Chuck Roach: Personal injury accidents

Despite what many people believe these days, the most important thing to remember is not every injury means someone is to blame... However, in situations where you don't know whether a third party might be responsible, it makes sense to get some advice on how to proceed.

Q: How has Halloween changed today from when you were a child?

"The only thing I can think of is kids these days don't tip over outhouses like we used to do."

JB Baker of Perry Township

"The costumes for one thing. We used our own clothes, bought used clothes or borrowed clothes. The trick-o-treating is also different. Children today don't go door-to-door as much with more of them going to parties at their church or school. Our church has a truck or treat and that seems to work out better. I understand it is for safety and I think that is a good thing."

Helen Hicks of Greenwood

"When we were children we didn't have the money to buy costumes. If we were fortunate enough our parents would give us a quarter and we would go down to the local drug store and pick out a mask that was attached to your face by an elastic type string. I used to wear my father's old clothes on Halloween and I would go around wearing that mask. I dressed up like a tramp, because it didn't cost anything. I was just wearing my dad's old clothes."

Joe Seiter of Perry Township

"It is much more commercialized now. It isn't a kid-friendly activity. It is more organized with parties and church groups."

READERS' WRITES

Southport is fortunate to have experienced building commissioner

At last week's Board of Public Works & Safety meeting Mayor Jesse Testruth "apologized" to Duane Langreck for attempting to have him resign as Southport's Building Commissioner. Testruth defended his actions by stating that when something is brought to him, his job is to "protect" the city. His research into the supposed concern was off base. Had he bothered to check our Building Standards ordinance, he would have known that the alleged allegations brought to him were unfounded. Our ordinance was approved by the Fire Prevention and Building Safety Commission and endorsed by their Chairman on July 2, 2013. Testruth received a copy of that letter of approval. The contract the city has with Langreck does not require any credentials. Our ordinance does not require the Building Commissioner to have any education or experience to perform the duties.

Testruth's actions didn't stop there. Prior to talking with Langreck, the mayor came into my office to deliver a notice to cease assigning permits and to refrain from paying Langreck for any work until further notice. While in my office, in front of three other people, he stated Langreck had committed fraud because his architect license had expired. He said that all of the work Langreck had done (inspections) was not legal. He also referenced "all the money" Langreck had made from performing these inspections. Langreck is not paid a salary or hourly rate by the city. Rather he is paid a percentage of each building permit issued once the inspection has been completed and all necessary paperwork is submitted to my office. The Common Council then approves the payment.

Our city is fortunate to have a Building Commissioner with education, experience and integrity. For someone to try to ruin a person because of a personal vendetta is unconscionable. It seems some things never change. And that is very sad, indeed.

Environmental work to begin in Beech Grove

The Indiana Department of Environmental Management has recently issued a permit for the City of Beech Grove to remove two underground storage tanks on municipal properties. After Oct. 26, the City can proceed to remove the underground tank located at the Department of Public Works and the tank that is located behind the police station on Churchman Avenue. This is a program to protect the environment and to isolate our fuel dispensing to one location. As part of the removal program, above ground tanks will be removed as well at Sarah T. Bolton Park, behind the fire station on Churchman Avenue and at the Department of Public Works. A new above ground tank will be installed at the Department of Public Works for dispensing.

Once this program has been completed, the only property that city vehicles can fuel their vehicles is at the Department of Public Works.

On another note, work will soon begin on another sanitary sewer update. Within the next week televising and cleaning of sewer lines will take place and lining should begin around the first week of November. Those of you in the affected areas will receive notification from Miller Pipeline when the actual work will begin.

A friendly reminder that the city will offer free shredding on Saturday, Nov. 14 behind City Hall from a.m. to Noon.

'Tis the season
holidays are spooky

A manager at a local grocery store was moving Halloween decorations to prepare the shelves for the next display. As a customer walked by, she exclaims, "It's not time for Christmas already!" The manager shoots back a smile and says, "No, I'm getting ready for Valentine's Day."

Yes, he was joking, but it really is a sign of how fast these next few months are going to go by. We have Halloween next Saturday. Thanksgiving in November. Christmas in December. Or Hanukkah in between. Whatever you do or don't celebrate, it's likely these next few months will be filled with holiday-related activities.

Don't get too caught up in it all, but do take the time to enjoy everything we have to offer on the Southside. We love to promote our local events – and we have some great ones available for families, no matter your interest or budget. Halloween-themed events will begin this weekend. Greenwood has its Monster Mash on Oct. 23, 6 – 8:30 p.m. at the Greenwood Community Center. Southport has a free Halloween parade and party on Oct. 24, 5 p.m. parade and 6 – 9 p.m. party at the Southport Community Center. The Garfield Park area has its Ghoul-ish Garfield on Oct. 28 and 29, 1 – 4 p.m. at Garfield Park. Beech Grove Parks Department will host this Halloween party with a Silly Safari show on Oct. 31, 5:30 – 7 p.m. at the senior center. There is so much more – so be sure to check our calendar for up-to-date listings or email your events to news@ss-times.com.

