Perseverance pays off for Greenwood teacher

Andrice Tucker uses his experience to teach his students to never give up

By Todd Travis

A big surprise

Last week Andrice Tucker, an automotive technology teacher at Central Nine Career Center, was surprised with the presentation of the 2022 Harbor Freight Tools for Schools Prize for Teaching Excellence – along with a $50,000 check. Central Nine's high school skilled trades program will receive $35,000, and Tucker will receive $15,000. On what he thought was going to be a normal Tuesday, Andrice received an award he had been pursuing for over two years.

"This year in particular, they had things set up for me. They even had my family there, and my wife kept it a secret because they all knew ahead of time. So they just told me they need a photo-op, which is pretty standard. But when I walked over, they had the balloons and cameras out there and everything," Tucker remembered.

About the award

The Harbor Freight Tools for Schools Prize for Teaching Excellence was started in 2017 by Eric Smidt, the founder of national tool retailer Harbor Freight Tools, to recognize outstanding instruction in the skilled trades in U.S. public high schools and the teachers who inspire students to learn skills to prepare for life after graduation. The 2022 prize drew a record 768 applications from all 50 states and included three rounds of judging, each by an independent panel of experts from industry, education, trades, philanthropy and civic leadership.

Out of those applicants, Tucker was one of just 20 winners for this prize.

Never giving up

"This award really meant something to me because to get it, I had to keep trying. I told my students that I didn't just get the award in one time, so it's important for them too to keep trying at whatever they're doing because eventually they can succeed," Tucker expressed.

Returning to his roots

The Central Nine Career Center means a lot to Tucker because he was also a student there himself growing up. After working with Firestone for 14 years he was given the opportunity to come back to Central Nine and teach. His goal upon returning was to try and help push the program to get even better.

"I wanted to get away from the idea of just standing in front of the students and talking. I wanted to show them examples, get them up to be active and doing as many labs as possible to get those concepts down. I basically turned it into more of a 70/30 perspective as far as lab vs. class," Tucker explained.

"I think some of the success of this concept has shown itself by the number of interns we've had out and the amount of partners we have now in the industry all down US-31," he added.

Making an impact

In addition to the different trades that students learn at Central Nine, part of the goal is to make students marketable and employable.

"We don't just teach them the programs – we teach them discipline, attendance, showing up on time. A lot of things that help them out really in any trade they end up in. At the end, making them marketable and employable is what gives the big impact in this program," Tucker described.

One important message that Tucker is adamant about sharing is the need that exists in the job market for skills trade. Being in a program at Central Nine provides students with an opportunity to get into the job market and create an earlier income opportunity. In doing so, they are able to find out whether the skills trade is right for them while still having the opportunity to do more schooling while getting the experience of working in the job market.

"Just this past year I had a parent call me and tell me about how their kid was able to start working in the field and become successful. They didn't even realize they were going to be able to be that successful. Meanwhile, they were also still able to attend Ivy Tech while having that job and being able to provide for their family. That's the kind of experience that's so important for students to get," Tucker shared.

Giving back to the students

Tucker plans to find creative ways to give some of the money he will be receiving back to the students.

"This may include helping students with tools, or whatever they need in the industry. And with $35,000 of that money going to the program, I think for at least five years if not more we can put out a certain amount of money to give some of the top students that will help them get tools and help their careers," he said.

"We don't just teach them the programs – we teach them discipline, attendance, showing up on time. A lot of things that help them out really in any trade they end up in. At the end, making them marketable and employable is what gives the big impact in this program."

Greenwood Mayor introduces ordinance directing $1 million to local schools

School Safety - Today the city of Greenwood announced plans to direct $1 million of federal funds to the city's three public school districts to enhance security efforts. Mayor Mark W. Myers introduced the ordinance, Ordinance No. 22-35, to the Greenwood Common Council at the Oct. 3 meeting. The funds from the American Rescue Plan Act (ARPA) will be equally divided among the Clark-Pleasant Community School Corporation, Center Grove Community School Corporation and Greenwood Community Schools. Each district can be reimbursed for up to $333,000 in security hard costs for items like cameras, system upgrades and physical security structures. "This funding will enhance our current safety efforts throughout our district and helps us move forward in big ways with providing additional school safety," said Terry Terhune, superintendent of Greenwood Community Schools. "Our daily goal is to make sure staff, students and parents feel safe in our schools, and we thank the City of Greenwood for investing in safety efforts for various school districts." The council unanimously approved the measure at its First Reading and will take it up for a public hearing and final approval on Oct. 17, after which the reimbursable grants will be immediately available to the schools.

