Gimme 5 challenge: Helping hungry Hoosier families

With the continued rise in food insecurity, Hoosiers Feeding the Hungry is working even harder to "Meat" the Need. All farmers and hunters are eligible to participate in the challenge. The Gimme 5 Challenge is a call for all to donate 5 or more pounds of meat because every pound helps fight hunger here in Indiana.

The ballad of Dewey and the cat kids

HAUNTS & JAUNTS

By Rick Hinton

Torry Stiles, columnist for the Southside Times, can change your perspective on how you look at things. During an all too short social engagement with him and his lovely wife a few years back, Laura and I had the opportunity to listen to an audible hum as his brain worked. And what was surprising...he and I looked at 'things' pretty much the same way. There is life beyond the paranormal for me (I've been saying this for years!) and if you can't find humor in your daily walk, then maybe you're not trying hard enough. Life is a series of observations.

There is a memory: the Hinton Compound was decorated for Christmas a few years back. Laura had chosen a Victorian style tree this year that sat prominently in front of the window. A lighted reindeer and snowman guarded our front door as projected snowflakes showered our house. It was holiday at the Hinton's when our Grand-Dog, Dewey, came for an extended visit.

Dewey is a Vizsla (comparable to a Weimaraner), a hunting dog with Hungarian roots built for long days in the field. He is 13 years old—the life expectancy is 12 to 15 years—so he's truly in his 'golden' years. Affectionate, energetic, loyal, surprisingly quiet (I've only heard him bark a few times) and gentle as the wind driven snow. However, Dewey hates to be left alone and has separation anxiety, causing deep depression. He's stayed with us a lot in the past, but when his owners go away, it's not holiday for him. We have his medicine for those times.

Animals become your kids. When you add more kids to the mix, even temporarily, it becomes a contest of pecking order. When Laura's mom, Jennifer, moved in with us, she brought her cat. Mia is an older person's cat, a butterfly with a small head who predominantly lives upstairs. Our cat, Jerry, is also a butterball; a young thug that doesn't like change, but when it comes, he adapts to the interruption of his world. The Christmas tree, lights, presents and decorations challenge his apricot sized brain; as it should! Yet, from Dewey, he learns....

When Dewey shivers with anxiety, he likes to be covered with a comfort blanket (he has his own) as he lays twisted like a pretzel on the couch. I most often enjoy this too when I shiver with anxiety. From Jerry's close observations, he now too likes to be blanketed. However, the fat tree in the living room window confused all the kids. It became an endeavor for Dewey to get off the couch because the tree blocked his path. Jerry stared at it with remorse. Mia ignores it because she's upstairs. One evening Dewey bolted from the couch to the floor, brushing against the tree making the ornaments tinkle and the trim dance. Jerry was walking by at that exact moment. He did a broad jump to safety, looking at Laura with eyes the size of quarters. "What the hell!!!" he would have said if he could speak. It's always good to keep your kids on their toes!

What does Dewey feel about the ghost spending the majority of its time upstairs? He was rather noncommittal, preferring to be bundled until his owners finally picked him up. "Yeah, don't take me on your adventure," his Vizsla trembling lips seemed to bitterly murmur. "I'll go through living hell until you get back!" And when he left to go home, he didn't even turn around to say goodbye!

On Tuesday of November 2, 2021, Dewey passed from this world.

Sparking change

Franklin Central senior earns her Eagle Scout rank

By Jacob Musselman

Maura Sparks has been involved in scouting since she was three, long before she officially became a scout.

Growing up with a brother involved in scouting, Sparks would often attend meetings and hang around his troop. It wasn't until February of 2019 that she could official join.

"I watched my brother grow up and he had his group of friends that were really good," Sparks explained, "He had that support and I feel like I wanted to have that."

Sparks said she tried Girl Scouts but it wasn't what she was looking for. Once she joined as a scout, she said it finally gave her what she was looking for.

Sparks is a member of Troop 219, which is a reference to February 2019, when females were allowed to join scouting.

Being involved with scouting, Maura said it's shaped who she is today with more of a moral compass.

"I've known the Scout oath and law for forever," Sparks said, "I feel like that's what changed my life and how I process things and people."

One of the main activities for anyone involved with scouting is working toward merit badges. Sparks's first merit badge was crime prevention.

Every scout who wants to reach Eagle has to do some kind of project that demonstrates leadership of others while performing a project that benefits their community.

Sparks had to think of something different for her Eagle project in the face of the COVID-19 pandemic. Through four months of planning, she came up with a live-streamed awareness campaign for community crime prevention.

She planned, found a beneficiary, worked with public officials schedules and executed a two-hour long livestream video talking about initiatives being done to protect people in the community.

Sparks said other than changing the date, there weren't any problems she came across while working on her Eagle project.

After achieving the rank of Eagle Scout, Sparks became one of just 20 in the state of Indiana to reach that rank. According to Scouting.org, an average of 8% of scouts ever reach Eagle, the highest rank.