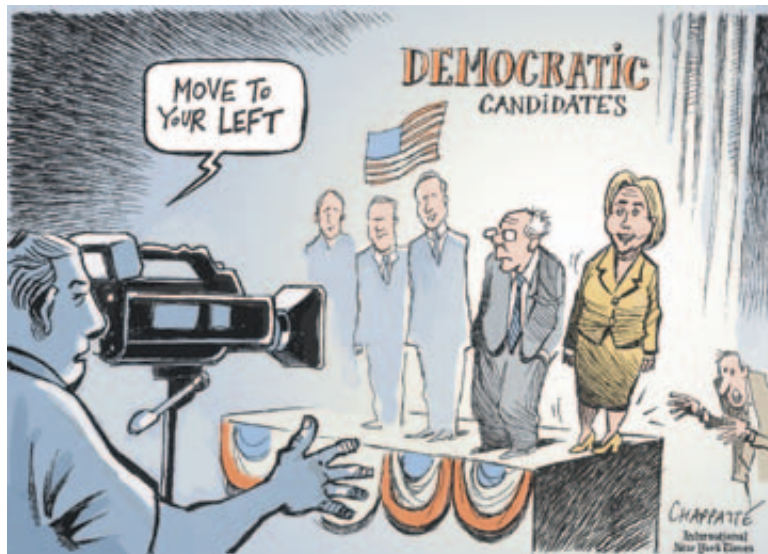

We're looking forward to the upcoming holidays: to seeing children looking cute in their costumes, to time spent with family and friends, to seeing how Southside residents will come together to give back to one another or celebrate. Just be sure to slow it down enough to enjoy it all!

HUMOR

well, not so painful*Commentary by Gus Percy

You know that high-pitched screech that can sometimes come from a sound system? You quickly jerk to cover your ears because of the intensity and unpleasantness of what is commonly called feedback.

Feedback is also what we call criticism of our performance at work or even in our personal lives. It can be an ear-wrenching task to listen to someone spout off about our performance. It makes you want to cover your ears and run for the nearest ice cream shop.

We blame the messenger. If the recipient isn't liking the feedback it must be the fault of the manager giving it. Did you ever think we just don't know how to take criticism? No matter how artful critiques are offered; they only work if the receiver is ready to listen.

A book titled Thanks for the Feedback by Sheila Heen and Douglas Stone tackles the issue of feedback from a new perspective.

Early in my writing career, I had a horrible time with feedback. This was a smash on my identity in a field where I wasn't comfortable. As my skills grew, I became more accepting of feedback. My mindset was one of learning. If feedback threatens our self-perception, it generates feelings of anguish and we become defensive sometimes.

That's the thing: We want to learn to be better, but we have to be ready to listen and mull over the advice. Our human blind spot is ourselves. We can't see how we come across to others. Our mind is constantly aware of our intentions whether or not we telegraph those to others is the key to great communication.

How often have you received feedback just to blow it off because you don't respect the giver?

Another feedback problem is truth. What if you don't believe the feedback? A manager gives you feedback about your sales presentation and tells you to be more aggressive? You think you're already pretty aggressive. Do you ask questions about specific behaviors, or are you offended by the notion and blow it off.

Learning to give feedback is helpful, but we should also work on how to hear it without inserting our fingers in our ears.

One way to change our perception of feedback is to ask for a simple suggestion to improve. Don't wait for the large dossier during review time. Simply ask. It can go both ways. It can be a request from a boss or a subordinate. Feedback is a constant process and most people can easily think of one or two things to make you better.

This tactic works in two ways. It will change the perception that you are not open to feedback (because you were dumb enough to ask) and that you really want to improve changing future feedback from a compassionate giver.

Criticism is tough to take most times. But it gives us all an opportunity to improve ourselves which, in turn, makes us better and more readily accepted.

Goodbye to the ghosts of faded childhood memories

HAUNTS & JAUNTS

By Rick Hinton

Where could one find a wise-cracking cowboy, two pretty ladies with million dollar smiles emceeing syndicated cartoons, and a weekly ghoul with a sarcastic sense of banter, arising from his coffin to show B-level horror movies?

A familiar landmark on the Southside—the pale yellow WTTV-4 television studio—housed those personalities in an era of locally produced, low budget programming where, with a little innovation, anything was possible. The rectangular building located at 3490 Bluff Rd. sat empty for several years in a weed strewn lot with its lone antenna still reaching into an Indianapolis sky. Its heyday produced an exciting Mecca of live shows and creative thinking, often pushing the boundaries. However, its time came and went. In October of 2015 it was bulldozed to the ground.

Bloomington resident and entrepreneur Sarkes Tarzian was the founder of one of the country's first small town television stations. Originating in Bloomington, the station eventually transitioned to the location on Bluff Road, keeping the southern operation as a satellite station. What started as an affiliate feed for the 'big' boys—ABC and NBC—changed as tiny WTTV-4 became independent, airing their own newscasts, local sporting events, talk shows, syndicated cartoons and old movies. Consequently there emerged a diverse catalog of personalities quickly becoming central Indiana household names.

I tried to get permission to tour the historical building before its demise. The owner stated the roof was too unstable to allow anyone inside. I wasn't looking for ghosts. Well at least not of that sort, but rather ghosts of faded childhood memories where a camera sitting in the center of the studio would rotate 360 degrees, locking in on different sets, and different hosts that I remember to this day:

Cowboy Bob (Bob Glaze) and lunch hour's Chuck Wagon Theater. He would almost wink at you with the absurdity of it all; teacher Janie Hodge in several incarnations (Popeye & Janie and Janie's Treehouse). She had a killer smile and wore short skirts; Peggy Nicholson with Peggy's World and Peggy & Popeye. Dimples, cute and so bubbly you felt she would just float away; Sammy Terry's Nightmare Theater. Bob Carter made Friday nights so campy that the movie played second fiddle to his undead charm and wit.

There were the staple talk shows, Bob Braun and Jim Gerard, along with frequent Ronald McDonald (Don Barnes) appearances. And when Championship Wrestling alumni Dick the Bruiser (William Afflis) stopped by, it was always a memorable visit.

There are those ghosts we have to let go in time. Thanks for the memories, WTTV!

WHO YA GONNA CALL?

Three Southside paranormal investigators share their experiences and beliefs on things that cannot be explained

By Nicole Davis

Paranormal investigators can sit in silence for hours, listening and waiting for the sounds and sights of paranormal activity that may or may not be there. But sometimes, that waiting and paying close attention pays off when they find the unexpected.