Individual income tax rates rise in five Indiana counties

Tax Increase – Effective Oct. 1, 2022, five Indiana county income tax rates will increase, according to the Indiana Department of Revenue (DOR). Local income tax rates are determined by county officials and provided to DOR for review regarding compliance with Indiana law. Included, Johnson County will be 0.014, increased from 0.012. These tax rates affect businesses with employees who live or work in any of these counties and have income tax withholdings. Southside Educator of the Month

Compiled by Nicole Davis

Do you know an educator that deserves to be recognized? Please email their name, grade or subject they teach, school name and reason(s) for nomination to nicole@icontimes.com. Congratulations to this month's nominated educators of the month: Brooke Hamlett, Hornet Park Elementary School, Hope Clay, Douglas MacArthur Elementary School, and Diana Eutsey, Central Catholic School.

Brooke Hamlett

SPECIAL EDUCATION TEACHER
HORNET PARK ELEMENTARY SCHOOL.

"We invite you to imagine the traits you would describe as most special and important of an elementary special education teacher and then I want you to know that our nominee Brooke Hamlett likely embodies them all. Mrs. Brooke Hamlett gives her very best to bring out the best in each of her students and our school community. She loves the students first and then works endlessly to create lessons, differentiated activities, supports, and assessments to ensure each student is growing and learning. She is a beloved member of our school family, sharing her heart in support of peers, her resources in practical ways, and her expertise in special education. Brooke builds connections with students' families and welcomes all to be a part of her classroom community. Mrs. Hamlett serves students with a range of significant needs, but each one comes to school each day to be loved, have their needs met, and to learn and grow under her guidance. Mrs. Brooke Hamlett is a gift to all who know her, learn from her, and serve as educators alongside her."

Nominated by Hornet Park Principal Erin Probus

Hope Clay

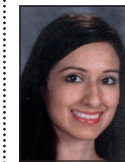

FIFTH GRADE TEACHER,
DOUGLAS MACARTHUR
ELEMENTARY SCHOOL

"Hope goes above and beyond to show her concern for her students. As most teachers, our care for students is important, but Hope's compassionate heart ranks above the rest. Hope always considers what is best to meet the academic needs for her students. Some ways she shows concern for her students academically include looking at Evaluate data to drive her lesson instruction, or she just knows working with a student one on one may be the best option. She also shows concerns for her students emotionally. This year, she has created a small group for some young ladies in fifth grade that meet on every other Thursday to help build self-confidence through some social emotional learning that Hope is providing. I have seen these girls really start to come out of their shell more since Hope has worked with them. Not to mention these girls are giving up their recess time to meet with Hope on her lunch time. Hope also makes a point to celebrate each child's success in her classroom. Whether it be messaging a parent or sharing it with that student's classroom teacher with the child's teacher present. Hope also enjoys having lunch with her kids to learn more about them or to just chat. Just recently, Hope had her class put up positive quote posters in our student bathrooms to help promote positivity and the desire to achieve your goals. The relationships that Hope builds with her students and the environment she creates each year is inspiring."

Nominated by Perry Township Schools

Diana Eutsey

FOURTH GRADE TEACHER
CENTRAL CATHOLIC SCHOOL

Miss Diana Eutsey is in year two of teaching fourth graders at Central Catholic School. She is a team player who is always ready to help other teachers who may struggle with newer technology, communicating in Spanish or implementing new methods of teaching. Her current and former students smile when you ask them how they feel about Miss Eutsey. They describe her as very nice, funny and always positive. They say she is encouraging and pushes them in the classroom so they are ready for fifth grade. Our school theme this year is "Let our light shine" and Miss Eutsey lets her light shine every day at Central Catholic School.

Malignant

A messy and confused thrill ride

MOVIE REVIEW

By Bradley Lane

Writer and director James Wan hardly needs an introduction these days. He's known for blockbuster horror franchises like Saw, Insidious and the most profitable horror franchise of all time, The Conjuring movies. He's made mainstream actions hits as well, with Aquaman under his belt, and with his unprecedented financial success comes more financial freedom. This leads us to his newest original horror concept, Malignant.

The film follows Madison as she begins to have visions of mysterious and violent murders that eventually are learned to be more than just visions. As Madison becomes imlicated in these crimes, her sister Sydney begins to help Madison unravel the secret at the heart of these strange occurrences.

