Something scarier than ghost hunting....

HAUNTS & JAUNTS

By Rick Hinton

There are those times...scarier than any ghost story ever imagined. Events that can make a dark head of hair turn gray and stress levels peaking to new highs.

It is an event termed "Black Friday."

Black Friday, the shopping morning after Thanksgiving Day, has gained a presence over the years for the notoriety of bargains and "you'd better to there" once-in-a-lifetime finds. Are they really? No. You'll find the same bargains many times over in the weeks before Christmas. It's a media ploy used to incite rapid consumer draw to a world of sparkles and questionable one-time deals. It's the day after Thanksgiving. Most folks are at home and a slow news day. However Black Thursday, now we're talking!

While the Thanksgiving turkey is still warm from the oven, there are those who plan their strategy amongst the newspaper ads. Stores now open at 6 p.m. with exceptional deals. It is best to have a plan. The hubby may be horizontal and oblivious on the couch, but does that really matter? It's a game of chance. Who gets the best deals! That is, after all, the reason for the pursuit.

I remember a time (and I am old) when nothing was opened except for a few restaurants on Thanksgiving, and certainly no fast food joints or retail stores. How things have changed! Black Thursday makes some sort of sense-you're already awake and functioning. It's just a journey in the car; Black Friday, however-getting up insanely early and prepping for warfare-not so much. You are awakened by an alarm clock to indulge in the leftovers from Black Thursday. If you do happen to find your wish list, you pat yourself on the back and join the club: parking challenges, people in pajamas, long checkout lines, moody employees and sometimes fisticuffs. Nothing screams the holiday spirit more than this.

Last Thanksgiving I had a moment of insanity, finding a couple of items in an advertising circular that interested me. How bad could it be? It was 5:50 p.m. when Laura and I hit the Wal-Mart parking lot. The closest parking space was at least a quarter mile away. An army of bobbing heads and bodies waited at the entrance, ready for a mad dash once the doors opened. As I made one pass across the outer regions of the parking lot I looked over at Laura and said, "Oh hell no!" We turned onto US 31 and went home.

I think I will stick with ghost hunting. It's a saner use of my time!

Your town, your voice

As Perry Township residents stood around maps, graphs and posters showing data presented by the Indiana Department of Transportation on Monday night, many expressed their concern about the possibility of I-69 coming up State Road 37, from Martinsville to Indianapolis, through Perry Township. The wonderful thing about the information meeting - nothing is finalized. Nothing is set in stone. Regardless of which side you are on, pro or anti I-69 or somewhere in between, all members of the public had an opportunity to submit comments, questions and concerns for consideration. They still do as INDOT is accepting public comments for this stage of the process through Dec. 17.

The Southside, Perry Township in particular, has had a few public meetings this past week, presenting residents with opportunities to learn about, speak for or against issues pertaining to their community. A zoning hearing for a proposed methadone treatment clinic will take place Dec. 8. IN-DOT will a third public information meeting on Dec. 3, 7 p.m. at Martinsville High School.

We encourage you to go to these types meetings. If you don't have an opinion, that's okay. You'll learn something. You'll learn how these issues will have an impact on you, on your neighbors, on local businesses, schools and the community as a whole. Just show up. Form an educated opinion. Have a voice. Have an impact on what happens around you.

Top ten things I learned during all the holiday family gatherings

By Torry Stiles

10. Repo men work on Thanksgiving. Make sure you have that stove paid up.

9. If we weren't supposed to watch football then why is the couch right there?

8. If you don't like folks in the family just park at the end of the driveway and block everyone in. Built-in excuse to leave early.

7. Corelle plates can be broken. You just have to ask Uncle Mike his opinion of President Obama.

6. Sitting at the grown-up table loses its charm quickly when you discover how quickly any discussion turns into a litany of medical woes.

5. Old people smell funny and are easily entertained by non-electric devices. Get over it, junior.

4. Whoever said Nerf guns were harmless has never been whacked over the head with one.

3. It is perfectly normal for one's child to pretend he or she is a "kitty-cat" and to meow while at the table. It ceases to be normal about the age of eighteen.

2. Any "ruined" meat entree can be fixed with some hot sauce, garlic and the word "black-ened."

1. Wine improves with age. Whining does not.

Mike Treat

Beech Grove lieutenant connects community and police officers through outreach programs

BEHIND the BADGE

As his career as a police officer for the Beech Grove Police Department (BGPD) progressed through the years, Lt. Mike Treat said he wanted to continually become more active in the community, strengthening the police department by connecting the community to its police officers.

He did that by taking a leadership role in community outreach programs such as Shop With a Cop, National Night Out and a backpack drive. It started when he began helping organize Shop With a Cop three years ago, a program BGPD has participated in for 20 years.

"As my tenure progresses with these outreach programs we've been able to start up programs in the community," Treat said. "I think it's a great asset for the police department to be involved with the community as a whole. It lets the community know that the police care and we want to have a great working relationship."

