Michael N. Boone

BGFD engineer works for the community he grew up in to provide a high level of service

BEHIND the BADGE

Michael N. Boone, a firefighter (engineer) and paramedic for the Beech Grove Fire Department, says that he enjoys helping others in his community. "That's just part of who I am," he said.

He continued, "For me, it's about the community, providing a high level of service and dedication to the community. It's the community I grew up in," Boone said. "I feel as if we're giving back to the community, helping those that are in need when they call for a situation and doing so on a high level."

Boone, now a Perry Township resident, grew up in Beech Grove, graduating from Beech Grove High School in 1991. He began working part-time for the White River Fire Department starting in 2003, and still does that because of the additional programs that the department provides. He was hired to the Beech Grove Fire Department in 2006. He has also worked for private ambulance services including World Metro Care and Trans-Care.

What was your inspiration to become a police officer/firefighter?

I wanted to serve the community and help others.

What has been one of your most gratifying moments on the job?

The first one would be, getting hired. It's very competitive. The second is being promoted to engineer, the position to drive the engine. I've been doing that since 2011. Another would be completing paramedic class. On top of that, the most gratifying things would be helping a patient out and them coming back and saying thank you, whatever situation that may be.

What aspect of the job do you find most challenging?

One thing that's unique to what we do as firefighters is, we never know what type of call we're going to go to today or on a shift. We try to do our best when the alarms go off to mitigate the situation.

What do you enjoy doing in your off-time?

I play a lot of golf, personally. That takes a backburner to kids' softball and anything family-oriented. I also spend some time at Servant's Heart of Indianapolis, giving back there. My father is the founder.

What are your future goals, professionally or personally?

The next rung on the ladder would be to go through a promotion process, to be a lieutenant. Be the best father I can to my kids and be the best husband I can be for my wife, Jackie. Without her, I would not be able to do what I do. She's supported me through everything. We've been married 15 years in November.

What would you have done if you hadn't of become a police officer/firefighter?

I worked for my grandpa at a machine shop. My dad also had a machine shop. I worked for him 13 years before doing what I'm doing now, so by trade I was going to be a machinist. I do still help when he needs help.

READER'S WRITES

Beech Grove library's future at hand

Recently you may have heard that the trustees of the Beech Grove Public Library could soon vote on whether to "merge" their services with the Indianapolis Marion County Public Library.

Approximately six months ago maybe a little longer, I served on a focus panel that discussed this possibility. Although I remained neutral on the matter I understood the point of the focus group concerning the future of the library and the amount of additional educational materials available to the citizens of this area should this "merge" occur. I too agree that libraries have to reinvent themselves and offer different types of services. I recently met with the Librarian and my appointment to the library board and I explained that I support any increase in educational materials or programs that the public can have access to.

I want to bring up a point that I was not aware of until last week after that meeting occurred. While meeting to discuss the 2016 city budget, it was brought to the attention of our financial advisor that an agreement to "merge" our public library with Marion County may occur. Our financial advisor believes that the city may incur financial hardship as a result of this merger. If that is the case and as strong as I feel about the exposure of more educational materials to our citizens, I simply cannot support any efforts to "merge" with any other library system.

We have just come out of a financial hardship that we inherited in 2012 and the city shouldn't be exposed to further losses as a result of tax caps or circuit breaker calculations due to this possible "merger".

City of Beech Grove*

Q: Which American freedom do you value most and why?

"I value freedom itself. I value all our freedoms that were awarded us by our Constitution and Bill of Rights. Unfortunately, too many people are willing to give those freedoms away."

Kelly Bowling of Perry Township

"The freedom of religion. The United States was founded on faith in God. As the world changes, I just think that is a solid foundation that people can fall back on during hard times. After 9/11 you saw the country pull back and realize that you need your faith to carry you through hard times and it gives people hope. In today's world we need hope."

Tara Friend of Johnson County

"Freedom of speech is the first one that comes to mind just because of all of the things that you see across the globe. We have such a privilege here to be able to speak our mind and do things without a lot of the penalties that come from a lot of the other countries that you are seeing."

