The mean times

HAUNTS & JAUNTS

By Rick Hinton

Let's face it; some people are just plain mean. Some people are just plain evil! Crime is where we currently stand in the city of Indianapolis. There are daily personal assaults upon folks who want nothing more than to live their life in some semblance of security. We all have dreams of where life will take us, yet, sometimes these dreams are shattered.

How does the paranormal affect these rashes of activity? Many feel there is a correlation between the two. I'm beginning to...

During my brief tenure with the Marion County Sheriff Dept's patrol of the infamous Beat 19 on the far Eastside of Indianapolis I became immersed in a world I didn't know existed. There was a sense of innocence lost that visibly jarred me. During these patrols it became a nightly game to head off potential problems before they escalated into larger ones. And it didn't always work. We took on the task of peacemakers in a surreal, Wild West scenario. The 'mean' ones living in this area didn't care...it had gone beyond that. Beat 19 had become an Alamo of sorts, with good folks who, by circumstances, had to live in this environment and etch out their own personal walk through life.

It's hard to to embrace a safe, secure and happy existence when you live in the Alamo—or any other high crime area of the city. It's a daily battle just to survive, and not making for fond memories to share in the future.

I write on the paranormal. Sometimes demonic influences, and even possession, factor into the articles. What drives a person to become a harbinger of evil? Is it solely a product of their environment? And how does this relate to the current crime rate in Indianapolis? Are there instances where a demonic entity takes over a person, changes rational thought and twists every fiber of humanity to produce a soul-less killer? Does the devil make us do it? It may be a stretch, but in the last couple of years I have come around to believe that could be a possibility.

Is the spirit of dearly departed Aunt Edna really her, or an imposter? And for what reason? Could this very same force give a nudge to those of a mean mindset to take the next step into their own personal world of darkness? Good people can, and do, come out of a bad environment. It happens.

It's called taking a stand for what is right and returning to the God of your youth!

OUR VIEW

Taking a stroll through the Southside

Walkability is a term we hear more and more as each year passes. The ability to walk from one destination to another, for necessity or leisure, is something people look for in their neighborhoods, and something the Southside certainly needs help improving upon. From our Southside Times office, we see people walking down U.S. 31 S., a busy road with no sidewalks even near the city bus stops. We have heard people commenting that they want more sidewalks along Madison Avenue or State Road 135 particularly near Perry Meridian High School.

Indy Walkways, indywalkways.org, is an initiative to make Indianapolis more walkable and encouraging more people to get out and stroll around their communities. It is creating a master plan for Marion County that will promote walking and is comprised of The City of Indianapolis, Marion County Public Health Department and members of the Health by Design coalition.

So we were surprised to hear that when Indy Walkways sponsored its first survey asking residents where the city could improve upon its sidewalks and where sidewalks are needed, less than a handful of respondents were from the Southside.

Indy Walkways will begin hosting open houses, with one on the Southside on Feb. 27, 10 a.m. to 12 p.m. at the Chin Community Center, 2524 E. Stop 11 Rd. We fully agree that Indianapolis, particularly the Southside, needs more sidewalks. We'd love to hear about more representation from the Southside in the upcoming planning. Tell us, what do you think of the issue and what areas would the addition of sidewalks be most useful or even crucial?