"The one that gets my heart pumping was at Waverly Hills Cemetery in Louisville," said Rick Hinton, of South Central Paranormal. "They have what they call a death tunnel. It's a tunnel cut through the hillside going to a road below. When people started dying of TB they started using that tunnel to take the bodies down so residents wouldn't see them carted out the front door. Tunnels have a reputation for having a lot of paranormal activity. We shot a laser light down the tunnel. All of a sudden that laser light is coming toward us like someone is walking up that shoot with the laser on their chest. It's drawing closer and closer. About 30 feet from us, the laser stopped and shot right back down the tunnel. Something was walking toward us."

Here, three Southside residents share their experiences and what influenced them to begin seeking out that paranormal activity.

South Central Paranormal Rick Hinton

Rick Hinton was leaving his late mother's home in Kentucky two weeks ago when he realized he left his phone in the garage. He went to retrieve it but the phone wasn't where he left it. He finally found it – hanging from the doorknob from the strap on the phone case – a place he wouldn't have left it and couldn't have accidentally gotten there. That's just one strange occurrence in a series of events that Hinton has experienced in the house.

"I got an interest in (the paranormal) in Kentucky as a kid," Hinton said. "People in Kentucky are very superstitious.

They don't talk about it much but they acknowledge it's going on. My mom talked about how she saw her dead sister playing, laughing and running but she was suspended in the air. That got my interest going as a kid. I dismissed it as a teenager. I would still kind of follow it in books. It always piqued my interest but it was always in the background."

When Hinton moved from Oregon back to home in the mid '80s, he said that's when things came around full circle. His father passed away at the Lake house, and he experienced some unusual things relating to him – the smell of his cologne in the air or the sound of someone clearing their throat like his dad used to do.

He found an interest in paranormal TV shows and finally found Indy Ghost Trackers, a large group which would visit commercial venues in search for the paranormal. He grew tired of political infighting that comes from a larger group, left and became part a small group which formed their own team, Everyday Paranormal. This team helped scout out potential locations for the TV show, Ghost Lab, which was canceled after its second season. He started another team, SciMinds, before joining North Central Paranormal.

"I enjoyed the company of those people," he said. "Everyone was professional. Everyone was friends. Steve Edwards split the group into branches: South central paranormal is what I'm in now. We'll do two fun little paying things a year but generally we do private home investigations."

Hinton said a lot of people get into doing paranormal investigations for the wrong reasons, like money or fame, and he was looking for a group that would use their interest in the paranormal to help people, which is what he does with the private home investigations.

"When you go into a home situation, that's a different ball park," Hinton said. "You're dealing with someone that's on the edge of leaving their house."

Hinton said the reality of the ramifications of death, why some people leave and some don't, doesn't really hit you until it hits you at home. Earlier this year, before his mother died, he said the paranormal activity reignited at the lake home in Kentucky.

"She was definitely talking to people, looking at people," he said. "My sister-in-law lived there 24/7. There was crazy stuff going on while that was happening. Sounds – feeling real oppressed. When people are on their death bed, the house takes on a real thick blanket. The moment my mom died, the house, the heaviness, was gone. Did the things that were there when she was going, have they left? No, not really. Every time I go down there, like this past trip, there's something weird that goes on."

Hinton said paranormal investigating for him is more about a personal interest, questions he would like to have answered. He said they all have the same questions, and there have been no answers.

"It's a mysterious world out there," Hinton said. "When you have an experience that you can't explain, you might see things through another set of eyes."

For anyone looking to get into paranormal investigating, Hinton said to be sure to get into it for the right reasons. What is not shown on TV are the long hours spent sitting in silence in the dark, listening and waiting for something that may or may not happen, hours spent afterwards listening to recordings taken during the investigation, to again potentially not find anything.

"It's more of what you hear," he said. "We set out visual audio recording. We have hours and hours of this stuff to listen to. So we hear a lot of audio and shadow movement. You'll get something in pictures. Do you see full blown apparitions? No, not usually. You may go your whole investigative career and not see anything."

Hinton began sharing his experiences on the paranormal in articles on examiner.com. One reader struck up a conversation with him on Facebook about the topic. He met that reader, Laura Brown, one day at Gas Light Inn on the Southside of Indianapolis, a place said to have paranormal activity.

Who Ya Gonna Call continued on pages 8-9

Rick Hinton

Together, they sat in the basement, listening to see if they heard anything. They didn't. Two years later and Laura has gone on all but one paranormal investigation with Hinton. They married on Labor Day this year.

"She's very level-headed and somewhat sensitive," Hinton said. "I rely on her instincts, when she says something's not right. It's good have someone there you can trust."

While his main focus is private home investigations, Hinton said there are a couple of larger places he looks forward to visiting this year, including an infirmary in West Virginia and an elementary school in Ohio. For more information on his group, visit norcenpara.net/south_central_paranormal.htm and read his weekly column here in The Southside Times.

Chris Thrasher

S.I.G.H.T. Chris Thrasher

Chris Thrasher was 16 when he had his first experience with the paranormal. After his grandpa decided to move to Missouri from a small town in Northern Indiana, Thrasher was given the task to drive one of two cars, his grandpa's car for the move. He was a new driver, driving the old vehicle with no radio and no air conditioning that summer. They each carried CB radios to communicate to one another.

"I enjoy this story. I get chills every time I tell it," Thrasher said. "It was an interesting introduction to the weird things out there."

They were in Illinois when they hit a construction zone, a long 45-mile stretch of construction. There were two or three cars in between Thrasher and his family, a semi directly in front of him.

