SOUTHSIDE UNDER CONSTRUCTION

Southside construction update

Shelby Street to experience phased resurfacing, State Road 37 updates

Compiled by Nicole Davis

Does it seem every route you take, there's construction either causing a traffic jam or making you detour? With so much happening at the moment, it may be hard to keep up. Each week through the "construction season," The Southside Times will share about some local projects to keep you in the know.

As always, be mindful of our construction workers and drive safely!

• Far Southside: Beginning, May 23, the Indianapolis Department of Public Works (Indy DPW) expects to begin work on approximately $2.1 million in phased resurfacing, full depth patching and connectivity improvements on Shelby Street between Southeastern Avenue and Prospect Street. In the first phase, Shelby Street will close between Southeastern Avenue and Bates Street. Prospect Street, English Avenue, and Southeastern Avenue will remain open during the closure. This segment of Shelby Street is expected to reopen in mid-June. Traffic will be detoured using Southeastern Avenue, State Street, English Avenue, Fletcher Avenue, College Avenue, Washington Street and Southeastern Avenue. Access to properties and businesses will be maintained during construction. When complete, Shelby Street will feature rehabilitated road surfaces, ADA-compliant ramps, limited sidewalk replacement, drainage enhancements between Southeastern Avenue and Prospect Street, as well as road profile improvements to the at-grade railroad crossing south of Bates Street. For more information, visit indy.gov/dpw.

• State Road 37: The road will soon shift to the elevated pavement and bridges between Southport Road and Fairview Road in Johnson County, starting with southbound traffic on or after Thursday. Traffic will no longer stop for traffic signals at Wicker Road

 Southport: Indianapolis engineers looked at the bridge near Main Street and Derbyshire Road and came up with a plan to temporarily repair the bridge for this year. The work is now complete. The bridge is slated to be replaced next year. (City of Southport Police Department)

Greenwood native Blanca Osorio-Ortega selected as Indy 500 Festival Princess As a first-generation Mexican American, Osorio-Ortega shares her passion for family and education

By Todd Travis

A passion for education

Being selected as one of this year's Indy 500 Festival princesses has given Blanca Osorio-Ortega a platform to share her story and to serve her community. One important area that is close to Osorio-Ortega's heart is education. As a first-generation Mexican American, she has heard firsthand how her mother struggled in Mexico without access to education. "I just found it really sad," said Osorio-Ortega. "Being in the United States, I can attend school. It's something that children need. They need a place to make friends and get an education and be inspired, not just from their parents but from the educators as well," she continued. Osorio-Ortega has a deep appreciation for all of her teachers and the Greenwood school system. "There are teachers that have spoken life over me and given me really awesome advice. Greenwood schools have great teachers, and I know that they really care about their students," she added. As part of the 500 Princess Program, she was able to go back and visit her elementary school and see many of the teachers that she admired as a young girl.

Greenwood community

Growing up in Greenwood, Osorio-Ortega enjoyed all of the benefits the town has to offer. Besides the great education she received, she also appreciated the outdoor events, libraries and parks, and the welcoming community feel that she experienced. She served on the student council in high school and enjoyed planning homecoming, spirit week and other school events. She loved to read and always participated in summer reading programs. Her favorite book is "Mister and Me" which tells the story of a young girl who looks up to her teacher. "It really resonates with me because I love all the past teachers I've had. I've always had a really good bond with them," Osorio-Ortega mentioned. She is now attending the University of Indianapolis where she double majors in political science and international relations with a minor in communications. She also writes for the school paper called "The Reflector."

Overcoming obstacles

While she enjoyed all the opportunities that growing up in Greenwood offered, Osorio-Ortega also experienced some hardships which have inspired her to want to help others and make a difference in her community. One thing that influenced her was seeing the difficulties her mother experienced as a single mom. "That was really hard starting off because as a young child, I really saw her struggle. It really affected me and made me want to do better for my future family but also with my mom and siblings," Osorio-Ortega said. "I also want my mom to know that the sacrifices she made were not going to go unnoticed and I appreciate everything she's done." She also noticed from a young age that many of the other students were in a better economic position. Rather than becoming bitter, she looked for the silver lining in her situation. "In a way, it helped me get comfortable when I walk into a room. There are differences, but I can look past that and try to get to know people on a personal level," she explained. "At the end of the day I think people appreciate when you talk to them and want to get to know them."