Treat graduated from Center Grove High School in 1993 and joined the U.S. Army, 82nd Airborne. He served three years active duty and five years in the Army National Guard. He went to college to study criminal justice before getting hired to BGPD in March 2000.

He worked night shift for 10 years and was promoted to lieutenant in 2005. In addition to his current position as a day shift supervisor, Treat is a field training officer and leads many of the department's community programs. He currently resides in Franklin Township with his wife, Colleen and two children.

What was your inspiration to become a police officer?

I knew when I was a kid I wanted to become a police officer. The military instilled many values upon me that still hold true to this day. Loyalty, honor and integrity, to name a few, have inspired me to become the person I am today. As a police officer I can affect people's lives by being a positive role model. The young generation looks up to us and everyone in public service.

What has been one of your most gratifying moments on the job?

Knowing that as a police officer I am able to help people on a daily basis and make a positive impact on society. This is very rewarding to me. Specifically, seeing the faces of children light up when they get to spend the day with police officers during our annual Shop with a Cop event.

What aspect of the job do you find most challenging?

The fact of knowing that this is a very dangerous job, and you never know what could happen. I have to continue to hone my officer safety skills, so I can make it home to my family every day.

What do you enjoy doing in your off time?

I enjoy spending time with my wife and kids: weekends at the lake, camping, going to concerts and sporting events, and just relaxing.

What are your future goals both professionally or personally?

I want to continue to educate myself on a personal and professional level, and eventually move further up the ranks at the police department. I want to continue to make myself an asset to the police department, so that I can better serve the community.

What would you have done if you hadn't of became a police officer?

I probably would have continued in the insurance field and possibly started up my own business.

It's become an annual tradition. Police officers throughout the nation, including every department which protects the Southside, will take a day this December to spend time with local children, shopping for clothing and other things they would like to have for Christmas.

Shop With a Cop, Christmas for Kids and Clothe-A-Child are three programs in which local police departments will participate.

"A lot of officers will send me emails afterwards just thanking me for inviting them," said Patrick Etter, of Indiana State Police and president of Trooper Bartram Memorial Foundation which hosts Christmas for Kids. "That's one of the things that touch the heart more. Police officers want to help people. That's why they do this job. But they don't always get to do that because of the nature of the job, making arrests. They can go out here and not think about anyone doing anything wrong. They can go out and help people that appreciate the help."

Beech Grove Police Department has participated in Shop With a Cop for more than 20 years. This year on Dec. 12 officers will take children to Kmart in the morning, shop for clothing and gifts, then go over to Great Times where the officers and children will eat pizza and play games together. They provide for, on average, 35-38 children each year.

Greenwood along with the Johnson County Sheriff's Department and other Johnson County departments will participate in Shop With a Cop on Dec. 19, at the Greenwood Meijer.

Greenwood, Southport, Johnson County and Marion County Sheriff's Department are just a few that will participate in the Trooper Bartram Memorial Foundation and Helping Hands for Freedom's Christmas for Kids event on Dec. 5.

The memorial foundation hosts one fundraiser, a motorcycle ride in July, with all of the proceeds going to the Christmas for Kids program. The foundation is in honor of Indiana State Trooper Pat Bartram who was killed in 1998. Trooper Bartram always participated in the local Fraternal Order of Police's Shop With a Cop program. His sister, Kim, started raising money for the cause after he died, later forming the memorial foundation with Etter.

Christmas for Kids will allot $125 per child this year, providing for 140 children. The shopping event will take place at the Walmart on State Road 135 in Greenwood on Dec. 16.

The foundation checks to ensure the children that participate have a need and are not participating in any other police department's program. It allows each department to choose children from their own school systems to participate. Southport will sponsor 10 children from Perry Township schools.

"I'm really excited this year because we are going to have kids from Perry Township," said

Southport Police Chief Thomas Vaughn. "It's a great time for officers to give back to the community and show officer support."

Etter describes the scene as controlled chaos, with officers from all over central Indiana gathering at Walmart with more than 100 children and their parents.

"Usually we line up all of the shopping carts," Etter said. "When officers and kids come up, we pair them up. I invite the parents to mine. Some don't do that. The kids can be intimidated or scared, because it's still a police officer, a stranger. They're more at ease with their parents. Plus the parents already know what sizes they are. The officers are there to oversee. The officer will interact with the child more by taking the parent."

Indianapolis Metropolitan Police Department will participate in a Clothe-A-Child program on Dec. 16. Officers pick up the approximately 35 to 40 children and bring them to Hubler Chevrolet on U.S. 31 S., the event's sole sponsor, for breakfast.

"They are our angels," said Liz Allis, civilian event co-chair. "If we did not have Hubler Chevrolet, (the event) would be defunct right now. We need about $25,000 a year to run our program. It's not like a normal giveaway for Christmas. We make this an experience that is supposed to be remembered forever by these children. Last year not only did they give us some cash, but they also put on the Christmas party which was the best Christmas party ever for our kids."