"Highway hypnosis is fully set in, so I'm sitting here like I'm going to fall asleep," he said. "I hear a voice on the CB that says 'watch out kid.' It startles me, and I was trying to figure out what it was. About 10 seconds later the tire of the truck in front of me blew out, rubber everywhere. I asked my grandpa, 'how did you know that would happen?' They didn't know what I was talking about, hadn't heard it. From that point I was always curious as to what was it, why did it warn me?"

Thrasher decided he really wanted to pursue his interest of the paranormal, and formed an investigative team with a few friends. S.I.G.H.T. Paranormal was formed late 2012, his team which investigates residential cases. The group is part of some paranormal societies, which help assign cases to different teams.

"There are areas that no one touches and those are where we started going," Thrasher said. "We aren't there for the whole 'come look at me'; we're here to find out what we can. There's too much evidence that people have come across, too much to say there's something else out there."

Thrasher said his memorable experience is documented

What do you hope to learn, personally, from conducting paranormal investigations?

"I wanted to prove that they (the spirits) are actually who they portray to be. I want to know, why did this person leave and this person stay behind? I want to know if we have a choice."

– Rick Hinton, of Southport
South Central Paranormal

"I'd really like to know what happens once our physical body ceases to function. I am one of those believers that matter isn't created or destroyed, it's just reassembled."

– Chris Thrasher, of Perry Township
S.I.G.H.T. Paranormal

"There is a here-after. There is a place that we go. When I first started, I thought that. I always felt there was something after this. But now because I've had so many experiences, I know that there is something after this. That kind of takes away that fear of death. To me and a lot of the people I work with, dying is just the physical side of you and it's not the spiritual side of you that dies. To me, it's a blessing to know what everyone wants to know; what's after this?"

– Tim Poynter, of Franklin Township
Spirit Paranormal

on S.I.G.H.T. Paranormal's account on the Sound Cloud app. They set up for an investigation at Thornhaven Manor in New Castle, Ind. The front room is set up where there is a couch against the wall, and on the other side of the wall is a staircase. They were sitting on the couch and shut all doors in the house aside from the one that leads to the staircase. They heard noise over the Ovilus, a device which converts energy into words, then a loud crash on the staircase.

"For every piece that we think we know, we get 20 more questions," Thrasher said. "Some of the stuff that we have put together at this point, we've noticed if there is a person who is not ready to leave their physical body, you're more likely to come across the impulses and residual from that person."

Thrasher, who works as a deputy for the Marion County Sheriff's Department, said that while he hasn't had as much time this year to invest in the paranormal investigations, he has plans for places he wants to visit next, and theories that he would like to test such as whether digital recording or cassette recording will produce more evidence. His hypothesis is that cassettes will produce more results.

"Our agent has a saying and I like it," Thrasher said. "The paranormal is normal. The supernatural is natural. They're just not yet understood."

SPIRIT Tim Poynter

There is no doubt in Tim Poynter, Franklin Township resident, that there are spirits that walk this earth – souls that may be lost and need help finding their way to where they belong. That's why he's not searching for ghosts; he's trying to make a connection with them through his participation in the Indianapolis-based group, Spirit Paranormal.

"Our job with Spirit Paranormal is to help people that have issues with spirits, but also to help the spirits," Poynter said. "We don't go in and just say 'oh yeah, you have ghosts.' That's kind of like a painter going in a home, saying 'you have to paint that wall,' and leaving. We go in, try to establish who's there, why they're there and try to solve it."

Poynter's interest in the paranormal began at a young age, after a plane crashed in London, Ind., not far from his home. He said it created a large paranormal area that everyone would talk about. He would go to the site to explore.

"I met a couple of groups, joined them to see what they were doing," Poynter said. "It always seemed to me that it came down to someone was looking for money to do something. That was not for me. I do a lot for charity. I want to help people."

Helping is the focus of Spirit Paranormal, which concentrates on private investigations and ridding a house of ghosts or paranormal activity. The five-member group will often work with other local groups on cases, when they need help or more people.

"When I first started this group, I thought our job was to help the spirit cross over," Poynter said. "As I found out, that's not really a goal. Some of the spirits are supposed to be here. Others are stuck. We try to help those who feel like they're stuck."

This time of year is the busiest for Poynter, as interest in the paranormal always peaks before Halloween. He volunteers to walk the Irvington Ghost Tours, indianaghosttours.org, which take place on Fridays and Saturdays, 7 p.m. There will be two daily tours on Oct. 30 and 31, 7 p.m. and 9:30 p.m., meeting at 10 S. Johnson Ave., Indianapolis. The tour spans a mile and a half, talking about the history of Irvington and its ghostly activity. Cost is $15, which includes a book by tour guide, Al Hunter.

The group will host its Spirit Academy on Nov. 7, taking people who have never done anything with paranormal and showing them the equipment, teaching them how to use it and teaching them how to use their intuitive side to work with ghosts.

“What I hope to do is help, to teach people to connect with spirits,” Poynter said. “People think being haunted is a bad thing. Being haunted is part of being alive.”

Poynter said he will often go on an investigation with people saying they have a demon in their house.

“Come to find out, it’s just mom, grandma or grandpa,” he said. “They just don’t know how to interpret it... I’ve had some really touching investigations. One was on 10th street near Irvington where they lost their daughter to drugs. They had a lot of activity in the house. The activity would mimic the actions of the daughter. We did a two week investigation. At the end of the investigation, the stepdad had written a letter to her about how he felt. When she died, the letter had disappeared. We found out that she had the letter. They said there’s no way she could have it. He had it after she passed on. A week later they called and said we were right. He had taken the letter and put it in the casket with her. When I went back and did the EVP work, at the very end, we got a very clear thank you for making the connection with her step-father.”

Poynter is retired and spends his time doing handyman and charity work. He says his biggest thrill is to help someone realize that it’s true, ghosts do exist, and he looks forward to continuing to do just that.