Trent Newport of Johnson County

"I value the freedom of speech the most because it is one of the core freedoms and it impacts the others. If you didn't have a freedom of speech then the freedom to assemble wouldn't matter because you wouldn't be able to say what is on your mind."

OUR VIEW

Milestone month to celebrate

The end of June marks the end of the first half of a year—2015 has certainly had its ups and downs. We celebrate the birth of our great nation in July and thank the thousands of veterans who have fought to secure our freedoms at home—and we continue to thank those still abroad putting their lives on the line every day.

"We celebrate the birth of our great nation in July and thank the thousands of veterans who have fought to secure our freedoms..."

America turns 239 this year and we've come a long way from our humble 1776 origins. We've faced threats near and far and overcome each challenge, ready to meet the new one. Perhaps that's a good attitude to approach the rest of the year with.

Given what you know about the first six months of 2015, what are your goals as we turn the corner through the heat of summer? Whether you need a refreshing vacation, a refocusing of personal or business relationships, now is the time.

Celebrate our American heritage with fireworks, barbeque and a few brews with the neighbors. Here's to us, our rich history, and the rest of 2015.

Just remember to be courteous with fireworks around combat veterans!

BELIEVE IT!

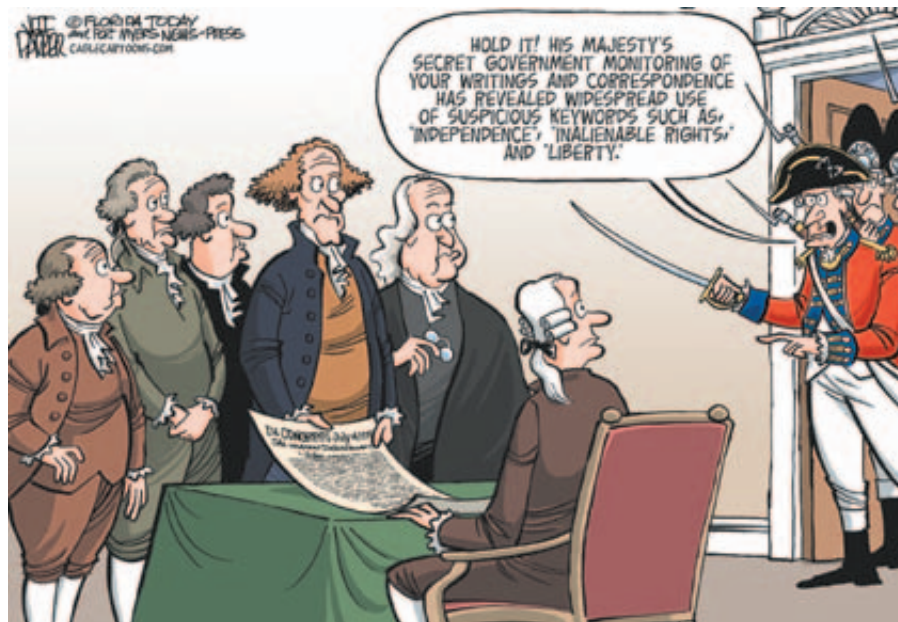

Our nation has all sorts of arcane, nonsensical laws on the books. Each week, we'll share one with you....

Now playing:
Meet Mr. Obvious

It's extremely telling, in our view, when the man formerly known as The Worst President in United States History takes a swipe at the man that now has solidified himself as the most inept. Yes, former President Jimmy Carter sallied forth last week to tell Walter Isaacson, CEO of the Aspen Institute, that, in his opinion, President Barack Obama has failed on the world stage. Gee, really?

"On the world stage, I think (Obama's successes have) been minimal," Carter said. "I think he's done some good things domestically like the health program and so forth, but on the world stage, just to be as objective about it as I can, I can't think of many nations in the world where we have a better relationship now than we did when he took over. ... If you look at Russia, if you look at England, if you look at China, if you look at Egypt and so forth - I'm not saying it's his fault - but we have not improved our relationship with individual countries, and I would say that the United States' influence and prestige and respect in the world is probably lower now than it was six or seven years ago."

