wrist as a warning that she hadn't moved for an entire hour. We had no idea how to turn that application off, so I told Mary Ellen that if she didn't want the Fitbit to wake her every hour, she needed her sleep to be more restless. Yeah, I actually said that.

I don't want to own a Fitbit of my own. Instead, I plan to follow my wife around. I'll never reach that 10,000 goal, but it's a step in the right direction.

Recreation Association (IPRA).

They recently recognized two local agencies for excellence during its annual awards ceremony. IPRA presented the staff of Danville Parks and Precreation with the Outstanding Agency Award for striving to improve the quality of life for both its community and to the state of Indiana.

The ICON congratulates Danville sports coordinator, Nate Phipps, assistant parks superintendent, Eric Lobosky, recreation coordinator, Stand Wilson, and superintendent, Will Lacey on their recent recognition.

IPRA also presented Washington Township Parks and Recreation with the Inclusion Program of Excellence award for its Sensory Easter Egg Hunt event.

We applaud both agencies for assuring Hendricks County residents have the very best facilities, parks and recreational programs.

Dreams do come true

READER'S WRITES When Cedar Elementary opened nine years ago about 5-percent of our school's population received free and reduced meals. We now average around 28%. As you can imagine, this huge increase has caused us to rethink how we take care of our students.

"We knew that our students were never going to do their best in the classroom if they were hungry."

Over the past few years Principal Kevin Gray and I have been working to help meet the physical needs of our neediest students. We knew that out students were never going to do their best in the classroom if they were hungry. We began with a program through Gleaners Food Bank. This program provided students in our building with food for the weekend. However, we knew that more support was needed. We began to dream of a place where our families could come and get the food they needed. We were able to partner with teachers at Maple and White Oak Elementary schools to make our dream of a school-based food pantry come true.

I reached out to my former employer, Mike Cunningham (Cunningham Restaurant Group). I asked if he would be willing to financially support a school-based food pantry – he agreed! Our team (Sarah Tuttle, Kayla Kuepper, and I) presented our food pantry vision to the Avon School Board. The Board was in full support of our idea. Kayla and Sarah, along with the support of Nikki Harrison (White Oak and Maple Principal) opened Branches. This was the first step in opening a school food pantry.

After a year of serving Maple and White Oak families, we opened our doors to the entire school corporation. We have since changed our name to the Mary Lee Maier Community Pantry. This name was chosen by Mike Cunningham, to honor his late mother-in-law who had been a Kindergarten teacher for many years.

The Mary Lee Maier Community Pantry is now open every Thursday (when school is in session) from 4:30-6:30 p.m. at Maple Elementary (Door #4). The only requirement for our food pantry is to have a child that is part of Avon Community Schools. Our team, Kayla Kuepper, Sarah Tuttle, Dr. Maggie Hoernemann, Kevin Gray, Nikki Harrison, Dr. Mike Whitman, Kim Woodward, and Mike Rawlinson is excited and humbled to see our dream come true. We hope to serve those in need in our community. Our desire is that no child will ever have to worry about lack of food again.

History buffs get medieval at fairgrounds

By Chris Cornwall

The Hendricks County Fairgrounds and Conference Complex recently played host to an indoor Archery competition. Hundreds of history buffs in authentic medieval garb met there for 'Better Warfare through Archery,' an event organized by the Society for Creative Anachronism (SCA). SCA members practiced other medieval skills as well such as embroidery and brewing mead. Competitors from each category were even recognized in a medieval royal court proceeding.

"All of us in this room started from a love of history," Wendy Martin-Glick said, who is a SCA media liaison. "We have members who are doctors, lawyers – a lot of ex-military members - you name it... I actually work in insurance back home (Ft Wayne, IN). So we come from every walk of life."

The Society for Creative Anachronism has been around over 50 years. What began as a backyard graduation party in 1960s Berkley Calif., eventually ballooned into a worldwide organization with over 60,000 participants. In fact, SCA celebrated its fiftieth anniversary at the fairgrounds last year with an epic battle reenactment. Two armies touting 1,000 soldiers each clashed last summer while yielding real weapons and armor. Glick said everyone is trained and must pass a safety test before competing in combat.