“All of our cases are by word of mouth,” he said. “Someone had a problem and run into someone that had a problem. One of my favorite saying is the spirit will find a way. We end up in the weirdest places with the oddest connections but it’s always some place that we needed to be.”

AAA Insurance shares Halloween safety tips

During the Halloween season, no one chooses the trick over the treat, but sometimes, mischief simply can't be avoided.

"Unfortunately, property vandalism and injuries tend to spike on Halloween night," said Greg Seiter, public affairs manager for AAA Hoosier Motor Club. "So, it's important to make sure you're covered for whatever hijinks might occur."

Prepare for Pranksters

Vehicles are nearly twice as likely to be vandalized on Halloween as on an average day, according to the Highway Loss Data Institute. To avoid having your car egged or even stolen, park it in a secure garage or a safe, well-lit area. Double check that car doors are locked and windows are up. Arm your car alarm if you have one.

Look out for Black cats, blind spots and Batman

Drive slowly and be on the lookout for creatures that can appear from almost anywhere. Turn your headlights on earlier in the day to spot children from greater distances.

Don't hesitate to use your horn if you're concerned that trick-or-treaters may not see you coming. Never drink and drive.

Light up the night

Generous lighting outside of your home will help keep the creeps away while providing safe passage to party guests and trick-or-treaters. Make sure walkways and stairs are clear of debris and well-lit to help prevent slips, trips and falls.

Follow safe pumpkin protocol

Keep candles, lit jack-o-lanterns, matches and lighters where children can't reach. Trick-or-treaters in unwieldy costumes - or masks that limit sight - are particularly at risk of brushing against open flames. Use flameless candles if possible.

Beware the brew

Keep a close eye on party guests. Depending on local laws, you could be liable for injuries that partygoers cause to themselves or others while still at your party or driving home. Serve non-alcoholic beverages and food along with your preferred potion. Stop serving alcohol at least one hour before the party ends.

Park it Southport Lions and Anthem Blue Cross and Blue Shield partner for beautification of Southport Park

By Nicole Davis

Anthem Blue Cross and Blue Shield partnered with The Lions Club of Southport Inc. on Oct. 17, with more than 30 volunteers coming to help with landscaping and fall clean-up.

"It worked wonderfully," said AJ Johnson, president Southport Lions. "The Anthem people were extremely pleasant and hard workers. I think they truly enjoyed themselves, judging by the number of people playing on the playground equipment after they were done. Everyone seemed happy. It was a very good experience."

Volunteers painted all of the parking lot bumpers yellow, painted the sheds, the enclosure for the dumpster, did general cleanup of dead wood and debris from along the creek and more.

Southport Park, 6901 Derbyshire Rd., closed to the public from Oct. 12 to 18, allowing for the maintenance department to prep for and lay down 160 cubic yards of mulch – one and a half semi loads, according to Rob Bettcher, head of maintenance. The parks department was awarded a $1,000 grant from Lions Club International which helped purchase some of the mulch.

Southport Park will see more improvements in the coming year, as Renaissance Electronic Services (RES) donated $50,000 to support improvements to accommodate children with disabilities. The Indiana-based business in national dental industry services which announced that it is opening a sixth location in Southport.

In addition to volunteering in the park, the Southport Lions recently donated 10 body cameras to the Southport Police Department. They will sell food and drinks at the city's family-friendly Mardi Gras-themed Halloween Party on Oct. 24, 6 – 9 p.m., with those proceeds going to their general fund which supports community initiatives.

"(The park clean-up) worked out well for the city in terms of making the park look good before this coming Halloween weekend event," Johnson said. "Getting the mulch down was important for the play areas, but the park just looks nicer."

Lawsuit against Beech Grove clerk-treasurer Dan McMillan goes to federal courts

FEATURE

By Bruce C. Smith

Beech Grove Clerk-treasurer Dan McMillan intends to fight in court against a Federal lawsuit that accuses him of being a bully and creating a hostile work environment in City Hall.

Two city employees filed the suit against McMillan and also named the city of Beech Grove as a defendant, since the name-calling and harassment allegedly happened in the municipal building on Main Street. At least eight women have made similar complaints.

His attorney says the timing of the suit appears politically motivated, coming a few weeks before the Nov. 3 election, when McMillan is seeking a second four-year term.

However, this is not the first time for such complaints against McMillan. A separate investigation conducted for the Beech Grove City Council more than a year ago reported similar allegations of verbal harassment, belittling and degrading comments toward women in his office, yelling and rude response to city department heads and to the public. The council sued McMillan last year when he refused to include one of the resignation letters in the minutes of a council meeting.

The new lawsuit was filed Aug. 26 in U.S. District Court in Indianapolis by Julie Lockwood, the administrative assistant to Mayor Dennis Buckley, and also by Linda Mohr, who is a clerk in the city's sanitation department. Both women have worked for the city more than 18 years. Their seven-page suit does not ask for a specific monetary amount but it does ask for back pay and other damages and also for the city to adopt policies and training to prevent more incidents.

Lockwood and Mohr filed complaints last spring with the state Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, claiming sex discrimination and alleging a hostile work environment. In May, the EEOC found that the women could sue.

"McMillan has subjected many women, including Lockwood and Mohr, to harassment, intimidation, yelling and belittling," attorneys Barry A. Macey and Quincy E. Saur claim in the suit they filed on behalf of the two city employees.

Among the incidents cited in the lawsuit is a claim that "McMillan has called Lockwood a pain in the a.. and stated that his goal is to get rid of her. And he prohibited her from entering his (the clerk's) side of the building, where the restroom is located." There are more restrooms on the other side of the building where Lockwood now works with the mayor.

The suit also says McMillan has called Mohr "a liar, and turns his head when he walks by her in the hallway and yells at her in a hostile tone."