Gee, really? Don't be concerned that Carter has regained his footing, though, because he also said Secretary of State John Kerry is one of the best ever in that post. "I think John Kerry has been a very courageous and innovative and dynamic secretary of state," Carter said. And we think the Easter Bunny is a swell dude, too. As we've stated here time and again, one simply cannot fabricate this stuff. It's great theatre, though.

"...we think the Easter Bunny is a swell dude, too. As we've stated here time and again, one simply cannot fabricate this stuff. It's great theatre, though."

The Fourth of July has been celebrated in grand fashion, and as we have reminded you previously, a huge round of applause needs to go out to all the volunteers. Their efforts began long before everything went Red, White and Boom! We commend them for their selfless involvement.

OUR ANNUAL SALUTE TO OUR VETERANS

Southside veterans share stories from their military service and what being free means to them

Historical Images Submitted, Photos by Nicole Davis

By Nicole Davis

When 14-year-old Caleb Wilson started his 10th grade history project which required him to find a person in his family history and an item of theirs to learn its history, his perception of WWII and the people who serve their country began to change.

Wilson, a Perry Township resident who attends Hoosier Academy Virtual School, chose to look into the history of his grandfather, Raymond F. Horn, and great-uncle, Ralph O. Norcross, who were lifelong Southside Indianapolis residents who served in the Navy during WWII.

"I knew Raymond was in the battle but I didn't know anything about my great-uncle," Wilson said. "I didn't know anything about these artifacts. I never actually knew them as family members but that doesn't diminish my respect for them. I view them as people who sacrificed for what we can do today."

It started with a camera. Norcross had loaned a camera to a shipmate, with was returned after having a whole blown out of one end from shrapnel.

Norcross had written memoirs of certain times during his service in the Navy. The more research Wilson did, the more he began to learn about their experiences that his family didn't know.

"He did research to find out they were involved in the same battle at the same time, because we knew the name of both of the ships they were on," said Nita Norcross, Wilson's aunt. "It's interesting that they both ended up at the same battle."

Wilson said in doing this research, it made what he has learned in American history all the more real.

Caleb Wilson discovered that his grandfather and great-uncle were involved in the Battle of Leyte during WWII while researching for a school history project.

"When you look back at it, your almost instinct is to look at it as disconnected from today's world and as an event that happened," Wilson said. "That's not how it is. All our freedoms would be gone — like our freedom of speech. People aren't entitled to things. You only get those because someone fought for them."

This week's issue, Faces of Freedom, takes a look into the lives of a few Southside military veterans who sacrificed for their country and freedoms.

Frank Chipman

Frank Chipman

Frank Chipman enlisted in the army as a newlywed. When he was shipped overseas to France for a year, he said that was the toughest time in their 55-year marriage. They had their first baby, which Chipman said "was a little bitty squirt when I left." Though the rough times, Chipman said he still had a job to do and he gave it his all.

"The most important part of freedom and life is the one sitting beside me," Chipman said. "I have the best wife in the world. The year I was overseas showed me how precious it is to have a family that you can see them every day, morning and night, argue with them."

Chipman grew up in Needmore, Ind. His parents owned a grocery store and later moved to a 516-acre farm and raised livestock, Dalmatians and ponies. He met future wife, Linda, as a child while they attended church together. He and Linda married on June 4, 1960 and they had their first child. Chipman enlisted in the army in 1961.

"I was not drafted but I was to the age it would happen shortly," Chipman said. "I figured I would enlist, get the training I want and knew what I was going to be doing."

Chipman was schooled in drafting for four months, but never got to use the skill.

"Reason was all of the tests they give in the army, I had one of the highest test scores in the entire battalion, which is a lot of people," he said. "So they would not put me where I wanted to be. I worked for the battalion commander. That was the highest job that a serviceman could have."

Two years into his service, Chipman was sent to France.

"The biggest adversity was being away from my wife and newborn baby," Chipman said. "My first baby. (Nobody has) a wife like I do. She's pretty dandy."

While being away from his family was challenging, Chipman said that he had the best job in the army as he knew there was no chance he would be assigned "KP" (kitchen patrol) or any other type of undesirable work. He needed to be by the battalion commander's side.