The police escort the children in a paradelike fashion to JC Penney in Greenwood Park Mall to choose clothes and Shoe Carnival to purchase shoes. They return to Hubler Chevrolet for lunch, games, present delivery and pictures with Santa.

"The whole thing is an experience," Allis said. "All of this time, the kids are playing on the radios, playing with the sirens. These kids don't want to leave these officers. It's amazing to watch the transformation from morning to night. In the morning they're a little scared. By the time we leave, they're best buddies."

Acadia Healthcare petitions for zoning variance to relocate its methadone treatment clinic

FEATURE

By Nicole Davis

Community leaders and business owners gathered at an informal neighborhood meeting on Dec. 1 after questions and concerns were raised on a zoning petition for space at the Southgate Plaza Shopping Center. Acadia Health has requested a special zoning variance to relocate its methadone/opiate treatment clinic to the Southside.

Acadia Healthcare has operated Indianapolis Comprehensive Treatment Center at 2626 E. 46th Street since 1992. Tony Ruscella, director of business development, stated that they have outgrown the space, with no room to expand.

After looking at two other possible locations that meet their zoning and space criteria and conducting research on where their clients come from, they saw that 60 to 65 percent of their patients live on the Southside. That's why they are interested in leasing the 19,000 square-foot property at Madison and Hanna Avenues. The space is in between a Marion County probation office and a plasma center.

Acadia's Regional Vice President Tim Bohman explained that their mission is to "create a world-class organization that sets the standard of excellence in treatment of specialty behavioral health and addiction disorders."

"The ultimate goal for our patients is they enter treatment, they work at the program, they become a member of the community again and eventually we can get them drug free," he said. "Some patients will take longer than others, but the end goal is we get them back into their community, drug free. That's how our system is set up. That's why I'm passionate about what we do because it does save lives."

Acadia plans invest $2 million to renovate the inside and outside of the building while maintaining the outside façade to match the other businesses. Signs to advertise the business will remain small to maintain anonymity for the patients.

Those seeking treatment go to the clinic seven days a week initially. The Indianapolis facility sees in between 75 to 100 patients per hour, each staying less than five to 10 minutes unless they are doing counseling. It is open Monday through Friday, 5 a.m. to approximately 4:15 p.m. and early Saturday and Sunday mornings. There are security guards on site until 2 p.m.

"Seventy-five percent of our patients are actively employed and trying to get to a job," Bohman said. "They are not loitering or coming to hang out... When they're in treatment, that's one of the first things we work with them on, is that they are engaged, employed and helpful to the community."

Parking, security, employee qualifications, counseling, effectiveness of treatment, and what the business could potentially add to the community were some of the concerns addressed at the 90-minue meeting on Dec. 1. Attendees stayed afterward to talk one-onone with the four Acadia officials present.

"We want to bring in a quality of life that is more than what you're providing, even though you are providing a service for the community," said University of Indianapolis President Robert Manuel before leaving. "We're just at a point where we're about to succeed. Unfortunately I think your business prevents that more than it helps that. While there is an issue of addictions and helping folks recover from that, I think there may be other alternatives for you. So the university will come out in opposition to your variance request, as urgently as we can."

The zoning hearing was pushed from its original Nov. 18 date by City Councilor Jefferson Shreve to allow more time to address residents and business owners' concerns. The hearing is now scheduled for Dec. 8, 1 p.m. on the second floor of the Indianapolis City Council Chambers.

Acadia has the option to request a 30-day continuance up until the time of the meeting, but has expressed disinterest in doing so. Shreve and Ruscella mentioned that the community can add provisions to the rezoning agreement, things the company would have to do/abide by if approved such as beautifying the parking lot. The Southside Times will update this story at ss-times.com/acadia-zoning-variance.

Getting to know Donna...

I collect old cameras.

- I have 10 hours toward my pilot's license.
- · I have skydived.
- I have raced a stock car and I drive a 1996 Camaro with Sports Car Club of America (SCCA) in their Solo division driving a road course.

How Donna did it?

Best Advice: When I started my business my friend told me that if all possible not to have full time employees, to hire someone only when I need them. I have followed that advice and it has worked out.

Worst advice: I can't think of anything.

Best Business decision: Moving my studio to Greenwood and to Winchester Place.

In 5 years... I hope to be able to do my digital portrait painting full time.

Secret to Success: Business is business; do not take things personally.

Getting lost for photography in the darkroom and carries that through the digital age

By Nicole Davis

Donna Rice loves to get lost with her camera. She calls it her therapy, often being joined by her daughter to get in the car and drive without any direction in mind and photograph whatever they see.

Next year will mark 25 years since Rice chose to make photography her full-time business. Her passion for the industry is endless since the variety in her work keeps each day interesting.

"Someone asked me when I'd want to retire," Rice said. "I've never thought of retiring. It's just a great adventure."