"Those who came to watch said they could feel the earth shake," Mike Longcor said, an accomplished folk singer and 43-year veteran of SCA. Longcor was chosen to lead last year's western army into battle, a feeling he emphatically described as "awesome."

Many of the spectators were from Hendricks County. "We joined the SCA because of that 50 year-event," said Danville native, Bill Sutton.

He is a software support specialist by trade and says he didn't join for the combat and weaponry. Bill and his wife

The Royal Court, made up of recent medieval tournament winners (and sometimes their spouses), recognized champions from several medieval skills categories during a ceremony.

Brenda Sutton, a musician and expert of medieval languages, were always interested in the historic aspect. "My wife and I already knew a lot of SCA members - mostly musicians. So that was our connection to group before we joined six-months ago."

"I'm currently studying the bardic arts." To learn more about the SCA, visit www.sca.org.

EID will fund Plainfield's connector service

The town of Plainfield recently passed an ordinance to create an Economic Improvement District (EID) to provide funding for the South Plainfield Connector shuttle service.

Why: According to a press release from the Central Indiana Transportation Authority (CIRTA), over 50 percent of the designated district's employees live outside Hendricks County. The Plainfield Connector is a major source of transportation for these employees.

What happened: The three-year, nonrenewable federal grant used to partially fund the connector service expired in 2015. Since then, the Town of Plainfield and CIRTA have pooled together enough resources to maintain it up until the summer of 2017.

What it means: Property owners within a 3,442-square-acre district south of U.S. 40 in Plainfield will pay into a fund to cover the cost of the South Plainfield Connector shuttle. More than half of the district's property owners signed the petition to establish the district.

What's next: The South Plainfield Connector will be funded through the EID starting in July 2017. The connector service will be managed by CIRTA and the EID will be governed by a board of owners and representatives.

Riesling, an affordable aperitif wine

WINE & DINE

By Mark Vickery You know, you just don't have to spend a lot of money to get a tasty wine. Some people might, with an upturned nose, disagree. Don't listen to them. There are a whole lot of good wines on the market for $12.00 or less. Agreed, you will notice definite differences between a $10 cabernet and a $40 cabernet, but how many of us can drink $40 wines on a regular basis?

One grape variety which consistently produces really good affordable wine is Riesling. Once best known as the premier white wine of Germany, it is now successfully produced world-wide.

Generally speaking, the sweeter the wine the more you can expect to pay. This is because the grapes must stay on the vine longer. The longer they are on the vine, the more they shrink and concentrate the natural grape sugars in the juice. But they also lose juice, so it takes more grapes to pro-

> "...the sweeter the wine the more you can expect to pay."

Stock image duce a bottle of wine (we're going to have a quiz on this next week).

Anyway, back to the wine itself. If you usually don't care for sweeter wines, find a Riesling labeled "Dry" - or if it's German, labeled "Kabinett." These are delightful aperitif wines to sip with friends before dinner or to drink with chicken or fish dishes that don't have a heavy cream sauce. They are also good with spicy Pacific-rim foods, because the slight sweetness is a nice counterpoint to the spiciness. Riesling is also a great hotweather wine to drink on a deck or patio, or on a picnic. It's served chilled (not ice-cold) and is somewhat lower in alcohol than other table wines.

If you are new to wine, you may wonder what people mean when they say that they pick up certain flavors in a wine. One of-the things to do when drinking wine is to try to identify the other flavors you may sense. Keep in mind that a large part of taste is smell, so use your nose. What should you expect from Riesling? How about pear, stewed apple, or cantaloupe?

Remember, wine always tastes best when shared with friends.

Unstick glasses

If you have glasses stacked and stuck together, this should get them unstuck. Submerge the bottom glass in hot water, which will expand it, then pour ice-cold water in the top glass, which will contract it. Then you should be able to pull the glasses apart easily.