"I enlisted," Chipman said. "I could have fiddled around and maybe never gone into the service at all. No matter what I do, I intend to do the best I can."

SSG Patrick Shannon Co-Founder of Helping Hands for Freedom and always a Hero in our hearts

That was part of my situation there. I was able to get good schooling out of it. I had a job waiting for me when I came back. I knew I learned a lot in the army, some things that were helpful. It makes me a little more appreciative of my life."

Chipman worked for General Motors for many years, estimating weights of parts by looking at a blueprint. He was a carpenter and ended up owning his own business called the Chip Shop. He and Linda, long-time residents of Franklin, recently celebrated their 55th anniversary, and currently reside at Rosegate – American Senior Communities. The couple has five children, 22 grandchildren and three great-grandchildren with one on the way.

Joseph Schaub

Joseph H. Schaub had three goals for his life when he made it home from his service overseas in the army during WWII: have a house with a roof, a fridge with milk and a furnace.

Schaub was born July 9, 1919 and grew up in Indianapolis. He enlisted in the United States Army on May 13, 1942 and served in the 79th Division, 313th Infantry Charlie Company.

"There was a war coming up," Schaub said. "I decided that everyone else is going in there. I might as well give it a try myself. Boy, did I give it a try."

Schaub served two years, six months and five days overseas. He started in Africa, traveled to Italy then walked through France, Germany, Holland, Czechoslovakia and parts of Austria. Through good times and bad, Schaub stayed headstrong and could be quite the jokester.

"I was kind of an ornery son of a gun," Schaub said. He later continued, "I was just enlisted. We go to get our shots, vaccines... There were about 100 men waiting outside. I walked out, my arm was all red and I kept holding my rear. I just wanted to give them something to think about. When I walked up holding my rear and my arms looking like that, they couldn't figure out what was up, and that's what I wanted."

Schaub said he met a lot of good people while he was overseas. He tells of making a child return home after spotting him roaming the streets in unsafe territory. Or of meeting a couple in Italy who had nothing to eat, so he went and got them some food. Sitting down to eat with the couple, there was one particular knife the man would use to eat with, so Schaub hid it as a prank.

"You make very good friends," Schaub said. "When something happens to them, that's when you shed a few tears, too. My buddies would be killed and I'd get new recruits. I'd say all you have to do is follow the one that's with you. We'll all go home together. It wasn't true but it made us feel better."

Walking from place to place, there would be extended periods of time that the soldiers wouldn't have anything to eat. Schaub said that's why when they did get to a base with food, he would often go back for thirds.

"They'd say you've been here before," Schaub said. "I was kind of rotten."

When Schaub returned home and left from Camp Atterbury, the first person that he called was his brother, Chuck, from a payphone.

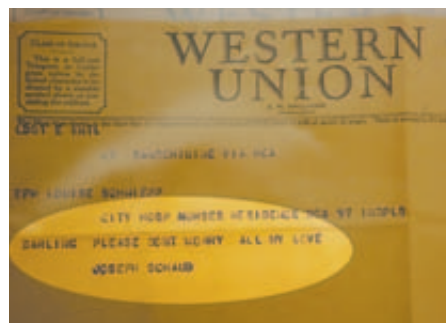

"When I was told I was going to go home, that is one of the best things I heard," Schaub

Joseph Schaub

Joseph and Louis Schaub married after Joe returned home from his army service in WWII. He would write telegraphs to Louis, and later learned that his commander thought his letters were too short and added to them.

said. "I was glad to get home because a lot of my buddies were buried out there. When you get home, you always say 'thank God I get to come home.' It's in your mind that you don't argue with anyone because you're so grateful."

Schaub said he liked to go to a park and look up at the stars, thinking that they were the same stars he saw in each of the seven countries. While he was overseas, he wrote short telegraphs to his girlfriend, Louis. They married Sept. 14, 1946, have two children, eight grandchildren and 21 great-grandchildren. Schaub still resides in Indianapolis and retired from Hook Drug Company in 1965. He has spent 31 years helping at his son, Greg's business, EM Company in Southport.