Sparks said working toward her Eagle Rank taught her to be persistent, because it doesn't just come overnight. The average time it takes for a scout to reach Eagle is around two to three years.

She said looking back on her scouting career, she will remember all of the things she was a part of. From working as a staffer at Ransburg Scout Reservation in Bloomington, or working on staff at NYLT, the National Youth Leadership Training, she's made many memories and will take them with her throughout her life.

Her father, Erin Sparks, said he's very proud and taken aback by what she's been able to accomplish and how she's stuck with scouting even though it was stressful.

He also said her making her Eagle project relate to something she's passionate about is also important.

Maura looks to attend either Indiana State, Ball State or Vincennes University in the fall to major in criminal justice then go on to work with a police department as a detective.

She said to any other female who is interested in scouting that even though there are some controversial opinions about females joining scouts, to not make others opinions overlook you or what you want to do.

"There are going to be people who don't like change," she said, "Any they have to get used to it."

It's not only a time for us to pay homage to those currently serving, but perhaps even more importantly, a time for us to salute those who paid the ultimate sacrifice. Growing up with a father who served and understanding the hardships placed on families is always a challenge but the reward of serving our country and protecting our freedoms can never be measured. I salute all of our military men and women who have served, are serving, or plan to serve. You are truly appreciated beyond words and your service and sacrifice should be admired."*

Franciscan Health Indianapolis Stroke Program Earns National Accolades

Award – Franciscan Health Indianapolis has received the 2021 American Heart Association/American Stroke Association’s Gold Plus with Honor Roll Elite. The award recognizes the hospital’s commitment to ensuring stroke patients receive the most appropriate treatment according to nationally recognized, research-based guidelines based on the latest scientific evidence.

The hospital earned the award by meeting specific quality achievement measures for the diagnosis and treatment of stroke patients at a set level for a designated period. These measures include evaluation of the proper use of medications and other stroke treatments aligned with the most up-to-date, evidence-based guidelines with the goal of speeding recovery and reducing death and disability for stroke patients.

Before discharge, patients should also receive education on managing their health, schedule a follow-up visit scheduled, as well as be instructed on other care transition interventions.

“Our multidisciplinary team is dedicated to improving the quality of care for our stroke patients by implementing the American Heart Association’s Get With The Guidelines-Stroke initiative,” said Sharon Annee, administrative director of orthopedics and neurosciences for Franciscan Health Central Indiana in a press release. “This recognition attests to the commitment and professionalism of our entire clinical and administrative staff.”

Franciscan Health has also met specific scientific guidelines as a Primary Stroke Center, featuring a comprehensive system for rapid diagnosis and treatment of stroke patients admitted to the emergency department.

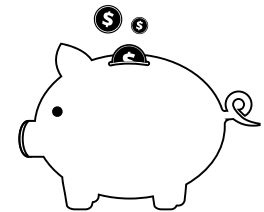

According to the American Heart Association/American Stroke Association, stroke is the No. 5 cause of death and a leading cause of adult disability in the United States. On average, someone in the U.S. suffers a stroke every 40 seconds and nearly 795,000 people suffer a new or recurrent stroke each year.

In October, Roncalli High School revealed its new Royal mascot. The students gathered for a pep rally in the Ascension St. Vincent Gymnasium. The lights dimmed to show a hype video, and the students were surprised by the entrance of the new mascot. Wearing Roncalli red, blue and white shirt and shorts, the lion has a gold crown atop his mane. On the crown is the Jerusalem cross which is deeply rooted in Roncalli history. ## HUMOR

Top ten things I hate about this time of year

By Torry Stiles

10. The change of weather has me coughing and hacking but I'm terrified folks'll think I got the 'Rona.
9. The whole Grinch story seems so much more believable.
8. The dog is peeing on the carpet because it's too nasty to go outside and not because he's just a butthead.
7. Daylight Savings Time has me heading off to bed before the evening news is over
6. Deflated Christmas decorations.
5. The Hallmark Channel Christmas shows don't seem so bizarre any more.
4. Now that it's soup weather I'm out of soup.
3. Cold, wet and rainy is no way to spend the day so I'm going back to bed.

2. Everything I promised myself this time last year that I'd do before this time this year is still undone and sitting in the closet.

1. This past week I've worn two different jackets, my winter coat, a couple of hoodies and a sweater. I have no idea which one has my car keys.