McMillan's attorney Karen Celestino-Horseman denied the claims and said, "Dan's a fine man and these allegations are baseless." McMillan could not be reached for comment but his attorney said the timing of the suit seems politically opportunistic. The lawsuit was filed but unnoticed by news media for weeks until copies were distributed recently.

She also pointed to language in the investigation report to the council last year that could be interpreted as "a roadmap" to politically knock McMillan from office in this year's election.

"There are two sides to every story. Dan wants to address these allegations in court. For now, he's trying to run on his record and rise above this mess," she said. "Some people get upset at some belt tightening. But the city has gone from a deficit to a surplus."

Mayor Buckley declined to comment about details in the lawsuit since the city is a defendant. "I'm not privy to the nuts and bolts of the case," he said, adding that he would be "very disappointed" if the allegations of a hostile workplace are proven to be true.

The mayor acknowledged that he has been aware of an unusual number of women leaving their jobs with the city since McMillan came into office in 2012. The council investigation last year reported at least eight resigned or were fired, citing issues with McMillan.

The mayor is seeking re-election but notably is not running alongside fellow Democrat McMillan.

Details of the allegations contained in the seven-page lawsuit are very similar to a nine-page report to the council in June 2014 by attorney Amy J. Adolay with Ogletree Deakins. The law firm was hired by the council to investigate complaints from both men and women claiming to have been verbally abused by McMillan. A three-page redacted version of the report, without names, was released by the council in July 2014. The full report, including names, was confidential until recently, when it became a public document through the state's open records law.

At least 14 men and women were interviewed in that investigation. Nearly all of them reported second-hand or personal experience with a pattern of behavior particularly directed toward women in City Hall, but also toward men and women department heads, top brass in the police and fire departments, the director of the senior services agency, vendors to the city and the public.

The report said McMillan was overheard "yelling at the top of his voice" at the city's traffic court judge in a closed-door meeting with the mayor. Top ranking police and fire officials said they tried to avoid McMillan as much as possible because of his repeated abusive behavior.

The council report disclosed that at least eight women left jobs with the city claiming to have been victims of harassment, intimidation, discrimination and belittling from McMillan. Men and women told the council's investigator that workers in the office would often appear upset and crying.

Nick Roll

Firefighter says he couldn't image a day that he didn't work for Greenwood Fire

BEHIND the BADGE

Serving at Station 91 in Greenwood is where Nick Roll says he feels most at home.

Having graduated from Ivy Tech with a degree in fire science in 2001, he began working part-time for the Greenwood Fire Department in 2002. In 2007 he was hired full-time to the fire department in Franklin, still maintaining his part-time status in Greenwood. He left Franklin last year to go full-time in Greenwood.

"This is where I started, where I learned to do the job," Roll said. "I was 21 when I started here. I've stayed here in some capacity for the past 13 years. I really couldn't see a time that I didn't work at Greenwood Fire Department. I like the size of the city. The whole city of Greenwood is put together nice as far as moving forward. I like the atmosphere here."

Roll is a 1998 graduate of Southport High School, currently residing in Franklin Township with his wife, Jamie and three children, Chase, Keeley and Teagan.

What was your inspiration to become a police officer/firefighter?

I was kind of lost after high school. I tried a couple of different things. I went to Ivy Tech for automotive. I did a semester there and worked a semester for Ford at a dealership. There was nothing wrong with the job. It just wasn't for me. I was looking at different options and got a book on majors from Ivy Tech. I saw fire science program listed there. I talked to the head of the program; I didn't know anyone in it at the time. It felt like it was just what I was looking for. I liked the team aspect. I played football in high school and was missing that after I graduated. I found a job where I could be part of a team and make a difference. I enrolled at Ivy Tech and got fire science degree.

What has been one of your most gratifying moments on the job?

Helping people. I feel like people call us at their weakest moments and we show up trying to make a difference. Not everything we do is a true emergency but those people called us for a reason. They were calling out for help and we show up and try to make their day better. It's gratifying to know that's what I do for a living. It's the little things and it's the big things.

What aspect of the job do you find most challenging?

Besides the obvious, the bad runs, the most challenging is missing my family. We are here every third day. I have three kids and a wife. It seems I'm always missing a baseball game, birthdays, holidays. It's hard on my wife. Life doesn't stop just because I'm here. We make it work.

What do you enjoy doing in your off-time?

I like spending time with my kids. Two aren't in school so I'll watch them. I try to spend as much family time as I can.

What are your future goals, professionally or personally?

Professionally, to continue to grow as a fire fighter, take classes, grow in my job and career.

What would you have done if you hadn't of become a police officer/firefighter?

I was lost when I found this. I didn't have a second option. Maybe construction or landscaping.

Oldest Living Person with Down syndrome is in Greenwood

In honor of October, Down Syndrome Awareness Month, Down Syndrome Indiana (DSI) recognizes Martha "Marsie" Mathauer. Marsie is believed to be the oldest living individual with Down syndrome in the State of Indiana. Life expectancy for people with Down syndrome has increased dramatically in recent decades. When Marsie was born in 1935, individuals with Down syndrome weren't expected to live past 9 or 10 years old. In 1983, an individual with Down syndrome had a life expectancy of 25 to 30 years. Today, the life expectancy is 60. Yet, Marsie, a resident at University Heights Health and Living Center in Greenwood, has surpassed all odds and celebrated her 80th birthday this past July. Family members describe her as, "such a blessing to all who meet her. She has gifted all of us with her humor, laughter and kind heart." For more information, visit dsindiana.org.

Hillview Country Club and Scotty's Brew House struck up a one-of-a-kind partnership this year when they formed Scotty's Brew Club. The franchise restaurant opened on July 27 inside of the clubhouse, 1800 E. King St., Franklin.