The synopsis I provided is, of course, incredibly vague and that isn't an accident. Wan has crafted a film whose strength lies in shock and awe. It is rare that a film comes along that is so well made and so unique in its story. This of course only exists as a result of Wan making so much money for Warner Brothers, effectively giving him artistic license and financial freedom to make whatever weird idea he wanted.

This isn't to say the film is perfect; tonally, the film suffers from trying to be so many different movies. It starts as a sort of sci-fi thriller, then morphs into a horror crime thriller, and then again shifts into a quasi-action movie. It's especially fun for trying so much and leans into its silliness often, but it is performed to various degrees of quality.

However, the biggest flaw in Wan's film is the performance from the lead actress, Anabelle Wallis. I would often find her line readings would be incredibly distracting from the movie because of how badly they stuck out from the rest of the cast. Certainly blame for this should be spread to the script and direction, but it's just a shame one performance holds this film back.

Thankfully, Malignant is still an enjoyable watch thanks to its high energy level and its "throw it all at the wall and see what sticks" attitude towards filmmaking. Malignant is available to stream on HBO Max.

Bradley is a Beech Grove High School alumnus and has been enamored by film for as long as he can remember. He recently graduated from IUPUI, with a degree in Media and Public Affairs with a minor in Film. Bradley can be contacted at blane2214@gmail.com.

The Oxford comma debate: a grammar horror story

GRAMMAR GUY

By Curtis Honeycutt

On days like this, kids in costumes aren't the only spooky things in the neighborhood. Did you know commas can save innocent lives? I wanted to avoid controversial subjects like killing in this column, but here we are discussing the only two certainties in life: death and punctuation.

In today's article, I'm going to settle the Oxford comma debate once and for all. How's that for a bold statement?

Suppose I wanted to list a few (three, to be precise) of my favorite things. I could say: I like eating, children and small animals. That was intended to read as a list of three things – not a list of one thing followed by examples (although I've heard squirrel bacon is excellent)! Most people think the Oxford comma (a.k.a. the serial, series or Harvard comma) is at odds with the AP Stylebook. I'm not sure if this will come as a trick or a treat to you, but the AP Stylebook actually makes clear that it's perfectly appropriate to use an Oxford comma when doing so helps to avoid confusion or misinterpretation.

My general rule is: use commas sparingly. Pretend they're shotgun shells and you're trying to survive in a zombie apocalypse. According to AP, "If a comma doesn't help make clear what is being said, don't use it." I love secretly eating my child's Skittles, Milky Ways and Butterfingers once he's asleep. This sentence doesn't need a comma after "Milky Ways" because it doesn't provide further clarity in the sentence's meaning, nor does it lead to misinterpretation.

Hopefully, this nuanced take on the comma controversy provides a diacritical middle ground for the two feuding punctuation parties. I'm not naive enough to assume I will be able to change anyone's mind a polarizing topic such as this; I merely wanted to illustrate how two opposing factions can (theoretically) peacefully coexist. I know, I know – you probably think this is a not-so-subtle way of addressing the age-old rivalry between vampires and werewolves. For the record, you are correct. I believe in a world in which vampires and werewolves can – and do – get along.

Weekly Devotion

For you, O Lord, are my hope, my trust, O Lord, from my youth. Upon you I have leaned from before my birth; you are he who took me from my mother's womb. My praise is continually of you.

PSALM 71:5-6

Sometimes hearts are broken by the cruel realities of this world. Wounds can be so deep they tear the very fabric of our souls. Some trauma injures us so deeply that we carry invisible scars in our hearts that feel like holes never to heal. Such a tragedy is when we experience the loss of an unborn child. Each year more than 1 million pregnancies nationwide end in miscarriage, stillbirth, or the death of a newborn baby. This is a staggering statistic I learned at a "Walk To Remember" last weekend sponsored by the Sisters of St. Francis of Perpetual Adoration. It is vitally important that we address the trauma caused by such a life-altering loss. It is important that we recognize the difference between our soul and our spirit. Our spirit is the part of us that connects and communicates with God. Our soul is the part of us that experiences emotion and reflects our individual personalities. It is imperative that we share the message of hope that can only come from trusting that God is raising these babies to greet us at the gates of heaven when we leave this world behind. On Oct. 15 at 7 p.m. please join me as we light candles representing the light from above that lifts our spirits above the dark holes in our souls. Faith is the evidence of things unseen. We may not see God's hand lifting us, but trust that His hands are as real as the holes we can't see in the hearts all around us.