Rice started taking pictures in fourth grade, using the family's camera until they bought her first 35 mm camera in high school. Her parents built her a dark room and she worked part time and babysat to furnish it. The first photo she developed was of her cat, Moe. The image hangs in her office at 300 N. Madison Avenue, Greenwood.

'The first time in the dark room when a picture appeared in the developer, I said I have to figure out how to do this," she said.

At age 17, with the encouragement from her Decatur Central High School photography teacher, she shot her first wedding. She says she still has the negatives from that event. After graduation, she says she knew exactly what she wanted to do.

"I decided I needed to go back to school," she said. "I didn't go back right out of high school because I said I'll be a photographer. I went back to school to be a programmer. I didn't use (the degree). I sat writing code and thought this is really stupid. But it helped me when the digital (photography) came because I wasn't afraid of computers. A lot of photographers closed because they didn't want anything to do with computers."

Rice did programming or photography for a few companies before deciding that she didn't want to go back to work for someone else. She began to read every business book that she could get ahold of. In 1991, she made Donna Rice Photography her full-time business.

"I sat and made cold calls to get into places," Rice said. "That was hard. I thought in order to go full time, I have to build my business fast. So I made cold calls to dance studios and preschools. I still have some of those preschool (clients)."

Rice has always photographed a little of everything: weddings and events, food, jewelry, nature or portraits. She switched to digital photography in 2003, although she purchased her first digital camera in 1997. The key to her sustained success, she said, is having flexibility and working around each client's needs.

"You have to be able to adapt with the times," she said. "That's what keeps you in business. Through transitioning between film to digital and the dreaded 2008 recession, I am thankful that I can be here and do this."

Rice lives on the southwest side of Indianapolis with her fiancé, Scott, in the house she grew up in. She has two children, Valerie and Dane. She is on the board for many organizations including the Indiana Professional Photographers Guild which runs the Indiana State Fair photography competition, Indianapolis Wedding Professionals Network and is a member of the Professional Photographers of America. As a member of the Greater Greenwood Chamber of Commerce, she often shoots photos for that organization. Networking has also been a vital component to her business, and has led to opportunities such as her getting asked to relocate her studio to the Win> chester Place property in Greenwood in 2010.

"Being here and in Greenwood, I love it," Rice said. "I pull in here, look across the pond and think I'm so lucky. There's always something new going on in the pond - turtles, praying mantis, heron. I like the city but I love being out in the country. Here, you get the best of both."

Even for an experienced photographer, Rice said there's always more to learn. She's currently going to class to study art and photography, how to use the Corel Painter program to turn photographed images into works of art.

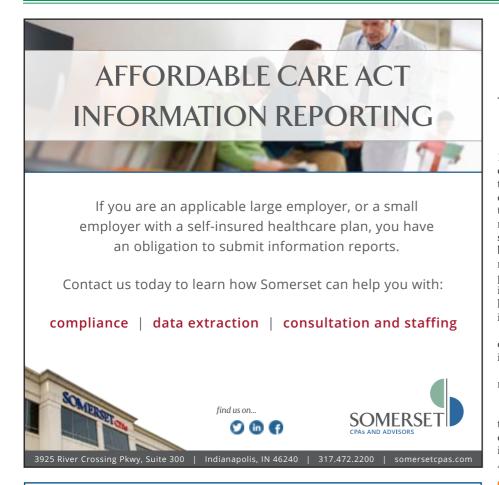

Although, even with all of the changes in the industry, there is one thing that she has enjoyed throughout her career.

"It's the interaction with people, doing something for them," she said. "When they come to pick up and I have their images set up for them. They turn to look at the pictures and I turn to look at them. To see the look on their faces, it makes my day."

you approach the challenge of a major change?

On a beautiful spring day in 1861, a crowd gathered in a northern American city. They were there to celebrate the decision of a group of men that had decided to volunteer for the American Army. An atmosphere of thrill and excitement surrounded the crowd. Politicians, business owners, ministers, the media, and others spoke words of praise and congratulations, promise and predictions. The men who had volunteered stood and basked in the attention.

Then, someone in the crowd, shouted a chant, a slogan in cadence. Everyone joined in.

"Remember Buena Vista! Remember Buena Vista! Remember Buena Vista!"

Those are the words they had in their head. In 2015, we know that this crowd was on the verge of one of the most horrific (and pivotal) wars in the American experience. Nothing like it had ever been experienced in the American nation. At a cost of nearly 700,000

That thoughts are in your head when lives and millions upon millions of dollars of destruction, the war changed so very much about what it meant to be an American.

Yet here they were, on this gorgeous day in 1861, chanting a threeword slogan pulled from an earlie moment of war. They thought that previous experience was helpful in knowing what to do next... they were wrong.

As a consulting leadership historian, I love the past and I love history, but part of their value is to remind us that a moment will come when, as Abraham Lincoln said, "The dogmas of the quiet past, are inadequate to the stormy present. The occasion is piled high with difficulty, and we must rise -- with the occasion. As our case is new, so we must think anew, and act anew. We must disenthrall ourselves, and then we shall save our country."