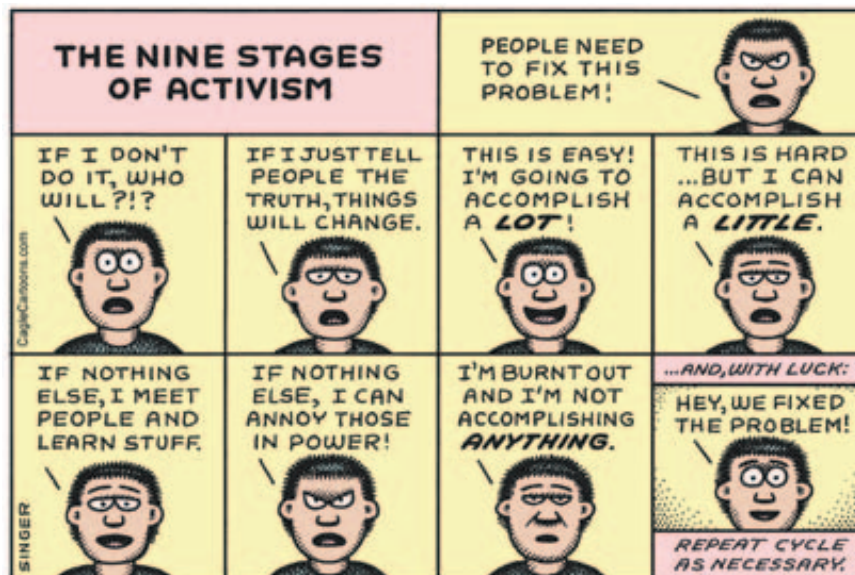

BELIEVE IT!

Our nation has all sorts of arcane, nonsensical laws on the books. Each week, we'll share one with you...

In Reno, Nev., it is illegal to lie down on the sidewalk. - dumblaws.com

Mount Pleasant Christian Church hosts its first Night to Shine

By Nicole Davis

As they entered Mount Pleasant Christian Church in Greenwood for Night to Shine on Feb. 12, guests walked down the red carpet in their best formal attire, being cheered on by paparazzi.

Night to Shine is a prom experience for people age 16 and older with special needs sponsored by the Tim Tebow Foundation. More than 200 churches host the event worldwide in 48 states and seven countries. Mount Pleasant had approximately 235 guests ages 16 to 74 and 450 volunteers from across Indiana.

"This might be one of the best events I've been a part of here," said Chad Ranson, Mount Pleasant serve pastor. "Just look at how much fun everyone is having. We're all celebrating together. It's good for our church and it's good for our community. We are going to look back at this with great excitement."

The evening included music, dancing, dinner, karaoke, games, photos and more. Guests were treated to free nail and hair services, dinner and party favors including a framed prom picture. Each attendee was paired with a volunteer for the evening, allowing caregivers to have the evening off with a dinner provided at the church. Halfway through the evening, participants were all crowned King and Queen of prom.

A Fresh View

By Nicole Davis

What does a high quality of life mean to you? Having a walkable neighborhood? Easy access to fresh food? Good health care? More local businesses?

In October, Scarlett Andrews Martin started interviewing and encouraging Southside residents to take surveys and participate in interviews to discover what is most important to people living along the Madison Avenue/Shelby Street Corridors. That information will be used to form and implement a Quality of Life Plan, focusing on how to improve the 4.25 square-mile area bound by Raymond Street, I-65, I-465 and Meridian Street.

The University of Indianapolis, Fifth-Third Bank, Indianapolis Neighborhood Housing Partnership (INHP) and Local Initiatives Support Corporation (LISC) partnered in 2015 to lead the Quality of Life Plan. Fifth-Third gave a $100,000 grant to fund the project. A steering team was formed with approximately 20 members consisting of elected officials, and neighborhood and community leaders.

Martin began working for the project as a community builder in August, tasked to collect a minimum of 100 resident interviews. She not only gained input for the study, but attended neighborhood meetings and social events to build relationships with people who make up the community. Having just moved to Indianapolis in May, Martin said it was a different way to learn about the city.

"I am unique among community builders in that I'm not from this area," Martin said. "I started from scratch in building those relationships. I've learned a huge amount on the history of this area. I've been able to go to every meeting and interview with a fresh perspective as to what people can bring to the process... I've been involved, particularly in Garfield Park, in a way you don't get to do at another job. It's fun to hear people think big and have exciting ideas for their area."

By the end of December, the study accumulated 108 interviews, 100 online surveys and 268 university-based interviews.

Martin said, "We asked what you like about your neighborhood. What would you like to see change? What opportunities do you see for positive change and what threats do you see to that type of development? You get that information and it spans to all categories of quality of life. There are a number of issues that have come up."

She said those issues include public safety, health care, a clean environment, access to fresh food, education, additional businesses, public transportation and the future of the Red Line coming down Shelby Street and development along Shelby Street. She said the most positive feedback was a love of Garfield Park and its green space, but residents want to see more trails, bike paths and additional walkability in the area.