Indy 500 Festival Princess Program, presented by The National Bank of Indianapolis

Osorio-Ortega's attitude and approach to life have made her a perfect choice to be an Indy 500 princess. The Indy 500 Festival Princess Program, presented by The National Bank of Indianapolis, celebrates Indiana's most civic-minded, academically driven young women. She heard about the program through a friend who is a former princess. While on a zoom call to support her friend, she was surprised to hear about the many benefits the program provided. "When I heard that it was about going out and doing outreaches and being part of the community rather than just being a pageant, I started to become interested in the program," Osorio-Ortega recalled. "The fact that it was about bringing in your education and background, becoming a leader and representing your school the Indy 500 really resonated with me. As a young girl, everyone wants to be successful, but I think it starts with being authentic and helping your community, and I think this program does a great job of that," she continued. Osorio-Ortega and the other princesses will conduct more than 1,500 community outreaches impacting more than 50,000 people, expanding the celebration and impact of the Indianapolis 500 in a meaningful way.

Big plans for the future

Osorio-Ortega plans to take this experience and learn as much as possible as she plans her future. One of her goals is to eventually become governor of Indiana. "I love Indiana. I love the idea that you can become part of communities around the state and bring a vision to life that will make Indiana become even stronger than it already is," she said. "We are very diverse. I have had the opportunity to meet people from so many various backgrounds because of UIndy's international programs. While Osorio-Ortega prepares to run for office, she plans to spend time overseas and working for nonprofits. "Once I graduate, my doors really open so much. My whole life I've been planning to do all these things and now that I'm graduating, I feel that I can finally do them," she said.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Perry Schools superintendent gives thanks to the Perry Township community

I would like to express my sincerest "Thank You" for passing the Operating Referendum. The dollars received will allow us to keep our education programs in place and to keep quality teachers in our classrooms. As the fifth largest school district in the state with over 16,300 students, many services are needed to adequately educate our students. State funding for urban school districts and schools with high poverty continues to lag behind the cost of services. In these situations, it is vital for a community to understand the importance of funding schools properly. The state has given school districts a referendum process to solve these inadequate funding problems. It is a very decisive process that causes community members to take sides. Perry Township residents conducted a respectful conversation on funding programs and resources for our students.

This "Yes" vote reaffirms our community's desire for a strong school system, one that grows students academically and provides them with many opportunities for a successful future.

Strong Schools = A Strong Community!

Sincerely, Patrick W. Mapes Superintendent Perry Township Schools

Every week, we aim to share the best of the Southside community sharing the stories of people who make a difference every day.

What stories in the community deserve to be told?

Greenwood's Veenhuizen receives Certificate of Distinction from Purdue Ag Alumni Association

Agriculture - Eight leaders from across the fields of agriculture were recognized with the Purdue Agricultural Alumni Association's highest honor – the Certificate of Distinction – during the Ag Alumni Fish Fry in April. The Certificate of Distinction is presented annually to professionals who have contributed to agriculture, forestry or natural resources through career accomplishments, organizational involvement, community service and other activities. Included, Michael A. Veenhuizen, of Greenwood, is president of Livestock Engineering Solutions Inc., earning a national reputation while providing site planning, design expertise and professional consultancy for all aspects of manure handling. Malcom DeKryger, president and CEO of Belstra Milling Co. and Belstra Group Farms and a trustee of Purdue, said that in the more than two decades he has worked with Veenhuizen, his integrity about doing the right thing is one of the greatest compliments he could give. "A livestock producer is faced with many challenges on an annual/seasonal/daily basis. Mike's understanding of the crossroads between design, construction, operation and compliance prevented many problems and raised the professionalism of Indiana's producers," DeKryger said. "We always knew that if anyone questioned our design by Mike that he would stand alongside and defend our dreams with intelligence and integrity.

Eskenazi Health expands focus on social determinants of health

Nydia Nunez-Estrada, M.D. Family Medicine Specialist at Eskenazi Health Center North Arlington

Many of us are unaware that social determinants have a major impact on health outcomes – especially for the most vulnerable populations, and Eskenazi Health understands the positive or negative impact an individual's zip code has on their life expectancy.

The World Health Organization defines social determinants as "the conditions in which people are born, grow, work, live and age, and the wider set of forces and systems shaping the conditions of daily life." In other words, social determinants are non-medical factors that may greatly impact a person's health.