Joe Wolfla

Joe Wolfla is proud to have served his country. He said many people don't realize what really goes on in wartime for soldiers, and there are still things to this day he won't discuss. But, he credits his experiences in the Marine Corps, the good and the bad, for the way he has shaped the rest of his life.

"If you think you're having a bad day, then you should go to a VA hospital or a children's hospital then you will find out that you are having a good day," Wolfla said. "It's unbelievable what you will see, but at the same were headed to Lebanon when they arrived in Hawaii. They were dropped off on a field and were supposed to be loaded into a truck. However, Wolfla was separated and placed on a bus. That's when he found out that he was assigned to Force Reconnaissance, considered an elite force which was tasked with proving the commander with information about an operational area.

Wolfla said Recon was a tough program, and they experienced a lot of wartime hardships through his time of service. After one assigned mission in the Philippines, the details of which Wolfla said he will never talk about, he and two other soldiers were arrested and stood trial. The U.S. government denied knowledge of what the Marines were doing in the area. On the 11th day of trial, Sgt. Wolfla was sentenced to 42 years in a Philippines prison. The U.S. had 24 hours to turn them over. They were loaded into a truck with a tarp over them so they wouldn't get shot. When the truck finally stopped, the tarp was pulled off of them and there was an airplane, prepared to take the soldiers out of the country.

"I give a lot of speeches," Wolfla said. "I always say, believe in your country, but don't believe what you read about your country."

Wolfla said he carried on him a rifle, knife, a carbine that held 20 or 21 rounds and a small satchel. Before this, he had never even shot a rifle.

"It's a different world," Wolfla said. "You just fight for your country. All of us fight for kids that never committed a sin so they can be free. And I am free."

Wolfla was honorably discharged in 1961 as a sergeant.

"I was very inward when I come home," Wolfla said. "All Marines are. You don't talk a lot. I never talked a lot about it. It just impacted me. It's changed my whole life. I'm not a bit phony. What you see is what you get. I went in as a kid and come out as a man. My drive was big."

Wolfla went on to start many businesses through the years, from purchasing the Indianapolis Capitals Pro Football Team, to helping bring back Choc-Ola, a chocolate beverage. He has coached a lot of CYO and high school football and written books on athletes such as Bobby Plump and Ray Crowe. He has two sons and two grandchildren, one of which is a Marine currently on assignment. Wolfla has had his office at 415 Main St. in Beech Grove for more than 26 years and currently lives in Franklin Township.

Ghost hunting your own home

HAUNTS & JAUNTS

By Rick Hinton

Paranormal investigators are a hearty lot, willing to explore a world of shadows and mysteries at the drop of a dime. However, when it becomes a matter of strange shenanigans in their own private residence, should they? Most would say—not!

Residences are sanctuaries where we refuel and regroup, and for paranormal investigators, have some semblance of a normal life beyond hunting ghosts. Investigating takes not only a physical, but mental toll over time. You need time off. Yet, the balance is altered when paranormal activity hits the home abode. After all, do you really want to be on call 24/7?

There is no better justification for doing what we do than helping someone in need. But who's going to help you when your fortress of solitude is invaded?

You begin to look for reasons:

- Maybe it's something you brought home from an investigation?
- Something that's been there all along and as curious about you as you them?
- Maybe it's you that is haunted rather than the location?

You have the reaction:

- You've got to be kidding me!
- Look the other way, dismiss and look for rational explanations (as you often advise your clients). If you don't recognize it as such, maybe it will go away; out of sight, out of mind.

Some paranormal investigators may embrace their own house being haunted. It's a novelty at first, but won't last long. And any sort of rest and relaxation will be fleeting at best. Then begins the rationale—it's dear Aunt Clara, Uncle Jim, mom or dad (or something imitating them). A kinship with the spirit develops, whether factual or not.

Results become a different ballgame than when investigating someone else's house:

- Investigating your own residence might just take it from a dormant, watchful state to a ramped up fiesta (they know that you know, so the fun and games begin!).