"All that information feeds into our visioning summit," Martin said. "Our first visioning summit will be our big opportunity for residents and business owners to participate in the Quality of Life Study."

The Southside Quality of Life Visioning Summit is Feb. 27, 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at St. Roch Catholic School, 3603 S. Meridian St., Indianapolis. Breakfast and lunch will be served and childcare is available. Additional sponsors of the summit are Community Health Network, Strategic Capital Partners, Riley Area Development, Big Car Collaborative and Garfield Park Neighbors Association.

"It's a very unique opportunity to participate in the democratic process of community development," Martin said. "It doesn't come around very often. It's an incredible opportunity for the Southside to see a huge amount of investment. If you want to have a say in that investment and how things are improved, this is that chance."

During the visioning summit, participants will form into breakout sessions to brainstorm ideas, what needs to be done for each quality of life issue. After the summit, they will form action teams with members committing to volunteer a couple times a month to work on a plan, creating progress steps and a timeline. Martin said they intend to reveal the plan this summer.

"It is important to note that this is a plan created by our entire community," said UIndy President Robert Manuel.

"The university is happy to play a part in the coordination of this work, and we will support the study once it is completed. The key is to connect our community members with our elected officials to address the issues that face this part of the city."

To RSVP to the Visioning Summit, email scarlettashlen@gmail.com or call (317) 602-3613. For more information, visit facebook.com/shelbystreetqlp.

John Dean

Greenwood battalion chief said there is something special about working in a department with such a high standard of excellence

BEHIND the BADGE

From day one, John Dean said he has been pushed out of his comfort zone while working with the Greenwood Fire Department.

"If you know many firemen, you know we're driven individuals and enjoy the challenge of the unexpected nature," he said. "When the bell rings, you don't know what they're going to say. Over time, you come to understand what most calls will be like, but you never know what you're going to get. That was a rush to a new guy, to come into an environment where I was totally green. I was lucky to have gracious and caring firefighters who would help me understand what was going on and lay down a good foundation. That's what I love about the job is the challenge, the variation."

Dean grew up in Perry Township, graduating from Southport High School. He was hired part time to the Greenwood Fire Department in 2001, then full time in 2003. He was promoted to lieutenant in 2006, the year Greenwood opened its newest fire station. In '09 he was put in charge of the department's dive team. In June 2013 he was promoted to his current rank of battalion chief. Dean said he is happy to have found a career at GFD.

"Not only was this the first place I got hired as a part-time guy, but there is something special about this department," he said. "There always has been. There is a really long history; we just celebrated our 125th anniversary last year. That tradition and high standard of excellence has been passed down. It's a demanding place to work but it's a place you strive to be a part of... We have a good mix of small town, even rural areas on the outskirts of town, yet we're fairly busy. For a suburb, we have a decent size population and a good mix of residential, commercial and industrial. That's a challenging environment to work in because there is a lot you have to know and be prepared for."

What has been one of your most gratifying moments on the job?

Helping people is both the most rewarding and difficult part. You get to show up in people's moment of need and many times it's one of the worst days of their life. You get the opportunity to change that or stop it from getting worse.

What aspect of the job do you find most challenging?

Seeing people hurting whether it be from physical or emotional pain. Those moments in people's lives that maybe happen once in a lifetime, an injury or car accident, whatever would cause us to be called to help them, we see that all of the time. It does take its toll on you when you see people hurting. We're trained to deal with that, but we (also) have the comradery and brotherhood of the fire service and knowing you're going through those experiences with other people helps a lot.

What do you enjoy doing in your off-time?

I'm married and have two young children, age 6 and 9. My wife works full time so my job the last nine or so years on my off days I take care of the kids, get them ready for school. I'm a runner so I also spend a lot of time running.

What are your future goals, professionally or personally?

I don't have an ultimate position I'd like to obtain. The rank of battalion chief is enough responsibility for a lifetime. I'm more than satisfied with the position I have now... Personally, I want to be a good husband and father. When you have children you realize that time goes so fast and they age so quickly. I am really focused in on my family... Focusing on what's important: my faith, family and my job.