Handy pen storage

Instead of having pens or pencils floating around loose inside your purse, put them in a plastic toothbrush holder - the cylindrical kind that closes tightly. The holder is easy to find in a crowded bag, and it will prevent a pen from accidentally losing its cap and making marks inside the bag's lining.

Some considerations when planning your spring project

GARDENING

By John Chapin The daylight hours are lengthening, birdsong is everywhere, and hardy plants are budding in anticipation of spring. With these familiar signs and sounds in the air, now is the time for gardeners to make the most of that spring enthusiasm and optimism. Many homeowners have a landscape job that they have wanted to get done, whether it's starting or a new project or renovating an old one. Do you need a freshened foundation planting, a water feature, fire pit or other hardscape, or new perennial garden? Early spring is a great time to get plans underway to make sure your idea gets done.

There are three basic options for both novice and experienced gardeners. Deciding on which route to choose depends on each person's knowledge, physical ability, experience, and budget.

Option one is to have the job professionally done. This is obviously the most expensive, but there are definite advantages, and even possible savings. Hiring a reputable company to do the work pretty much ensures that you will be avoiding costly mistakes due to lack of knowledge and that the job will be completed in a timely manner.

Option two is to do the entire job yourself. Providing the labor gives you "sweat equity," resulting in considerable savings. Even if you lack the knowledge for the job, there are so many resources available today on the Internet that taking the time to watch YouTube videos can be very educational. You can avoid costly mistakes and gain confidence to do the project well.

Option three can combine the best of both worlds. It is to enlist the help of a professional landscape business in planning and obtaining materials, but doing the bulk of the labor yourself. For this option, check with local landscaping businesses and garden centers to see what services they provide. Most will do a consultation and draw up a plan for you, listing the plants and materials you will need, as well as give a quote for them to do the installation. What you are looking for is a company that will work with you to give you valuable professional advice and provide plants and materials at a DIY discount. With you doing the labor, but using a professionally designed plan, you can avoid many common mistakes while also saving yourself some money

Hendricks County residents are fortunate to have not only many reputable landscaping businesses, but also local sources of plants and landscaping materials such as enriched topsoil, mulch and rocks. With careful planning, landscaping projects can be accomplished with competence and satisfaction, and will provide years of enjoyment.

John Chapin is a retired school teacher and sole proprietor of Chapin Landscaping in Danville. He has over 30 years' experience in the landscaping business.

Tasty Shrimp Scampi

RECIPE

By Jerry Rezny This is a very simple, yet elegant dish. Shrimp come in many different sizes. In the U.S., the largest shrimp are U/15, or under 15 per pound. I used 16/20 for this recipe. There were 18 good sized shrimp in the bag.

The main thing to remember about shrimp is "DO NOT OVERCOOK!

Ingredients: Serves 4

½ tsp. salt
12 oz. angel hair pasta
4 oz. butter
½ fresh lemon
1 lb. Shrimp, peeled and deveined
4 cloves of garlic, minced
1 cup dry white wine,
1 tbsp. chopped parsley

1/4 tsp ground black pepper, 3/4 cup grated parmesan cheese

Boil water in a large pot. Add ¾ tbsp. salt. Drop in dried pasta and boil for 4 minutes. Drain. Melt butter in a saucepan with medium heat. Stir in garlic and shrimp stirring constantly for about 4 minutes. Stir in wine, pepper and squeezed lemon juice. Heat for 1 minute and pour over the drained pasta. Top with Parmesan cheese and chopped parsley.

Oh those Havana Nights

By Tiffany Giles

If you can't make it to Cuba to enjoy the sugar white sands, streets lined with bright pastel colored homes and live salsa music, don't sweat it because Havana is coming to Brownsburg.

Frazee Gardens will turn into a tropical oasis on Thursday, Feb. 23, from 6-8 p.m. for their first Girls Night Out (GNO) party of 2017.

"February can be a very blah month in Indiana, so we thought Havana Nights would be a fun and cheery way to get women out and looking forward to spring. We even have palm trees," said event coordinator, Amy Hamather.