Eskenazi Health has a long history of programs that focus on improving social determinants of health. These programs address such things as food as medicine, mental wellness, healthy lifestyles, transportation and connectivity, housing, safe living environments and economic opportunities.

In general, people from poorer social or economic circumstances are at greater risk of poor health, have higher rates of illness, disability and death, and live shorter lives than those who are more advantaged. Generally, every step up the socioeconomic ladder is accompanied by an increase in better health.

For more than 160 years, Eskenazi Health has continued to find and support new ways to address social determinants of health affecting the patients and communities it serves. In keeping with Eskenazi Health's dedication to its patients, the community health worker role was created. Community health workers have become a very useful resource; specifically

Vola Nuñez-Estrada, M.D.

ESKENA ZI

Nydia Nunez-Estrada, M.D. (Submitted photo) for individuals with little to no social support, homebound patients and the elderly.

Eskenazi Health community health workers meet one-on-one with patients at designated Eskenazi Health center locations and patient homes to enhance an individual's understanding and adherence to treatment protocols, identify potential social determinants of health and help patients set and achieve their self-management goals.

During their time with patients, Eskenazi Health community health workers conduct welfare or safety checks, distribute medical supplies, assist with blood pressure or blood sugar checks, support social and emotional needs, help patients get back on track with the correct medication under the guidance of health care providers, provide resources and solutions by recommending and enrolling patients in available programs and educate patients on COVID-19 vaccines.

Playing a vital role in bridging the gap between patients and their health care providers is one of the major roles of Eskenazi Health community health care workers, who strive to create and maintain positive relationships while becoming a valued resource for health care education.

Through focusing on social determinants of health for patients Eskenazi Health serves, the goal is for those individuals to live healthier and longer lives, which cannot be achieved without the hard work of our highly trained and dedicated community health workers.

With recent funding from Direct Relief, a California-based humanitarian organization, the Centers for Disease Control and

I.U. School of Medicine

Prevention and other groups, Eskenazi Health has doubled the community health worker staff in its primary care health system and created a specialized internal training onboarding process.

COACH AND SPECIAL EDUCATION Being a coach and a special ed teacher, Ms. Schrader works with several different groups of students. To best show how much she means to us, the eighth-grade class conducted interviews with several of the students that she works with and this is what they had to say about her:

The students that Ms. Schrader works with in third-grade all agree that she is a very kind and caring person. When interviewed, the third-grade students all shared memories of Ms. Schrader helping them with their math and in learning new things. They all agreed that she pushes them to do their best. One student even said that Ms. Schrader is his favorite teacher.

Ms. Schrader's fourth-grade students all said magnificent thoughts about her. They believe that she is the most heartwarming and encouraging soul there is. One fourth-grader said, "Ms. Schrader has always pushed me to do my best and has always been there to motivate me through every step of the way." Each and every one of them was thankful to have Ms. Schrader here, and they were thankful for her kindness and support.

Her middle school students students in particular were thankful for her skills in teaching them ELA and math. They were thankful for her ability to break things down and make difficult concepts more manageable. They found her to be supportive in academics, but also in difficult life events they were experiencing. They appreciate how fun and dependable she is saying, "she is always there when I need help even after school." All agreed that she is a "kind, gentle, and loving person." Overall, she is a fun teacher that "spends time with me to help me out."

In addition to being a supportive teacher in the classroom, Ms. Schrader is also a dedicated coach for our cross country and track programs. Her athletes all seem to know that she is a coach who is going to push her athletes to be their very best selves both in the classroom and when they run. One of her student athletes in the fourth grade when asked about what it's like to be on the cross country team said, "She pushes me to do my work at school. She helps me in cross country by motivating me when I feel like not running. She makes me better."

Miss Annie Schrader has done an excellent job during her three years at CCS serving the students both in the classroom and as a coach. She is always willing to help whenever, and wherever, she is needed during the school day. A tireless advocate for our students, you can always find her cheering on our kids and supporting them on their path to college and heaven. Thank you, Ms. Schrader.

Bob Rohrman's INDY Athlete of the Month HONDA Keegan Rothrock

By Mark Ambrogi

Keagan Rothrock is rated by MaxPreps as the No. 1 high school player in her class of 2023.

Known primarily for her strengths as a pitcher, Roncalli High School softball coach David Lauck said the junior has worked hard to become a better hitter all around while maintaining her pitching prowess.

Entering the sectional action May 23, Rothrock was hitting .530 with 12 home runs and 46 runs batted in for the unbeaten Royals.