What would you have done if you hadn't become a firefighter?

I originally wanted to be a history teacher, college professor. I still have a passion for reading and understanding history.

Compiled by Nicole Davis

What was your inspiration to become a firefighter?

I was in college, wanting to be a history teacher. I had gotten to know some guys in the school that were not sure if that was the direction we wanted to go or not. One mentioned he was going to enroll in an EMT class at a local hospital. It was something new I never considered before. I got my foot in the door with the EMS side. I finished an EMT class at Community Hospital. I got to know some firefighters in the EMT class, learned about the fire service and started going through the hiring process.

Dental care needed for your pet

PAWS for THOUGHT

By Dr. Jeff Ambrous

Your pet's teeth are obviously very important for his or her nutrition, but also to general health and well-being. A little bit of "doggie breath" is understandable. After all, pet food doesn't smell the best to us humans. But, bad breath can also be a sign of poor dental health and infections. Plaque and tartar are a great place for bacteria to live and multiply. (This is where the smell comes from.) Not only does a dental infection affect the teeth and gums, but it can also spread to other locations in the body and become a much more serious problem if left untreated. The best plan for your pet's long lasting health is periodic dental cleanings. This will require a mild sedation so that we can inspect and clean all tooth surfaces above and below the gum line. If left untreated this infection can cause loose teeth, enamel erosion and lost teeth. In severe cases, general health can be affected. Dental disease can potentially affect the heart, kidneys and other organs.

Dental health can be enhanced with regular brushing (just like we do). But, be sure to use a pet toothpaste and not one made for people.

We recommend that your pet's teeth be checked regularly with routine exams and more often as needed to make sure that he or she is healthy and will have the longest and happiest life possible.

Chin National Day celebrations kick off with traditional wrestling competition

The North American Paih Committee held its annual Paih (wrestling) celebration on Feb. 13 at the Old National Center in downtown Indianapolis, allowing community members to participate in an amateur wrestling match before the main competition with wrestlers from around the world. Approximately 5 – 700 guests were in attendance as 36 contestants competed in the wrestling match. The winner of the professional competition was Rung Llan Ceu from Amarillo, Texas, winning $6,000 and World Championship belt. Paih is a traditional Chin sport customarily done in correlation with Chin National Day. Wrestlers have a belt tied around their waist. Opponents have to hold onto the others belt and try to pin each other to the ground in a particular way. The person with the best of three rounds moves on to the wrestle the next contestant.

A taste of culture

Chin National Day celebration brings Burmese music, dance, food and fashion to Southside Indianapolis

FEATURE

By Nicole Davis

Chin National Day, Feb. 20, commemorates the foundation of the Chin state in Burma in 1948, after the country became independent. It's a day to reflect on the past, but to also look ahead and envision where the Chin community sees themselves in their Indianapolis home, said Elaisa Vahnne, executive director of the Burmese American Community Institute (BACI).

"I personally believe that the Chin National Day celebration is a significant event for immigrants of Chin nationalities around the world in maintaining and strengthening its unique, wonderful, and beautiful cultural identity," said Lian Sang, program director for BACI, continuing, "and for it to be shared with the younger generations and also with the neighboring communities through lovely cultural dresses, songs, dances, food, other traditional sports and activities. Soon, most of this generation and all of the next ones will become productive citizens of their new countries and it is important that their culture values are maintained and passes on to the younger generations for successful integration with other communities."

Indianapolis has the largest population of Chin refugees in the nation. Chin National Day celebrations began Feb. 13 with a Paih (wrestling) competition. On Feb. 20, 1:30 – 5 p.m., thousands of people will gather at the Southport Life Center, 4002 E. Southport Rd., for songs, dances, special guests, food and a cultural costume show.

"It's a great event, for everyone from kids to all citizens to come and have a taste of a different culture, traditional dancers, songs, displays, food and music," Vahnne said. "This is a very family-friendly event. It's great to just come and mingle with different people. We have two to three thousand people. It's quite big."