Event coordinator, Amy Hamather, and Frazee Gardens Manager, Stephanie Sheldon.

"The shopping is going to be fantastic. These are all fun stores, uniquely different and in one place for women to shop and share with their friends" Hamather said. "It will be a great night to celebrate friendship and get fabulous finds."

Guests can sample treats, buy a glass of wine (or even a bottle), gather beauty tips, buy apparel and update their home décor.

The party will take place on the storefront of Frazee Gardens, located at 3480 N. SR 267 in Brownsburg. Tickets are $10 per person and can be purchased in advance at the shop or at the door the evening of the event. All proceeds from Havana Nights will go to benefit Hendricks Regional Health.

This is just the first of several events
Frazee Gardens is planning for the year.

"Our shop is involved in the community and likes to give to a variety of local charities. We sponsor other fundraisers as well," Hamather explained. "In May we are partnering with Caroline's Mobile Boutique to

AN OPTION

Maddie's

540 East Main Street Brownsburg

With life being so busy, it's great day when I get to spend time with my daughter. We had an opportunity for a spur of the moment lunch at Maddie's in Brownsburg.

Maddie's is a new restaurant featuring sandwiches and casseroles with many items made in-house including sauces, salads, deserts and pie crusts. Each entree's name has a back story. Example is the Misty Dog; a tribute to the owner, Renee's "fur baby" and co-founder of Misty Eyes Animal Center.

We enjoyed 'The Bronx' – 'The Big One!' and 'This & That' I ordered The Bronx. It has house made meatballs with meat sauce, pasta, provolone cheese served on a garlic sub roll. The basket was served with potato chips and pickle. My daughter ordered 'This & That' with a half serving of the Saratoga wrap and a cup, of loaded baked potato soup. We added deviled eggs which is one of the several house made salads selections. Everything was delicious including the apple pie and Rice Krispy treats for dessert.

The new permanent Misty's Eyes Animal Center will be opening in March, 616 S Co Rd 800 in Avon.

Where do you like to dine?

The Clayton Cafe, it's close to home and great food.

The menu selection is all good but my go-to is the breaded tenderloin or western omelet. The cook is awesome and his omelets are amazing!

What do you like about this place?

The place has gotten so much better recently with the new owners. They have cleaned up the place and remodeled. They are so friendly plus from the start have given back to our community with 'Dine-out Nights.'

IU Health West now offers around-the-clock heart care

IU Health West Hospital made an announcement on Valentine's Day that promises a significant advance in heart care for residents of Hendricks County and beyond. The hospital now offers cardiac catheterization 24 hours-a-day, seven days-a-week.

"Time is heart muscle when a patient is having a heart attack," says Dr. Ibrahim Abu Romeh, an IU Health physician, interventional cardiologist and member of the 24/7 cath lab team. "As excellent as we have been in collaborating with our colleagues at IU Health Methodist Hospital to provide cardiac interventions during off-hours, getting that transport time back will help make our patient outcomes even better."

IU Health West has been a designated chest pain center and has processes in place to be considered a 'level 1' hospital for the care of patients having a heart attack. Now, day or night, EMS teams and community residents have the assurance that life-saving cardiac interventions, such as opening a clogged artery with a balloon and placing a stent, can be performed here.

"We know our patients choose IU Health West for a reason—either we are their 'home' hospital where all of their doctors are, or at the very least, we are the hospital closest to their home," says Shelley Doodeman, manager of cardiac services. "Now, no matter the time of day, we can simply escort a worried spouse upstairs to wait for their loved one's procedure to be completed. We're not giving them a map and showing them how to navigate to our partners downtown when they're already scared and stressed."

Growing demand for heart care services and an aging population paved the way for this cath lab expansion at IU Health West.

"This evolution has been a long time coming," explains hospital president, Doug Puckett. "I think the day we opened in 2004 we knew that eventually we'd be here offering 24/7 cath lab services. Our cardiologists are in high demand, our team is passionate about preventing, diagnosing and treating heart disease, and the patient volume is there.