Remember Buena Vista.

OPEN FOR BUSINESS Furry flair

Toni Snow creates a fun environment for pets through Hippie Hounds Professional Pet Grooming

Toni Snow can't go many places with her poodle without getting stopped for photos. The tie-dyed pup captures attention - representing what Snow hopes to achieve through her business, Hippie Hounds Pet Grooming. Along with traditional pet grooming, she aims to add flair to the business and have fun with the pets.

"We try to make it fun, not just for ourselves but the animals," Snow said. "When the dogs are finished, they prance around. They're always happy when they're done."

Snow grew up in Greenfield and has been a Southside Indianapolis resident for 15 years. She graduated from Ivy Tech with a degree in Human Services but realized she'd rather work with animals.

She and her boyfriend, Chris Means, have three dogs. Snow said after her Shih Tzu kept receiving bad haircuts everywhere she took him, she decided to get her grooming license. She opened Hippie Hounds Professional Pet Grooming on the Southside of Indianapolis in April 2015. In addition to grooming, Hippie Hounds offers classes such as for obedience training and Canine Good Citizen classes which allow dogs to visit places such as nursing homes after they pass.

"Business has been really steady," she said. "I've only had maybe three slow weeks since April and we get new customers every week. I can talk openly to the customer and be very honest with them, make suggestions. I just love working with animals. It's rewarding. Especially when they come in looking really bad and you're making them feel better."

Why did you open this business?

I opened it after working at other shops. I realized how stressful it can be for pets as well as employees. I wanted to provide a more laid-back environment for the dogs, employees and myself.

What did you do to prepare for opening your business?

I left my old job and started working at home. I built up clientele that way. Once I grew out of the garage, where was a lot of thinking, planning and research. We thought things through clearly here. We tried to make is a fun, happy place to be. A lot of teamwork went into getting this place together.

Who is your ideal customer/client?

The people that truly care about their dogs and want to keep them clean and healthy. I want people that really care and want the best for their pets, and want their dogs to have the best treatment. I want people who realize their paying for their dogs to also not cooped up in a cage, they can roam around when they're done.

How do you plan to be successful?

Keep doing what I'm doing. I plan on continuing to grow. I'm selective about the people that work here. I want people that care as much about animals as I do, want to continue learning new things and want to grow with me.

What would we be surprised to learn about you or your company?

We specialize in special needs dogs. I get a lot of dogs other places can't or won't do.

PEER TO PEER Weekend at Bernie's

- for a presidential primary candidate, L and he is racking up big numbers. His name is Bernie. The Democratic debates are a forum as to see who can give the most free stuff away; yes, by taking from those of us who earned the cash to pay for stuff. For example, if student loans are considered by many economists to be a huge economic problem in this country, will it be better or worse if college education becomes free and the expense is now switched to the public sector? Worse! You and will I pay for the "free" education. This is just one example.

A lot of college kids spend their weekends attending rallies and listening to Bernie Sanders tell them how he would run the government on free stuff. When you listen on TV to Bernie's rallies, with thousands of screaming collage kids in attendance, he is seriously cynical about taking your money to pay for it all, even as to the percentage amount he proposes to take. He throws around percents like they were price checks at the checkout regis-

Howard Hubler COLUMNIST

Tor the first time, we are running a socialist ter at Kroger. Trust me, they exceed our current 39 percent. The frightening part is that Hilary is right behind him, and she is the likely heir to the democratic throne. Neither candidate has any time invested in a personal payroll of a legit business that has survived the test of time on the merits of their service, not their influence. They haven't a clue!

Whether you are a business person or just go to work every day, it is easy to understand today's Republican incumbent rage. What is more difficult to understand is the Democratic indifference to it all and their spirit of entitlement to more free stuff. By the way, I am not casting a net over all Democrats, but it was "their" debate about free stuff, after all, and "their" chosen topic, not mine. How much longer does the Democratic "lager" feel that we are just going to go to work and pay for more of their indifference? How long before the decent Democrat citizen rise up and says, "Enough already!"?

Art for All

Stacey Heltsley and Kelli Singlton provide artsy fun for everyone at uPaint Pottery Studion in Greenwood

By Nicole Davis

Stacey Heltsley and Kelli Singleton want to provide a place for families and friends to spend quality time together, creating a work of art that they can proudly display in their homes for years to come. They opened the second location of uPaint Pottery Studio in Greenwood to do just that for Southside and surrounding residents.

"Most of the people who come to uPaint to do a project, they're not necessarily artists," Singleton said. "They're everyday people who want to spend good quality time with their family and make something they can be excited about."

Singleton and Heltsley opened the first uPaint store in Plainfield in July 2013. After a year, they decided they wanted to expand and began looking for the right location. They opened uPaint on Smith Valley Road in Greenwood on Sept. 26.

"We're really excited to be out in the community, working with schools, and the businesses," Singleton said. "We want to embrace the community and get to know people. Either Stacey or I will be here every day going forward. We like to be here, interacting with customers."