Vahnne, however, be in Dallas, Texas on Feb. 20 where he has been invited as a special guest speaker. Texas has the second largest Chin population in the U.S.

"It's an honor and a privilege to be invited to have the opportunity to send the Chin message," Vahnne said. "It's important that we realize that we live in the land of opportunity and freedom. The U.S. is considered to be a system of government that ... encourages the rights and freedoms of individuals and treats everyone the same. How can we exercise our liberty in a meaningful, responsible way and build a community that contributes to society? We (should) go to college, get an education, work hard and give back to our community. We have always said the best way to build our future is to invest in people and education. That message is the theme we will be sending."

What is fair may be far from equal: Division of property in a divorce

LEGAL

By Sergey Grechukhin of Kirtley, Taylor, Sims, Chadd & Minnette, P.C.

Over the last several decades, the number of first time marriages ending in a divorce has steadily increased. It is especially true for younger couples without children. Many of my clients fall in this group, and the main questions they ask frequently concern the division of property issues. The biggest misconception many of my clients have is a belief that all the marital property must be divided equally in a divorce. This is frequently not the case.

A couple making their own agreement can divide assets in whatever way they see fit, and it is not uncommon for one spouse to walk away with a majority of the assets. If the parties cannot agree however, the court will make the decision for them. Under Indiana law, the court initially presumes that equal division of property is fair; however, such presumption may be defeated if one party demonstrates that equal division would not be just and reasonable under the circumstances. Once one party challenges the presumption, the court typically considers several factors to determine whether an equal property division is appropriate. In dividing the property, among other factors, the court considers the contribution of each spouse to the acquisition of the property; the extent to which the property was acquired by each spouse before marriage or through inheritance or gift; the economic circumstances of each spouse at the time of the divorce; the conduct of the parties during the marriage as related to disposition or dissipation of their property; and future earning ability of the parties. The court will also consider any tax consequences of the property division on the present and future economic circumstances of each spouse. Based on these and other factors, a final determination of a fair property division may be far from fifty-fifty.

"Because this is what I believe – that second chances are stronger than secrets. You can let secrets go. But a second chance? You don't let that pass you by!" ~ When You Were Here, by Daisy Whitney

Thanks to laws passed in July of 2013, Indiana residents with a criminal record have a chance to redeem themselves. Public records from past criminal charges and convictions can now be expunged and sealed. This can allow people to obtain meaningful employment and not be continually held back by past mistakes.

Here are some facts about these new laws:

The laws require a waiting period. If you were charged with a crime and the charges against you were dismissed, or you were found to be not guilty at a trial, all of the records of your arrest and court proceedings can be expunged and sealed after one year.

If you were convicted of a misdemeanor offense, your record may be expunged and sealed after a five year wait. Examples of misdemeanor convictions are operating while intoxicated, possession of marijuana, public intoxication, and shoplifting. If you were convicted of a more serious felony offense, the waiting period ranges from eight to 10 years.

There are certain offenses that are not eligible for expungement. Homicides, sex offenses, or offenses involving official misconduct are not eligible.

It is possible to remove multiple charges with one expungement petition. However, the law allows you only one shot at expungement. This means that you must be sure to get all eligible offenses on one petition.

If you are successful with an expungement petition, you don't have to reveal the offenses on job applications. Potential employers are not allowed to refuse employment on the basis of an expunged record. Any civil rights that have been withheld from a person because of his or her criminal record are to be restored upon expungement. Certain convictions prevent a person for obtaining a gun permit, but you become eligible following a successful expungement.

The process for expunging criminal records can be complicated. You need to get it right the first time. My associate, Andrew Noone, and I have already helped many people with expungement petitions. We would be happy to discuss expungement with you during a free consultation. Don't let your past hold you back!

How to Be Single... Terribly directed mess

MOVIE REVIEW

By Adam Staten

Valentine's Day is that time couples feel compelled to purchase one another catastrophically overpriced flowers, a heart-shaped box of chocolates or some other cliché gift. In addition to increased demand for roses, and some of the worst tasting chocolate ever created, theaters also succumb to the season of forced displays of affection. Films depicting infatuated couples who've "fallen in love" begin to populate theaters. The new film, How To Be Single, takes this overused story template and comes at it from another angle, or tries to, at least.