Developing a budding chef in your kitchen

DIETARY

By Martha Rardin

Do you remember when you first learned your way around the kitchen? In my case, my sister and I had free run of the kitchen while my parents worked. We would find a recipe, make sure we had the ingredients and then try the recipe out on our family. Our parents were supportive and appeared to enjoy most of what we made even if occasionally my dad would suggest we not make "that dish" for a while.

I think the freedom we were given in the kitchen is one reason we both love to cook and gather around the table with our families. So what can you do in your household to encourage a young person to explore their culinary instincts? Here are a few tips:

 Stock your kitchen with ingredients that will allow creativity and provide the basics of most recipes. Keep basic baking ingredients on hand as well as fruits and prepped veggies for quick snacks and easy side dishes.

• Allow your budding chef to make mistakes. I recall more than once my sister and I burned casseroles or cookies while honing our skills in the kitchen. My mom would talk us through what happened and help us determine how we could improve the dish.

• After your child has some experience in the kitchen put them in charge of a meal once in a while. This will help teach responsibility but also meal planning and grocery shopping skills. Be sure to heap praise and let your chef know you appreciate their efforts to nurture your family.

• Your teen will enjoy the family eating together and enjoying the dish they made or the meal they planned. This is also a good time for all in the family to appreciate the different talents each family member brings to your table.

Raising young people is a hard task but can begin to get easier when they participate in helping you feed and nurture your family. I hope these tips will encourage you to allow a budding chef into your kitchen.

Martha Rardin, MSM, RDN, CD, FAND, is Director of Nutrition and Dietetics for Hendricks Regional Health.

Hendricks County ICON's Greatest Generation Pearl Donnelly, Age 95

- Served in the Army Air Core during WWII from 1942-1945. She was a Corporal in the WAAC (Women's army auxiliary core).
- Made $50.00/month while serving.
- Widow to Carl Donnelly: 2 daughters, 4 granddaughters, 1 grandson and 3 great-grandson's.
- · From Williamson, West Virginia.
- Moved to Indianapolis after her time in the service.
 She had a friend in the Army who convinced her to move to Indiana. While registering to vote at a local fire department in Indianapolis, she met her husband, Carl.
- Before her service time, she worked in clothing sales at Brown's Dress shop. After the service she worked for RCA, Electronic laboratories and for the American Legion Headquarters.

- Her favorite thing to do is ballroom dance.
- Happy with the progression of women's rights.
- Most vivid memory of generation she was raised in: It was a poor generation. She was a coal-miner's daughter, but she was happy with what she had and had a good childhood.
- Advise to the next generation: Stay clean (stay out of trouble) and work hard.
- Biggest lesson learned: Be kind and help people.
- Biggest change witnessed from today's youth vs. her youth: Kids don't respect their parents like they use to. Lifestyles have also changed- more liberal.
- Item you would put in a time capsule: Army uniform
- Letter you would put in a time capsule: Have a better life for yourself.

Poll worker receives award from Secretary of State

Howard Sims was presented the 2016 Poll Worker of the Year award by Secretary of State Connie Lawson at the Hendricks County Courthouse Feb. 14. The award annually recognizes a Hoosier poll worker who performs "above and beyond" their normal duties to assist voters and officials alike. According to the Office of Secretary of State, 80-year-old Sims displayed "diligence and adaptability during the 2016 presidential election cycle." He has served the Hendricks County polls over 40 years.

Seven years ago, husband and wife team and former anthropologists, Dave Broughton and Erica Kempf, left the academic world behind in England to start Nomad Yarns. The couple met in the historic city of York (U.K.) while Erica, who is a native of Avon, was working on her PhD, and Dave was working in the university's anthropology department as a technician. They soon fell in love and got married.

Although Erica was sure in regards to Dave, she had second thoughts when it came to her career path. She ultimately decided against becoming a doctor of

Dave and Erica also offer courses for inspiring yarn magicians such as knitting, dying, and crochet. Once a month beginning in February and ending in November, students are taught a new technique or skill as part of Nomad's Project of the Month Club 2017. There is also a 'sit anthropology. "I asked myself what I would be willing to do for the rest of my life. And knitting was it."