Pottery projects start at $5 and up. The store also provides glass fusing starting at $9 and up. Customers can sit in the store and take their time creating their masterpiece and leave it behind for staff to finish in the kiln or fuse together.

"My favorite thing has been seeing people's faces when they come back," Singleton said. "When you paint, the glazes going onto the pottery are a little duller than when they come out. When it comes out everything is shiny and bright. It's cool to see their reaction when they see the finished product."

PERSONNEL MATTERS The what, when, why and where of the problem

Mike Heffner COLUMNIST

Recently, my company took on a large new project. It brought me all the way back to when we first opened our office – everything was new and every detail needed to be figured out for the first time.

What I learned, as I have grown as a leader, is that things will go wrong. Our job, as a leader, is to effectively troubleshoot those problems and teach others how to do the same. The solution behind most problems is to break it down in to pieces and analyze.

• What is the problem? Sometimes it's not always obvious and what seems to be the real problem really isn't. But it's simple- you can't fix something if you don't understand the entire situation.

Why does it exist? Is this a minor issue or a major deal? You have to step back and decide if this is something that in order to meet our goals, we need to dive into. You don't want to have a reoccurring hiccup become a major problem and derail you in the midst of a large project.

• Where is the problem actually happening? This isn't always obvious- what it looks like on the surface may not be the case. Quite often, the issue is up stream in the chain of events that have already happened. Normally, this is contributed to a communication breakdown.

• When is the problem happening? When troubleshooting, it could only happen when the workload is high or when something else is going on at the same time. The when starts to look for commonality and allows you to start ruling things out.

With all four of these items, you can usually step back and diagnose the real issue. Then, you can look for a good solution, i.e. training, change in equipment or different timing. Build a culture that looks for a total solution and eliminates future problems. I have found that teaching my team to gather all the facts might take a few minutes longer, but in the long term, it saves time and money.

Which route?

INDOT hosts first public information meeting since narrowing down to five possible I-69 routes

FEATURE

The Indiana Department of Transportation held its first of three public meetings about section 6 of the I-69 project, the section from Martinsville to Indianapolis, at Perry Meridian High School on Nov. 30.

This was the first meeting INDOT held since narrowing the possible I-69 routes from 14 to five. Displays were set up in a semicircle throughout the gymnasium, showing maps of the possible routes, all stemming from State Road 37 in Martinsville. The purpose of the meeting, officials said, was to inform the public about the process, what decisions have been made and what's next. "Public involvement is an incredibly important aspect of any of our processes, but especially for the environmental impact study," said Sarah Rubin, project manager.

She said the next step is to narrow these five routes down to one, where the recommendation will be presented in 2017. IN-DOT is looking as the route which performs best across cost to construct, performance and environmental impact.

Everyone is invited to submit comments, questions and concerns to INDOT by Dec. 17. Email section6pm@indot.in.gov or visit in.gov/indot/projects/i69/2463.htm.

Franklin Central's Nick Adams-Motley Kale cook

Franklin Central High School participated in the farm to school initiative by planting kale seeds donated by the Purdue Extension office. The kale was planted this fall and harvested in mid November. Junior Nick Adams-Motley currently attends the Central Nine Career Center and is studying culinary arts. He is interested in becoming a chef and has plans to attend either the Chefs Academy in Indianapolis or the nationally renowned Culinary Institute of America in New York after high school graduation.

Lisa Ford, district wellness committee co-chair, worked with Nick as he researched kale recipes. He ultimately decided on making sauteed kale using this produce.

Art from Franklin Township native Steve Deckard Deckard

FOR SALE at Miss B's in downtown Wanamaker

Steve Deckard was born a Hoosier in 1951 and has been an Indiana resident all his life. He grew up in Wanamaker and graduated from Franklin Central High School in 1969. Steve and wife Weezie (Louise) have resided in Franklin Township for over thirty-five years. Working at Allison Transmission Inc. for thirty-seven years, the last twenty-seven as a journeyman carpenter, he often would pick up a piece of wood at dinner time and start doodling while he ate. This is why so man of his pen and ink sketches are on wood. Steve also cuts his own matts and makes is own frames out of a variety of materials. While growing up, he was always interested in doodling with a pencil. One of the first things he remembers learning to draw was "The Deckard Dog," a picture that he was taught to draw by his dad Bob Deckard. All the Deckard children, grandchildren and now great grandchildren have or are learning to draw this family favorite. Among Steve's favorite subjects are old pelicans. Visit Miss B's in downtown Wanamaker this December to see and purchase Steve's artwork.

St. Mark school collects 14,525 items in food drive

St. Mark Catholic School's students, staff, parents and parishioners collected 14,525 food items in their 5th annual Food Drive to end hunger in our community. The food items were donated to the Officer David Moore Food Pantry, Hunger Inc. and Little Sisters of the Poor. St. Mark Catholic School students are shown loading boxes of food items. St. Mark Catholic School is located at 541 East Edgewood Ave. This is one of the many service projects that are done each year at St. Mark Catholic School.