- You are on a constant ride of pins and needles when you should be recharging the batteries. A nighttime walk through a darkened house has you on edge. And...you have to go to work the next day!
- It's not a win-win when the paranormal consumes every aspect of your life!

What are the options? Co-exist, get rid of them or walk away.

My wife Laura lived in a 'haunted' house in the inner-city of Indianapolis for a year. It was a matter of necessity rather than choice. It was a long year with little rest and relaxation. A home does not always feel like a home. The house still stands.

Greenwood Freedom Festival 'Summer Fun' with widespread community participation

By Nicole Davis

Greenwood and surrounding residents lined the sidewalks from Greenwood Middle School, around Meridian Street, Broadway, Madison Avenue and back as businesses, nonprofits and other community members showed their patriotic spirit by parading down the streets.

As part of the City of Greenwood's annual Freedom Festival on June 27, the event was kicked off at noon with the parade, followed by a day-long festival and ending with fireworks. This year's theme, Summer Fun, recognized the opening of the city's new aquatic park, Freedom Springs. For more information about the festival, visit greenwood.in.gov.

Plan ahead for safe Fourth of July holiday

The Department of Public Safety, in coordination with the Division of Homeland Security and IMPD, reminds residents to put safety first this holiday weekend and remember, "if you See Something, Say Something™." Law enforcement and public safety officials across the country have been warned by federal authorities of heightened concern involving possible terror attacks targeting the July 4 holiday.

"While there was no specific or credible threat of attack, the intelligence bulletin prepared by the Dept. of Homeland Security and the FBI alerted our public safety agencies to the ongoing threats posed by the Islamic State and other homegrown extremists," said Division of Homeland Security Chief Gary Coons. "The bulletins are frequently issued in advance of major U.S. holidays out of an abundance of caution and concern that operatives may exploit the timing to generate greater attention."

Public Safety Director Troy Riggs said the public can help make this an enjoyable and fun-filled family weekend by remaining vigilant.

Shroud of Turin: researcher discusses mysterious burial cloth

Barry Schwartz will share his expertise and experiences at a free public event at Franciscan St. Francis Health-Indianapolis, July 11. The event starts at 9:15 a.m. in the hospital's basement auditorium, 8111 S. Emerson Ave. main entrance. The Shroud of Turin is an ancient linen showing a faint image of what appears to be a crucifixion victim – a man many believe to be Jesus of Nazareth. Some say it's a forgery and hoax – yet theologians, scientists and scholars have spent countless hours studying this curious fabric. Schwartz, an Orthodox Jew, is among those who have studied the storied Shroud. A professional technical photographer, he was invited to participate in the first ever in-depth scientific examination of the cloth, known as the Shroud of Turin Research Project in 1978. He was a skeptic at first, but over the years became convinced of the Shroud's authenticity based on mounting scientific evidence.

Ted 2... the year's best comedy

MOVIE REVIEW

By Adam Staten

As much as summer at the movie theaters is known for blockbusters, one could easily make the argument it's also the time of year for sequels. Think about it for a second, the biggest movies this summer are also sequels; Avengers: Age of Ultron, and Jurassic World and let's not forget the forthcoming Terminator Genisys due out later this summer. Another sequel likely to do big things at the box office, based on the success of its predecessor, is Ted 2. The second film about the foul-mouthed, pot-smoking teddy bear hit theaters this past weekend.

Ted 2 picks up six years after the end of the first film. As the film opens, we're given a first row seat at Ted and Tami-Lynn's wedding. Both parties say "I do" and the celebration commences soon thereafter, but it doesn't last long. The film quickly flashes forward another year and Ted and Tami-Lynn are having severe marital troubles. He accuses her of spending them into the poor house and she calls out Ted for not providing enough emotional support. Things are bad, to say the least.

In a desperate attempt to save their marriage, Ted and Tami-Lynn decide to have a baby. However, knowing that Ted is well, a stuffed animal and not capable of reproducing, Tami-Lynn, Ted, and his best bud, John, (Wahlberg), go through some rather drastic measures in order to bring about a child. Failing miserably in all of their well intentioned, but poorly executed plans, Ted and Tami-Lynn decide to adopt. The only problem: Ted is not legally a person and so, therefore cannot adopt a child. Ted and John go to great lengths in order to prove Ted is a person and not just a teddy bear.