Erica moved back to Hendricks County and chose an old building on Main St. in Plainfield for the location. "I shocked my parents when I told them I would be opening up a yarn store three miles away from them," she said. But seven years and one baby later, Nomad Yarns is still going strong.

The idea for the store name came from the fact that both Erica and Dave frequently moved around in their respective careers. Dave earned his master's while in California and traveled throughout Europe for his last job. Erica, apart from living in the U.K., also worked in California as well as Florida.

Although the couple occasionally sells product on Esty, it's a small part of their business. What they do sell online is reserved for the more unusual yarns. "We try to keep it local," Erica said. "We are 99.9 percent a brick and mortar store" – which is important according to Dave.

"When you are buying yarn, you really want to pick it up, touch it, and look at the colors," he said. This is especially true when considering the wide variety of specialty yarns Nomad stocks.

"We pick up where the bulk companies left off," Dave said. For example, Nomad carries yarn spun from silk, alpaca wool, and

R BUSINESS LEADER.

As originally appeared in the February 2017 issue of Hendricks County Business Leader.

By Mark Ambrogi

For Dr. Beth Groninger, the decision to move her Plainfield Eye Care practice into a larger space was crucial.

"We had definitely outgrown the practice," she said. "There were some new tests that we needed more space for. That building was built in 1982 and I would have added on to that particular building except it was in the floodway and DNR wouldn't let us do that unless we lifted the building up off the ground.

The new Plainfield location on 900 Edwards Rd. is more than double the space, going from 3,100 square feet to 6,637 square feet. Groninger moved the practice there Sept. 20. The previous location was nearby at 1855 Stafford Rd.

Groninger had joined an industry-specific practice management group, called Prima Eye Group.

"It's been fantastic for us," Groninger said. "It really helped me to make business decisions and see the potential for growth that we had here, and to collaborate with other individual practice owners as far as what they're doing that works, then trying to implement some of those things here."

Key to the growth has been the staff, she said. "You have to invest in your employees," Groninger said. "I have a lot of long-term employees. My office manager has been with me for 22 years, my lead medical technician for 23 years. I have several employees who have been with me for 15-plus years as well. I definitely think the secret to success is to surround yourself with good people, treat them well and don't micromanage them."

Groninger started with Plainfield Eye Care in 1991, buying out Dr. Tom Maloney's part of the business when he retired. Maloney started the practice in 1961. Dr. Cory Shaffer joined the practice in 1976. Groninger purchased Shaffer's part of the practice and building at the end of 2012.

Groninger is one of three full time optometrists and one, Dr. Ray Daub, who works one day a week. Dr. Dana Donaldson, an Avon High School graduate, is the pediatric specialist and Dr. Tessa Schlickbernd, specializes in geriatric eye care.

"We like to stay on the leading edge of technology and many times we're first in the county with new equipment," Groninger said. "We currently have the only diopsys, electro diagnostic testing system. That's important with glaucoma detection and other things it can detect as well.

"We like to stay on the leading edge of technology and many times we're first in the county with new equipment"

- Dr. Beth Groninger

Therese Cochran, an Avon resident, said Groninger is always keeping the practice up-todate.

"She sees the future and goes for it," Cochran said. "It's neat to see. We get bigger and bigger."

A graduate of Mount Vernon High School in Fortville, IN, Groninger later attended Indiana University and graduated from the IU School of Optometry in 1990. She then completed her residency at Danville Veterans Administration Medical Center in Danville, III.

Groninger has been a member of Plainfield's chapter of Tri Kappa for more than 20 years. She helps area kids with scholarships and emergency funds for dental, eye care, and other emergencies.

Her only child, Garrett, played three years of high school baseball and continues to play on travel teams. He is now a freshman at IU.

Groninger's hobbies include jewelry making and painting. She painted pictures for the new building over the summer.