Be the watcher of your fork

NUTRITION

By Chef Wendell Fowler

Ho, ho, ho! It's the joyous holiday season when almost everyone will be donning their fat pants and strapping on the ole holly jolly feed bag as traditional merriments commence. Will you overcome unbridled temptation or end up in a sugar plum food coma?

Face it, the more you tell yourself you can't have something, the more you'll crave it, so go ahead. Although, swept up in the romance and emotion of the holidays combined with value-diminishing intoxication, it's easy to forget portion control. The brain overrules our temple's' signals to stop eating even when we know the consequences will be unkind.

The intention you can put out to the heavens is you'll eat (almost) everything you like, but in smaller, saner portions. Mindless grazing combined and cocktailing insults your temple. When you're eating, do you hear what your body is trying to tell you? Feeling bloated, got heartburn, boisterously flatulent; rapid heartbeat, sweating or faintness? Well then, drop the 14th chicken wing and back away from the buffet. Your temple is screaming for attention.

The most important behavior: portion control - eat everything, but in smaller portions. Be the watcher of your fork. Make mindful decisions. Be present in those decisions. "Do I really need a 4th pecan pie ala mode?" Slow down for goodness sakes...take a few breathes between mouthfuls. Chat and genuinely listen to your companion. No one is going to take your plate away.

Avoid temptation. Don't leave enticing goodies around the house all week. And beware the office bully. There's always someone who wants you to join them in their death-defying attempt to eat everything in sight. Be strong.

The holidays are challenging for anyone in control of their health destiny. For others, it's an excessive, all-you-can-eat gluttony festival ending up in weight gain, clogged arteries, dehydration, a stressed out pancreas, an exhausted digestive system begging for a break, or the "OMG what-did-I-do-last" night lamp shade on the head.

Finally there are holiday heart attack factors at play in the form of emotional stress, less sleep, excessive booze binging, ditching the exercise routine and the inevitable weight gain. Feeding your temple: home of the Beloved Son, is a sacred act. Show love for the birthday boy and feeding your holy temple the gift of clean food...in reverent moderation. Get rest, sleep deeply, eat more plant foods and be present in your decisions.

Franklin Township family receives a patio makeover

Simonton Windows & Doors, a nationwide provider of vinyl windows and patio doors, in partnership with This Old House, an Emmy-winning home improvement series and brand, completed a patio makeover for a Franklin Township, Indianapolis homeowner who won the Party on the Patio contest. The homeowner, Courtney Jennings, received a $10,000 patio makeover and a new Simonton Inovo patio door.

The contest asked participants to submit a photo of their existing patio and how they would use the $10,000 to improve their outdoor living space. Jennings learned she was the contest winner in October and the process of transforming her patio was underway. Indianapolis area contractors, G & C Ramsey Construction Inc., were chosen to complete the patio makeover which included installing the new Inovo patio door, re-building the deck and creating a pergola for Jennings' outdoor space. In addition to winning a patio makeover, Jennings received $1,000 to throw a party on her newly transformed patio.

The complete patio makeover will be featured on ThisOldHouse.com beginning in December.

The Night Before... too familiar

MOVIE REVIEW

By Adam Staten

I don't know about you, but there just seems something undeniably wrong with getting Santa and his eight reindeer out prior to Thanksgiving. Regardless, it feels as if retailers begin propping up their Christmas displays earlier and earlier with each passing year. Hollywood has also started releasing their Christmas-themed films earlier and earlier, hoping to cash in during the holiday season. One Christmas-themed film that hit theaters several weeks before Saint Nicholas makes his trip is The Night Before, starring Seth Rogen.

The Night Before is the story of three friends who have an annual tradition of using Christmas Eve as an opportunity to celebrate the season with a less than sober night out on the town. However, the three amigos annual tradition of a Christmas Eve filled with drugs and booze appears to be quickly drawing to an end with the demands of life keeping each exceedingly busy. One is only a few weeks from becoming a father (Rogen) and another has obtained success and fame as a professional football player. However, one (Joseph Gordon-Levitt) of the three still does not have things figured out. He hopes of a musical career that has yet to materialize, he lives alone and has recently broken up with his girlfriend. Little do they know that despite some pretty insane circumstances,

BEHIND BARS

Apple Spice Grog

Bartender: Bridgette Cooper

Location: McGilverys Taphouse 8249 US-31 Indianapolis, IN 46227

Ingredients and directions: In a 16 oz. glass with ice add 1 ½ oz. DeKuyper Sour Apple Pucker, 1 ½ Fireball Cinnamon Whisky, 1 ½ oz. hard cider, and 1 oz. apple juice. Garnish with an apple slice.

each eventually come to grips with their impending futures, filled with change and uncertainty.