If that quick plot synopsis made it seem as if there's a lot going on, well, then you're initial feelings are spot on. While the first film had a short and simple plot, Ted 2 has entirely way too much going on all at one time. The film would have been much better off just simply concentrating on one of these storylines instead of trying to cram so much into one single film. Seth Macfarlane must not be planning a third Ted with all that's put into the sequel.

While the plot is overstuffed, the jokes keep coming a mile a minute. There are several moments throughout the film that will have you, literally laughing out loud.

Ted 2 nearly outdoes the first film in almost every category. Best comedy of the year. 4 out of 5.

Adam Staten lives in Perry Township and is a movie buff. Staten graduated from University of Southern Indiana with a degree in Communication Studies.

By Chef Wendell Fowler

There is something warm and fuzzy, bordering sacred about the energy of a farmers market. It's an important social affair linking rural and urban populations, friends and neighbors in mutually rewarding exchange while shopping the dozens of booths hosted by broad-smiling vendors, selling locally harvested produce from the celestial apothecary, compassionately raised meats, cheese, and handmade artisan crafts- a joyous social interaction uniting community with a jam-min' acoustic band soundtrack.

Please visit these markets regularly until they close in the fall. It's fun to shake the compost-slinging hand of the person who grew the food your about to eat. Plus, farmers markets require less transport, handling, refrigeration, and less time in storage – a magical win-win. Watch in awe, the variety change in harmony with the seasons; like when stone fruit, apples, pumpkins and cider begin to appear.

Get your kids involved. Put down the iPhones, nudge them towards the colorful produce stands and then gently encourage them select some seasonal produce to try. Then let them help prepare a meal. Working with, and eating ripe, freshly picked in season, at its peak flavor, bursting with sun kissed nutrition-friends, doesn't get much better than this in summertime.

Farmers markets help maintain important social ties. Traveling around the country, I've attended some charming markets that conjure the comforting antique feeling of simpler times. I've also seen some lifeless attempts in their fledgling stage. The key: honest, enthusiastic, dedicated connection to earth's bounty, a palpable dedication to the family farming community and desire for all things local – a locavore mentality. Locavores primarily eat food from 100 miles from where they stand, desirably, the family farm. Locavores buy local to create a greater connection between themselves and their food sources, and to resist industrialize and processed foods. Many awakened souls claim eating local can be spiritually grounding due to freshness and higher vibrational energy-eating closer to God. Environment-friendly too, food from farmer's markets requires less transport, handling, refrigeration, and less time in storage.

Science proves time and again eating from the Celestial Apothecary is the best physician. Support family health and the local farming economy. Help new and smaller farmers be successful and save farmland in your area.

Outdoor markets aren't something to hit and run. Goodness sakes, slow down and plan to stay because there's so much to see, hear, smell, taste and purchase – a brilliant way to spend an afternoon reconnecting with family and community.

'Burned' or 'burnt?'

GRAMMAR GUY

By Jordan Fischer

Question: "Hi Jordan! Recently a friend of mine corrected me – or attempted to – saying I should have used 'burned' instead of 'burnt.' The sentence was something like, 'The chicken was good, but a little burnt.' Which one is the right way to go?"

Answer: It seems like we've had a lot of these transatlantic dilemmas popping up lately. Maybe there's a favorable wind over the Atlantic?

You may have guessed already, but what we have here is a style split between British and American English.

Both "burned" and "burnt" are perfectly acceptable as the past and past participle forms of "burn," and also as the adjectival form. Which one you choose is likely to depend on where you're from.

In North America, you're far more likely to hear people use "burned" as the past tense of "burn," while "burnt" is often reserved for adjectival uses (ex. burnt sienna, burnt toast, etc.).

Our friends, the Brits, on the other hand, are more likely to use "burnt" as the past tense of "burn." I don't have hard numbers on how often you'll hear them say "burned," but I'm going to go out on a limb and say less.