"The distinction is we don't do exactly what Scotty's Brew House does," said General Manager, Terry Moberly, Greenwood resident. "That's more of a college club in a small community. We have to cater to a different crowd. We added steaks. We have a more extensive wine menu. With this balance, we're trying to be respectful to our roots and our clientele who want a little more grand dining experience."

Scotty's Brew Club will host a week-long grand opening celebration from Oct. 26 –

Nov. 1. Included in the celebration, they will have activities for children on Oct. 27, 5 – 7 p.m. with face painting, pumpkin painting, Darth Vader and Tinkerbell appearances and gummy worms; the public is invited to watch the Thursday night football game between the Patriots and Dolphins on Oct. 29; Oct. 30 the Franklin Fire Department will come with its fire truck from 5 – 7 p.m. when Fire house Chili will be served for $4, a hay ride around the golf course will take place 5 – 9 p.m. and corn hole tournament at 6 p.m.; and a Haunted Ribbon Cutting will happen on Oct. 31, 4 p.m. with live music beginning 8 p.m.

"Once you find us, you will love us," Moberly said.

Perry Township Colts fan with autism chosen to be MVP

Seventeen-year-old Matthew Hovey is so excited about seeing his favorite NFL players – Andrew Luck, Robert Mathis, Pat McAfee and Anthony Costanzo – in person that, a couple of weeks ago, he made a paper chain to help him count down the days. Now he's down to the last few links on that chain. He'll be at Lucas Oil Stadium to see the Colts play the New Orleans Saints on Oct. 25. Thanks to his hard work and a partnership between the Colts and Damar Services, Matthew will arrive in style, catching a ride in a limo before getting the full MVP treatment at Lucas Oil Stadium.

Diagnosed at a young age with autism spectrum disorder, Asperger's Syndrome and a variety of other issues, Matthew receives help and treatment at Damar Residential Services. Since being placed there about two years ago, he's made tremendous improvements. That's been a huge relief to his parents, Chris and Bonnie Hovey of Perry Township, because there was a time when Matthew's outbursts and tendency to run away meant it was no longer safe for him to live at home.

This won't be the first time Matthew and Chris have seen the Colts, but it will be their first real game. Long-time fans, they attended a preseason game a few years ago, and Chris has also taken his son to a Dwight Freeney camp, a father-son camp with former coach Tony Dungy, and even a celebrity softball game that featured Colts players. Matthew has a collection of Colts autographs. Matt will be joined at the game by his parents and his Damar counselor, Richard Njeri.

Nativity Students Experience Fantasy Club

Seventeen Nativity Catholic School Students in grades 5-8 took part in a first-of-its-kind club during Quarter One: Geek Out! The club was designed for boys and girls who are fans of Harry Potter, Doctor Who, Percy Jackson, the Mortal Instruments, comic books, anime, etc. Each of these is commonly called a "fandom."

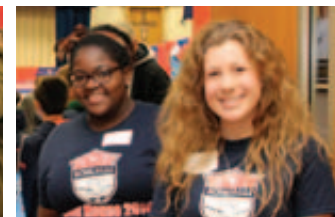

Over the course of six meetings, the students played a competitive card game in which they debated which "fandom" character would prevail in a battle; wrote and/or illustrated a fanfiction story based on a randomly generated topic; created their own superheroes and origin stories; and shared prize possessions during show and tell.

The culminating activity was a game of Quidditch, the wizard sport in the Harry Potter series. With the help of several families, a Quidditch pitch went up on the football field behind the school. Club moderator Mr. Boyle, the middle school literature teacher, got the idea for Geek Out! from his hometown library.

Club member, 8th grader Erin Rooney, holds a trophy she won during one of the club's games.

Be an inhospitable host

NUTRITION

By Chef Wendell Fowler

Flu season is here. No one deserves being sick. It sucks. Well then, today's the perfect time to begin to fortify your Department of Defense (DOD).

Everyone has a DOD: the immune system. But it requires quality tools to get the job done. A strong immune system doesn't just happen. If you're building a football team and draft poor players then don't be disappointed when you lose the game. Quality food infinitely trumps the convenient process food that screams "Buy Me!"

If you get sick frequently in winter, more than likely you're doing something wrong or unaware how food can affect immunity. In my opinion, Flu season is not a season as much as it is an inability for your body to adapt due to decreased sun exposure, inferior nutrition, water intake, combined with sugar intake and holiday stress.

Show yourself some love. Create health and you create resistance! Start taking Vitamin D-3, the sunshine vitamin, get regular exercise and sunshine, cut back on sugar and white flour, keep hydrated, chill out, avoid stressful people and situations, get plenty of rest, frequently wash your hands, and by all means possible, feed and fuel your temple real food. Preparing fresh healthy meals instead of processed food is an act of love towards yourself and those for whom you cook. Eating well is your best defense.

Foods that fuel immunity: Citrus, garlic, shiitake and Maitake mushrooms, ginger and turmeric tea, sweet potato, dark greens, yellow fall squash, dark leafy greens, red peppers. Steele cut or whole Oats with their beta-glucan, more potent than Echinacea, according to studies. Not instant, although. Almonds have Vitamin E and pumpkin seeds contain zinc that supports your DOD. Include fermented probiotic foods like Kombucha tea, kefir, Korean kimchi or yogurts that don't contain sugar or fruit.

Foods that trash Immunity: #1 Sugar, AP flour, white rice, minute rice or instant oatmeal, soft drinks, bottled fruit juices, Mac and cheese, burgers and fries, biscuits and gravy, pancakes and syrup, fried chicken and fish and alcohol. Stress, anger and hostility suppress your immune system too. As you can see, it's your favorite friends that are betraying you. Is that Little Debbie and plate of pancakes really worth a lost, sucky week of misery? To perform its important job, please understand you must fuel your temple with the heavenly tools provided by a generous God: food from nature, not a factory.