"I decided I want to paint something that matched the office so I took some of the paint samples and incorporated them into the themes," said Groninger, who hadn't painted since high school. "It was a stress reliever. I like to be creative so it's natural that I would want to decorate the office. Art has always been a favorite of mine.

I started making jewelry in 2009, although this past year I haven't had much time to do anything. (Moving) has been a very big project and my son graduated from Plainfield High School in 2016 as well so it was a really busy year.

In addition, Groninger enjoys traveling.

"My dad won a trip to Italy and he took me along, and that was my first trip to Europe (in 1999)," Groninger said. "That was fantastic."

That sparked her desire for traveling.

"I haven't had a time to travel as far in recent years because of my son being at the age where he didn't have as much time because he was involved in travel baseball. Now I'm thinking I have more time. We're planning on going somewhere interesting on his spring break, but we haven't decided where yet."

Gown renown

By Chris Cornwall

Donna Christian and Ellen Blacketer have been sewing professionally for a combined 80 years, but recently got the thrill of a lifetime when they learned their next client would be Second Lady Karen Pence. As two of the six seamstresses tasked with accommodating Pence and her daughters for the 2017 Inaugural Ball, the women helped produce eight gowns in total.

Christian, who owns Donna's Designs in Lizton, said they learned of the project in November after receiving a call from a "dear friend." On the other line was Joyce Hittesdor, a dress designer and fellow member of the Association of Sewing and Design Professionals (ASDP).

"She said I have a problem and need your help," Christian said. "So when a good friend asks you for help, you go up there and do it."

"She said she couldn't tell us what it was about over the phone," said Blacketer, owner of Sew What? in Avon. "We both assumed it had to do with ASDP since we all belong to the same organization."

It was after meeting with her that Christian and Blacketer learned they would be part of a very special project. It turns out Hittesdorf had gotten a call of her own from Karen Pence soon after the Presidential Election. She had done work for Pence over the years - including her wedding dress 30 plus years ago. Now she needed something for the biggest dance of the year. Hittesdorf agreed and enlisted the help of some local professionals.

"I was shocked," Christian said. "When we found who it was, we were like yes!"

Both ladies admit they would have helped their friend no matter what, but felt thrilled and honored for the opportunity.

Working on the project presented some unique challenges - especially for the dress designers. The Pence's were in the process of moving to the White House and needed to fly back and forth.

"They all came at different times for fittings," Christian said. "The secret service came every time. They would always be looking around but not say a word. It made you a little nervous."

Fortunately, the women say it was a joy to be around the Second Lady.

"She didn't make you feel like you were anything else than special. Someone I'd like to be friends with. But there really wasn't a lot of chit chat because they had to fly in and out," Christian said.

In a span of six weeks, the team of seamstresses spent over 400 hours on the project. And while Christian and Blacketer are professionals, they understandably felt a lot pressure to do their best. Not only would the gowns be in the national spotlight during the Inaugural Ball, the chiffon silk gown worn by Karen Pence would eventually be displayed at the Smithsonian.

"We'd ask ourselves if this is Smithsonian quality work," Christian said while holding a photo of the gown. "I did some shirring on Karen's blue dress across the shoulder length, and my friend Ellen did the hemline."

It ank you for our our our work on Ball gours. I your work Ball gours. Itey are lovely jordly,

The hemline she's referring to spans 57 yards, which Blacketer sewed from her home studio in Avon. "It took 20 hours to finish," she said. "I had the dress over a weekend because I wanted to use my own sewing machine."

The project was completed the first week of January.

Questions for.

Outgoing GOP Party Chair Mike O'Brien

Mike O'Brien is Executive Director of 1816 Inc., a lobbying firm out of Brownsburg, the current GOP party chairman of Hendricks County, and was campaign manager to Indiana's newest Governor Eric Holcomb. He was also part of Mitch Daniels' political team during his two terms as Governor. After serving eight years as the GOP county chair, O'Brien is stepping down. He is now looking to become the next GOP party chairman of Indiana's fourth district, an area reaching 15 counties. Here we ask Mike O'Brien 10 questions...