At any rate, while either "burned" or "burnt" would be acceptable in your example sentence, "burnt" is probable the more standard American English choice.

As always, thanks for writing in. Please keep sending in those grammar questions!

Weekly Devotion

“O Lord, I know that the way of man is not in himself: it is not in man that walketh to direct his steps. O Lord, correct me, but with judgment; not in Thine anger, lest Thou bring me to nothing. Pour out Thy fury upon the heathen that know Thee not, and upon the families that call not on Thy name: for they have eaten up Jacob, and devoured him, and consumed him, and have made his habitation desolate.”

~ Jeremiah 10:23-25

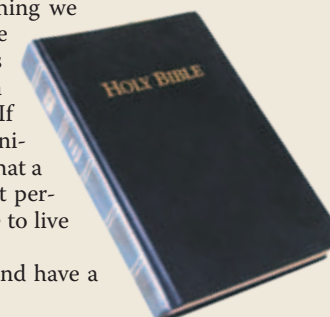

By Paul Kirby

As much as we would like to think that we are in charge, we are not. All of our lives are like the morning dew that appears on the leaves of the grass of our lawns. When the sun comes up, the dew is melted away and evaporated into the air and is no more, or is it? Because it is no longer visible, does that mean that it no longer exists?

That dew becomes a mist and then a cloud and then it reappears in the form of rain. What exists now in one form will eventually take another form at another time. God has made it thus, and we will not change it.

What is needed today is what has always been needed and that is “families” that call on the name of the Lord. And, with that, the thing we all need most and have always needed most is a family that calls on the name of the Lord. If that were to happen universally worldwide, what a much better and most perfect world it would be to live in.

God bless and go and have a great day.

Paul A. Kirby is the pastor at the Church of God at 3939 S. Emerson Ave.

EDWARD McDONALD

BEECH GROVE MAYOR

My fellow citizens:

My name is Edward A. McDonald, Lieutenant-Colonel, United States Army, (Retired) and I am the Republican Candidate for Mayor of the city of Beech Grove. For over 30 years, I served either as an enlisted soldier or officer in the United States Army Reserve. My military schools include the United States Military Academy Preparatory School, the United States Marine Corps Platoon Leaders Course, the Platoon Level Development Course for the Army, the Army's Combined Arms Staff Course and the Army Command and General Staff College.

My military assignments have included assignments in Alaska, Germany, Panama, and the Hawaiian Islands, as well as numerous bases in the continental United States. I served on active duty in Indiana from 2008 to 2013 as either the Staff Judge Advocate (head of the legal department) or the Chief of Legal Mobilization Operations at Camp Atterbury, Indiana. On October 1, 2013, I retired from active duty from the US Army and chose to work as a civilian contractor at Camp Atterbury.

I am currently a member of the attorney bar in Indiana, Minnesota, California, and Washington D.C. and have had my own law practice since 1994. However, I also served for 3 years as an attorney with the United States Department of Justice. I graduated with a Juris Doctor degree in 1985. My undergraduate degree is from the American University in Paris, France. I was raised in Germany, on various Army bases, and in Maryland, near Ft. Meade, due to my Father who was a senior official at the National Security Agency. My father was an expert on the Group of Soviet Forces Germany; he also fought in WWII as a bazooka man in the 25th Infantry division and lost his arm stopping a Japanese tank attack on the Philippine Island of Luzon in January 1945. My Mother is from Belgium and lived through German occupation during the war. I am a lifelong Roman Catholic and attend Mass weekly at Holy Name in Beech Grove.

When I am elected Mayor of Beech Grove, I will remove the drug houses and suppress petty crime with the help of the Beech Grove Police Department and the fine citizens of Beech Grove. I will use all my experience on the international and national scene to encourage businesses with regional appeal to invest in Beech Grove. Lastly, I will treat all citizens and children with dignity and respect and encourage each to contribute to the overall good. This I pledge so help me God.

GOD BLESS THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA AND ALL WHO SERVE AND HAVE SERVED OUR COUNTRY!

Edward A. McDonald, Esq.
Lieutenant Colonel, United States Army (Retired)