How To Be Single is a romantic-comedy about a young woman, Alice (Dakota Johnson), on the verge of graduating from college who breaks up with her boyfriend out of the blue. Her reasoning for ending the relationship: she wants to give herself time to be alone and find herself. A couple weeks later and she's a paralegal at a New York City law firm. To help her adjust to the single life, Alice spends an inordinate amount of time pouring her heart out to her older sister, Meg. Alice also hits the club scene with a loud and brash co-worker, Robin (Rebel Wilson). Together the three women help one another as they each attempt to navigate life in NYC as they all undergo some pretty dramatic changes, getting themselves in a handful of outrageous predicaments in the process.

The three characters named in the summary are whom the film essentially revolves around. However, there are several other, less important characters that are wholly unnecessary, and do nothing but bog down and slow the progression of How To Be Single with some useless subplot. This issue is a reflection of the film's biggest flaw: the horrendous direction. Instead of developing the characters and the story at the center of the film, new characters are added nearly every other scene. The number of characters and storylines happening at once gets so ridiculous that it starts resembling Garry Marshall's Valentine's Day and New Year's Eve.

For a film that's supposedly a romantic-comedy, it never succeeds at either, let alone both. Instead, there are smatterings of laughs courtesy, almost entirely, of Rebel Wilson and not much on the romantic side of things. The film is entirely unsure of what it is and so are audiences.

How To Be Single is not a good film, not even close. It's a muddled, poorly written and terribly directed mess. 1.5 out of 5.

Big Daddy's Bar & Grill

The scoop: Big Daddy's Bar & Grill is a popular neighborhood bar and grill in the South Village neighborhood. Located south of Raymond Street adjacent to the Pleasant Run Waterway, this establishment is a great place to meet with friends and watch a ball game with friends. Start off with one of several appetizers: Big Daddy's Pot Roast Nachos, a fresh baked pretzel, Big Daddy's Polish Mistakes, quesadillas, chicken tenders, or thick cut potato slices. For the main course, you can choose from burgers, pizza, soups, salad, steaks, pasta or seafood. The hand breaded tenderloin or grilled tenderloin are favorites. If you are on a date you may want to order the tenderloin for two. Big hunger? Go for the Double Big Daddy Burger with four ½ pound black angus patties. Pizza? Where do you like to dine? China Gourmet.

What do you like to eat there?

I go in and I'll ask them what is good today? It is always 'everything' which is true. I usually get lo mein or chicken and vegetables but they will tailor it to whatever you want. If you want chicken with broccoli, they will fix you chicken with broccoli. I will change it up and they are always accommodating.

What do you like about this place? It is small and they are very quick. The food comes out piping hot. It is not like a buffet. They prepare everything how you want it.

Weekly Devotion

"Beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth, is mount Zion, on the sides of the north, the city of the great King. God is known in her palaces for a refuge. For, lo, the kings were assembled, they passed by together. They saw it, and so they marvelled; they were troubled, and hasted away." ~ Psalm 48:2-5

The phraseology of this text is something else. The term "beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth, is mount Zion" expresses a greater truth than most Bible commentators understand. One of the reasons for this is that they take the narrow view of the statement rather than the broader one.

Zion is not just a physical mountain; it is a spiritual one as well. Zion is the church. The church is the composite of all those chosen by God to be His people.

The church is composed of all of those who have believed in Christ for their salvation.

I am part of a movement within Christianity that has been around for about 135 years. We believe that Christ is our salvation. We believe that we are Zion... We simply believe what this Psalm says which is that in every situation God is our Great King. We need not fear the world nor those who believe that they are in charge of it. They are not. Mount Zion, the church of God, has covered the entire earth and it is the one institution that most earthly men and women fear the most. It has resisted every effort to bring it down since its beginning for us. Jesus gave it existence when He died on the cross and the Holy Spirit breathed life into it on the day of Pentecost.

The church is eternal... I praise God for "Zion" and am proud to be one of many that make it not only a mountain but also the Holy City of God.