You've been a part of political campaigns that most would agree have been very good for Indiana. What do you feel is key to a successful campaign? During the Mitch years we really focused on what the majority of people viewed as a priority in their own lives - whether it was balancing the state budget or spurring economic development, we wanted to improve their quality of life...I think people around the county looked at Indiana and asked, what are they doing there and how do we replicate it? There are still the same problems in the country today that Indiana fixed on his watch a long time ago...

What about that time stands out to you the most? When I was actually in the governor's office those first two "My goal is to years, I think they were the best two years but no one else would strengthen the say that because his approval rating was about 35-percent. And we were going in there just turning the state on its head, reforming connection between government from top to bottom. It was rough when we were closing BMV branches. But now we have the best BMVs in the country, and the county and state people saw that by 2008. No one would have predicted he would win reelection by more than 20 points, the biggest margin for a organizations" governor in the state's history. And I was only 25 so it was just great to be a part of that in my formative years.

Yeah, that's when I met Eric. I got to know him really well working in the official office and we became friends over the years. Then that turned into him asking me to run his campaign 6 months ago...

Six months doesn't seem like much time to run a campaign? Everything happened really fast. I think now everyone is looking at the extraordinary series of events that happened and thinking, wow. Two years ago we had a different governor (Mike Pence) and a lieutenant governor (Sue Ellspermann) running for reelection. Then we got a new lieutenant governor on March 3, Eric (Holcomb). Then Pence leaves to run with Pres. Trump...

5 So it was kind of like musical chairs:
Yeah (laughing) – just a ton of moving parts. And this happened exactly at the So it was kind of like musical chairs? wrong time in the life of a campaign, 100 days out when you're supposed to be closing the deal, not starting from square-one. But that's where we found ourselves and it all worked out.

You've had a significant impact on state and local government this past decade, what are you most proud up to now? Creating this belief in Indiana that we can punch above our weight class, and that people expect more from their government than they did 12 or 13-years-ago. A balanced budget is now expected whereas 13-years-ago we had a deficit like everyone else. There is pride in the government that we can do better than everyone.... Now we're balancing the budget, unemployment is low; we're running the BMV well. And sometimes people forget it took a lot of tough steps to get there. And I think that has created a kind of political culture here.

What kind of political culture?

First of all it's positive, which is unusual in this kind of environment. And it's based on, "what are we doing today to move the ball forward?" Our polls have consistently shown over the past 11 years that when Hoosiers look outside their borders, the majority say, 'that's dysfunctional.' The numbers flip when you ask them about Indiana. They think we've got it together. And now we're taking that culture to D.C. with Vice President Pence, and he's surrounded by other Hoosiers like Mike Morgan, his general counsel. So now we have Hoosiers who are all a part of this culture moving throughout the country and doing big things.

8 Can you tell me a little about 1816 Inc.?
So it's made up of three Hendricks County guys, Matt Whetstone; Tyler Starkey and myself. Matt started it a year ago when he left Krieg DeValt, and I recently left Barnes and Thornburg to join him. And Tyler is a part-time defense attorney in Danville and part-time lobbyist who has really been doing a great job... We have a lot of experience between the three of us. This upcoming legislation will be my

Why are you stepping down as the Hendricks County GOP Party Chairman? This is my eighth year as county chairman and in a county like Hendricks it's a big job... I think in these volunteer positions it's good to get some fresh energy in there... I'm also running for District 4 (GOP) Chairman, which covers the fourth congressional district...

What made you want to run for district party chairman? My goal is to strengthen the connection between the county and state organizations. I noticed Hendricks County seems to be on an island. The relationship between the county and the state organizations has deteriorated because the state has not invested as much as they should have and I think our new state chairman, Kyle Hupfer, recognizes that. We went through a process the last 60 days of surveying county leaders and asking them what they wanted out of the state party. So we have a good plan going in. And the reason I want to run for District chair is so I can be a part of that state committee that goes and executes that plan... Compiled by Chris Cornwall