Bridge of Spies... Hanks shines

MOVIE REVIEW

By Adam Staten

There are very few actors and directors more accomplished than Tom Hanks and Steven Spielberg. Hanks has starred in some of the most memorable films of all-time. Along the way, he's managed to capture two best actor Oscar awards and countless other honors. Spielberg, a three-time Oscar winner, has directed such iconic films as Saving Private Ryan, Schindler's List and E.T. the Extra-Terrestrial. The two titans of the film world team up once again for the recently released, Bridge of Spies.

Bridge of Spies is the true story of an American lawyer, James Donovan (Hanks), who is given the unenviable task of defending a man accused of spying for the Soviet Union during the height of the Cold War. Donovan insists on providing his client the best possible defense even when the jury and the judge in the case are convinced of the accused's guilt even before the case gets underway.

The man is ultimately found guilty of espionage. The judge hands down a sentence of time in prison rather than the death penalty as a result of the repeated requests of Donovan. Soon after, Donovan's foreseen scenario plays itself out; an American is captured in Russia and charged with espionage. Donovan quickly finds himself in a chess match with the Soviets and the Germans as he attempts to negotiate an exchange of citizens accused of spying on the others country.

Bridge of Spies is an extremely straightforward story. What you see is what you get and there are no real surprises. Everything that happens throughout is fairly predictable, especially the first half hour or so. The film's story is so direct and kind of been-there-done that that it does tend to get a bit boring in a few places.

However, Hanks does more than enough to keep Bridge of Spies moving forward and interesting. Some of the best scenes of the entire movie happen in the early portion of the film. The verbal exchanges and the level of acting on display between Hanks and the man playing the Soviet spy is a sight to behold. While it may not be an Oscar-winning performance, Hanks' work in Bridge of Spies is the best element of the entire film.

While Bridge of Spies is not the best film of the year, you could certainly do much, much worse at the theater. It is an above average film with a very strong lead performance.

WHERE I DINE

Stephanie Garland, Juice Plus+, a home based business. sgarland.juiceplus.com

Where do you like to dine? Suzy's Teahouse & Bakery in Franklin. It is wonderful.

What do you like to eat there? They have gluten free doughnuts. Who has gluten free doughnuts? They also have gluten free quiche.

What do you like about this place? It is a cute little place that is fairly new. Everything they make from doughnuts, to tarts, to soup, to quiche are all gluten free. That is a wonderful thing. The food is non GMO, not genetically altered in any way. It is just a quaint little, small little place. Just hometown.

Suzy's Teahouse & Bakery is located at 25 E Court St., Franklin, IN 46131. The phone number is (317) 739-0800.

Adam Staten lives in Perry Township and is a movie buff. Staten graduated from University of Southern Indiana with a degree in Communication Studies.

Weekly Devotion

"But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you. Take therefore no thought for the morrow: for the morrow shall take thought for the things of itself. Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof." ~ Matthew 6:33-34

The kingdom of God, where is it and how does one seek it if it doesn't already exist? Two very important questions for those who seem to believe it has not arrived yet and who expect it to arrive sometime in the future when Jesus returns for a second time. But, Jesus said, "Seek...the kingdom of God." If He said we were to seek it, then, that means that it is locatable. That means we can find it.

In no less than 11 different passages in the New Testament Jesus said, "The kingdom of God is..." Now, "is" is a present tense verb. In Romans 14:17 Paul wrote these words which will help us in our understanding what the kingdom of God is and what form it takes in today's world: "For the kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost." Jesus had previously told us in this sermon delivered on the mount that if a man was to hunger and thirst after righteousness, he would be filled. Paul then writes to echo what Jesus said in that the kingdom of God is righteousness, peace, and joy. The righteousness Paul speaks of is God's righteousness so if one wants to find the kingdom of God they have to seek the God of the kingdom and seek to live a life of God's righteousness. In order to have that righteousness one must receive it from the Lord. How does one get it? By and through the Holy Ghost of Christ Jesus. When one finds Jesus Christ and accepts Him as their personal savior then God forgives them of their sins and cleanses them from all unrighteousness.

God bless and go and have a great day.

EDWARD MCDONALD

BEECH GROVE MAYOR

Dear Beech Grove Citizens,

“The relationship between our City Government and our Citizens need to change. We need to work together for the betterment of Beech Grove. When the election is over, we need to put our party affiliation aside and all work together as Citizens of Beech Grove. We must set aside past grudges and quarrels to focus solely on the betterment of Beech Grove.

Citizen involvement is vital to a successful local government. I want to invite the Citizens of Beech Grove to actively take part in the City government. I want Citizens to have more involvement than just attending a City Hall meeting. I want to invite Citizens to be involved in the decision making about our City’s budget, about our City’s direction, and about our City’s progress. I want to invite Citizens to share their opinions...both good and bad. I want to invite Citizens to share their ideas and thoughts. I will be the first to admit that I don’t have all of the answers. However, I guarantee you that one of the Citizens of Beech Grove will have the answer if I don’t”.

God Bless The United States of America!

Respectfully,

Edward A. McDonald
Lieutenant – Colonel, United States Army, Retired
Candidate for Beech Grove

CITIZEN NOT POLITICIAN

“Beech Grove is a great place to live. But I know that by working together we can make it better. My goal is to keep the “small town feel” of Beech Grove intact while improving our City to make it better for all Citizens and businesses. I will work hard to solve current problems, grow our economy, and enhance the reputation of our City. I understand that taxpayers’ money is sacred so I will spend money wisely and efficiently.” -Edward McDonald

“The Secret is to gang up on the problem, rather than each other”