God bless and go and have a great day.

Paul A. Kirby is the pastor at the Church of God at 3939 S. Emerson Ave.

UIndy, Community Health Network announce Feb. 24 open house

ON CAMPUS

The public is invited to the University of Indianapolis on Wednesday, Feb. 24, to catch some NCAA basketball action, enjoy a buffet dinner and tour Community Health Network's new physical therapy and rehabilitation clinic. The occasion is UIndy's annual Pack-the-House Night at Nicoson Hall arena, as the Greyhound basketball teams face rival Saint Joseph's College in their final home games of the season. The women's game at 5:30 p.m. will be preceded by a Senior Night ceremony. The men's team, now celebrating its 100th anniversary, will play at 7:45 p.m., with halftime proceedings that include giveaways and special recognition of alumni and faculty accomplishments.

In conjunction, UIndy and Community Health Network are partnering to introduce local residents to the new Community Physical Therapy & Rehab clinic, located in the UIndy Health Pavilion at 1643 E. Hanna Ave. The clinic is the focal point of a multifaceted collaboration between the university and the hospital and health system. Although Community Health Network operates many such clinics around central Indiana, this is the first within a six-mile radius of the UIndy campus, offering easy access and quality care for families living on Indianapolis' Southside and in Johnson and surrounding counties.

Pack-the-House activities begin at 4:30 p.m. Feb. 24 in the Health Pavilion, located across Hanna Avenue from Nicoson Hall. The buffet dinner, dessert and free tours of the clinic will be offered until 7:30 p.m. Visitors who take a tour can register to win the iPad, which will be presented during the men's game.

The cost for dinner, which includes admission to both basketball games, is $10 for adults, $7 for ages 65 and older, $5 for ages 3 to 12 and free for children younger than 3, who will find games and other entertainment in the Health Pavilion's yoga room.

Tickets and more information are available at getinvolved.uindy.edu/PTH2016 or (317) 788-3295.

NUTRITION

By Chef Wendell Fowler

Nothing harshes the mellow of frisky romantic coupling like being bloaty, gassy, rumbling sleepy and not up for it. How did Valentine's Day work out for you? Did you attempt assault with a dead weapon or set yourself up for success? Sexologists, phycologists and cardiologists harmonize: what you eat has a profound effect on your sexual performance and heart health. The same foods that block arteries to your heart may also cause erectile dysfunction (ED). New research linked ED to increased risk for heart failure, stroke, peripheral vascular disease and ischemic heart disease.

Each moment holds the arousing prospect of getting your blood a-flowing and heart a-thumpin' with your partner. It's all about blood flow. Dining on macho slabs-o-steak, creamy Fettuccini Alfredo, junky fried foods, gooey garlic bread, cheesecake and goblets of wine require extra energy to process. Hard to digest foods like these can block blood flow to the nether regions: a prelude to disaster. And don't delude yourself: excessive alcohol only makes you think you're a good lover. Viagra after dinner mints are moot at this point.

Mayo Clinic informs, "Erectile dysfunction does not always indicate an underlying heart problem. However, research suggests that men with erectile dysfunction who have no obvious cause, such as trauma, and who have no symptoms of heart problems should be screened for heart disease before starting any treatment." Stanford University and Men's Health share, "ED is a red flag of current or future heart problems. Likewise, if you have heart disease, getting the right treatment might help with erectile dysfunction," a canary in your khakis.

Regularly feed your temple living food from the Celestial Apothecary. Think dark-green leafy salads, modest portions of lean protein and a fibrous whole grain side dish rather than heavy, starchy potatoes. Pumpkin and sunflower seeds and oysters boost zinc levels-crucial for improving sperm health and testosterone levels. Eating celery increase the pheromone androsterone that dilates blood vessels, increases sex drive and enhances climax. Bananas contain vitamin B, bromelain and serotonin that boosts sexual performance, increases energy, improves blood flow, reduces stress and increases libido. Avocado helps increase libido, lose weight, and get rid of excess cholesterol in the blood.

Of course, being in love with the right person is the best aphrodisiac. Keep your love alive with food!