"She struck out only one time in almost 90 at-bats," Lauck said. "She is one of our toughest outs at the plate. She is extremely focused and uses the whole field."

The power increase is noticeable as Rothrock hit .442 with three homers for the Royals (31-2) in 2021.

"She has definitely added more power in that swing, and some of those home runs have been monster shots," Lauck said. "She is physically better in shape and mentally at the plate, she is more comfortable."

Rothrock said she concentrated on working with her hitting instructor, Grant Bellak, Hanover College head baseball coach.

"We worked on breaking down my swing and finding the spots in my swing where it could be Keagan Rothrock has been dominating on the mound and at the plate for Roncalli. (Photo by John Smith) better and could be smoother," she said. "I worked on that a lot in the winter inside."

Prior to May 23, Rothrock had a 22-0 record with a 0.81 earned run average. She had 305 strikeouts in 130 1/3 innings. Last year she had 364 strikeouts in 160 1/3 innings with a 24-2 record and a 0.13 ERA.

"I feel I've improved all around (as a pitcher)," she said. "My pitching coach and I have focused on improving the little stuff, and I think it's really improved all around."

Lauck said some games Rothrock has been frustrated by consistency of location of her pitches.

"But her pitches have kept us in every game," Lauck said. "She is averaging 2.2 strikeouts per inning. That makes it a lot easier on our defense when they might have the ball in play four or five times in a game. What I'm most impressed with is the target that has been on her back all year long. Everyone is practicing for weeks just to get ready for Keagan. That wasn't the case last year where she might have caught teams by surprise how she jumped on the scene and dominated."

Rothrock said the team is confident about defending its Class 4A state title. "Obviously, there are still things we need to work on as a team," she said. "There are things we can be better at or cleaner with. We are working together to play as a team. We know we have a big, big target on our back. We're really focusing on playing loose, playing together, playing for each other rather than going out there and thinking ahead.

"We're playing in the moment. We're going to play the game like we know how and, hopefully, kick some butt."

Rothrock was named the 2021 Extra Inning Softball National High School Player of the Year.

Rothrock isn't the type of person to seek attention, but she said she deals with it well. "I love talking with people," she said.

Lauck said Rothrock is a great teammate.

"She is adored by her teammates and our Roncalli softball families," he said. "That's just a testament to her unselfishness. She puts a great value in her high school experience."

Dick Johnson Is Dead A spectacular rumination on life, death, documentary filmmaking and memory

MOVIE REVIEW

By Bradley Lane

Kirsten Johnson has been a cinematographer for documentary films for nearly 30 years and just recently began to direct films herself in 2016 with her debut feature film, Cameraperson. This was a self-reflective work focused on how the process of filming a documentary affected the subjects of those films she had worked on throughout her career. Johnson's newest film continues her meta-textual streak while injecting a healthy dose of personal vulnerability into that equation, with a killer elevator pitch to boot. Dick Johnson Is Dead is a film, about making a film, about the death of her best friend and father, C. Richard Johnson as he suffers with memory loss in his twilight years in real life.

The fictional film being made about her father dying is framed not as a serious look back on his life, but rather a morbid slapstick comedy. We do learn about Dick Johnson as the film goes on, but the fictional sections are entirely invented. Kirsten Johnson creates elaborate set pieces involving stunt work, special effects and movie magic to repeatedly film her father dying in increasingly funny ways. However, as the movie plays out it becomes apparent that the seemingly silly content of the fictional scenes begins to carry layered meaning both to Kirsten and her father. Where the genius lies in the film is the way the documentary is edited to slowly reveal the different aspects of its themes and ideas to dazzling emotional effectiveness.

The film opens straight forward enough by introducing the characters and the premise in as plain as terms as possible. One thing becomes abundantly clear in these first few minutes and that is that Kirsten loves her father dearly and is terribly heartbroken to see him go. This early revelation sets up the question that leads to all others as the film plays out:

why make a fictional movie about a real person? Why not just make a documentary about his life? I would never spoil your good time by answering this question for you, but the film delivers a gut punch of an answer about halfway through that gives way to one of the most complex documentaries I've ever seen.

Johnson is grappling with so many ideas in this film on paper that from the outside it might look like it is a purely academic exercise. Her examinations of the nature of memory versus documentation, the cruelty of loss and mental degradation and the ethics of documentary filmmaking are directly addressed in ways that are sure to inspire rigorous debates amongst her audience, but Johnson's greatest trick is that every moment of Dick Johnson Is Dead is teaming with humanity and warmth.