While The Night Before is classified as a comedy, the laughs, for the first third of the film, are few and far between. It's not until one of the three pick up the wrong phone that the laughs start and even then the jokes are hit and miss. Seth Rogen, try as he might, delivers some mildly funny scenes, but is not nearly as funny here as in previous films. However, Michael Shannon, as an odd and mysterious drug dealer, is an absolute scenestealer, providing a huge chunk of the laughs.

A lot like the jokes, the story is very much been-there-done that. Besides a couple of surprise cameos, there just is not a whole lot different that helps the story differentiate itself from similar films. The story and jokes feels old and tired and the-over-thetop attempts at humor from Rogen just don't work.

While The Night Before does deliver an occasional bout of laughter, it's certainly not a laugh riot. The jokes and the story are too familiar too often. 2.5 out of 5.

Adam Staten lives in Perry Township and is a movie buff. Staten araduated from University of Southern Indiana with a dearee in Communication Studies.

"Why standest Thou afar off, O Lord? why hidest Thou Thyself in times of trouble?" ~Psalm 10:1

Sometimes it appears that God is on vacation or taking a nap. Sometimes it seems that our prayers are having no impact on Him at all. I have a couple of friends who are battling tumors on their brains. It was discovered that one of them has at least 14 more tumors than they originally thought. The other friend has cancer throughout his body now. It seems hopeless. Both are Christians and for the redeemed, it is never hopeless. What next? I don't know but there is always something. isn't there? But the beauty of it is that when one is saved it really doesn't matter much whether they live here or live over in eternity. As one man that I was ministering to years ago told his son, "Either way it goes, I have the best of both worlds". This man had given his heart to Christ just a few hours earlier.

God is not dead and heaven is for real and life is what it is. Life here brings us challenges that are overwhelming here but will only bring laughter in heaven.

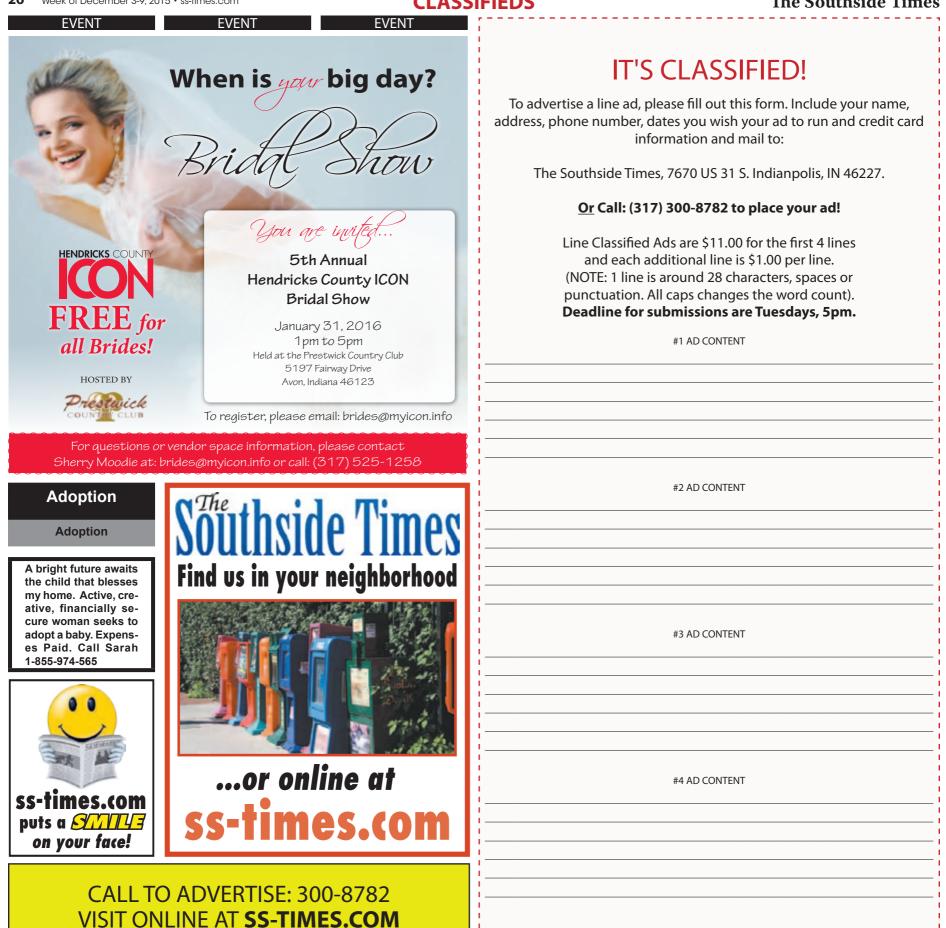

How much of this life we will recall once we get home to our Father in heaven, I cannot say. But, what I can say is that all that we go through here and take so seriously here will only be a triviality there. It will be like a serious toothache: serious at the moment but once gone, soon forgotten.

God bless and go and have a great day.

Paul A. Kirby is the pastor at the Church of God at 3939 S. Emerson Ave.