It's a wonderful magic trick that Johnson can pull off being so emotionally open to her audience while simultaneously working to layer in complex ideas about the nature of what it means to be documented, all the while making a meaningful and loving tribute to her father. It's a special film that is endlessly ambitious and accomplishes everything is sets out to do and more. Dick Johnson is Dead is available to stream on Netflix.

Bradley is a Beech Grove High School alumnus and has been enamored by film for as long as he can remember. He recently graduated from IUPUI, with a degree in Media and Public Affairs with a minor in Film. Bradley can be contacted at blane2214@gmail.com.

This summer treat's a sure bet

GRAMMAR GUY

By Curtis Honeycutt

Who doesn't like a good ice cream cone during summer? Lactose intolerant people. Intolerance aside, I want everyone to be able to stomach this column, so I'll do my best to steer clear of Bessie.

Today I'm tackling the words sherbet, sherbert and sorbet.

First of all, what is sorbet? Sorbet is a frozen dessert made from frozen water and juice. That's it. No dairy. And it's pronounced the way you would talk about the Chesapeake Bay if someone punched it over and over: sore-bay. The word sorbet is derived from the Arabic verb "sariba" (to drink). Interestingly, we also get the words sherbet/sherbert and syrup from sariba.

I know I promised to avoid dairy in this column, but we have to discuss sherbet, which is basically all the coldness of ice cream without any of the taste. Yes, sherbet does contain milk. Start with a pureed base of fruit and sugar, add some cream or milk, and then freeze. However, make sure that your frozen concoction contains between 1 and 2% dairy fat, or it can't be considered sherbet.

I don't know about you, but I grew up calling sherbet "sherbert." As in, "Sure, Burt ol' buddy, I will go to the park to feed pigeons with you." As I evolved from Bookish Boy into Grammar Guy, I just knew that "sherbert" was incorrect and that "sherbet" (pronounced sherbit) was correct.

They're both technically correct.

I told you I didn't want to be intolerant (lactose or otherwise) today. Yes, both spellings and pronunciations of sherbet and sherbert are correct. Although "sherbet" is the overwhelmingly more common spelling, both spellings came about when the word was adapted into English around the early 17th century. "Sherbet" (the spelling and the pronunciation) is much more common. Although the Oxford English Dictionary considers "sherbert" a misspelling of "sherbet," I side with the U.S.based people at Merriam-Webster who see "sherbert" as a lesser-used variant of

"sherbet."

Don't snooze on popular culture to throw a wrench into things, though: remember the 1939 Tommy Dorsey hit "Shoot the Sherbert to Me Herbert"? This late-30's earworm used "sherbert" to rhyme with "Herbert." This song was undoubtedly inspired by the late-20's jazz rag "I Scream, You Scream, We All Scream for Ice Cream." The lyrics even nod to the lactose-heavy song that drove the youngsters mad in the 1920s. I think the "sherbert" pronunciation owes at least some of its lesser-used popularity to this song.

So, whatever your flavor this summer, make sure to go easy on people who say "sherbert," as they aren't technically wrong.

Weekly Devotion

My prayer is not that you take them out of the world but that you protect them from the evil one.

JOHN 17:15

Have you ever wondered why we don't just leave this world of woe behind once we open our eyes to the reality of a Kingdom of God? What possible reason could there be for us to endure the suffering of this world once we have been adopted into the family of God? As a pastor I must be prepared to answer questions such as these. I was still new to the ministry when a senior pastor saw that I was struggling with all the sadness I saw as a criminal investigator. I had dealt with death penalty and life without parole cases for years, and I desperately needed a change of scenery. Spending so much time in small jail cells with concrete floors, gray block walls and steel bunkbeds was taking its toll on my spirit. He invited me to accompany him to a pastors' retreat held in the scenic hills of southern Indiana, and I gladly accepted. The campgrounds were as beautiful as I had hoped they would be. I could hardly wait to see the cabin where I would stay. I grabbed my bag and as I rounded the corner, I was quite surprised at what I found waiting for me. I opened the heavy steel door to the small block building and walked into what was the exact configuration of a jail cell. There I stood on the concrete floor, next to the steel bunk bed, staring at the exact same gray block walls I had hoped to escape. It was clear to me that God wanted me to experience and to overcome the very suffering that I hoped to inspire others to endure.