Kathy Saucier: New WALA on Main Gallery artist for November

WALA on Main has selected their new artist for November. Former Spotlight, Kathy Saucier, has been selected to be presented at the gallery during November. Join Kathy and the rest of the Beech Grove art community on Nov. 21, from 1-5 p.m. for an open house and showcase event. Saucier has been doing art all her life. After working a "normal" job for a few years after graduating from Marian University, formerly named Marian College, with a degree in interior design, she wanted to do art full time. "It cannot be a sideline so I started painting and teaching painting as well," Saucier said. She's done murals for churches, community centers and various other places. She has even done painting in peoples homes on Christmas Eve so it's there when the children wake up and get to see this big new painting in their new rooms. After a few years of that, she got into upcycling clothing, which is using different fabrics to redo clothes that are old or worn out. Since she started upcycling, she had a lot of extra fabric laying around from using a few pieces that she thought she should start "painting" with fabric. She liked quilts but wanted to try something different and glue the denim onto pieces of fabric. "Everybody relates to them," She said. "Everybody's had jeans, it's like America's fabric." Her denim portraits generally take five to seven pairs of jeans and anywhere from 10 to 15 hours from start to finish. Her pieces are her way of taking somebody's fabric that they aren't going to use anymore and turning it into something that somebody will enjoy for years after the denim's original "life" is over.

Last Night in Soho Reductive, Bland, and Unnecessary

MOVIE REVIEW

By Bradley Lane

When I first heard about Last Night in Soho, I was ridiculously excited. Edgar Wright is one of the most technically proficient directors working today and has made some of my personal favorite movies of all time. The idea he'd be tackling horror, uncharted territory for Wright, in his next film sounded almost too good to be true (and in a sense, it was). The result of this experiment is not entirely a horror film, but the true horror of Last Night in Soho is its utter failing to deliver a cohesive thematic statement about the issues it concerns itself with most.

Last Night in Soho follows Ellie, a girl from England's quiet countryside with deep reverence for 60's culture, recently thrust into the hustle and bustle of metropolitan London when she gets accepted to a prestigious fashion school. Immediately, the big-city culture of London clashes with Ellie's old soul personality and she flees student housing for an older, quieter apartment rented out by a stern but sweet old lady. The story begins properly when Ellie first sleeps in her new place, and she begins to experience the life of an up-and-coming performer, Sandie, in the glitz and glam of 1960's London.

The performances by the main cast are all passable but uninspired. The technical aspects are again, simply unremarkable, save for one dazzling flashback sequence. So, then the film must rely on its script to pick up the slack, but this is by far the weakest aspect of the film. It clearly wants to make a point about misogyny, but Wright's vision of feminism is archaic, reductive, and condescending.

The women of Wright and co-writer Krysty Wilson-Cairns' script are helpless. Even the seemingly self-empowered Sandie is incapable of taking control of her situation because the film is so insistent on making her suffer. The film mistakes portraying women's struggles with parodying them. It is both deeply pessimistic and gleefully unaware so eventually, it becomes impossible to take it seriously. I wouldn't be this harsh on a film's messaging had the film not insisted upon its importance so much in the first place. Theme isn't an aspect of the film, it is the aspect of the film that speaks loudest.

It is disappointing because Wright clearly has a keen eye for identifying interesting films to pay homage to; genre films of the 60s he references include Psycho, Peeping Tom, and Blood and Black Lace. However, he falls short of those great works because unlike all those films Last Night in Soho gets bogged down in a subject matter that Wright has no personal experience with and, therefore, he lacks the necessary understanding to comment on in any meaningful manner. Last Night in Soho is currently in theaters only.

Bradley is a Beech Grove High School alumnus and has been enamored by film for as long as he can remember. He recently graduated from IUPUI, with a degree in Media and Public Affairs with a minor in Film. Bradley can be contacted at blane2214@gmail.com.

The world of wordcraft expands yet again

GRAMMAR GUY

By Curtis Honeycutt

The folks over at Merriam-Webster have been at it again, adding 455 new words to the dictionary. Remember, the folks at MW essentially “report the news,” adding words that exist in the real world. Whether you like the words or not, they get added to the dictionary if people are using them. Here’s a roundup of some of the newest words.

Dad bod: I appreciate this one, as I have changed from being “in shape” to “a different shape” since having kids. In my mind, I still weigh the amount that is listed on my driver’s license.

Fluffernutter: a sandwich made with peanut butter and marshmallow creme. If a double-decker fluffernutter doesn’t sound delicious, you should check to see you have a pulse.

TBH and FTW: a number of initialisms got added in October, including these two from online and texting culture. “TBH” stands for “to be honest” while “FTW” stands for “for the win.”

Super-spreader: while I always thought this term referred to a king-size duvet cover on a twin-size bed, “super-spreader” refers to an event that leads to several new cases of coronavirus. Many coronavirus-related terms are in the new word list, including “long COVID,” “breakthrough medical” and “vaccine passport.”

Oobleck: an “oobleck” is a mixture of corn starch and water that behaves like a liquid or a solid, depending on whether it’s at rest or receiving pressure. The term gets its name from Dr. Seuss’ 1949 book “Bartholomew and the Oobleck.”

Whataboutism: in politics, this is when someone responds to a negative accusation by claiming the other person (or party) has done something similar or worse. In Pee-Wee Herman terms, this is akin to saying, “I know you are, but what am I?” Real mature.

Doorbell camera: while the words “doorbell” and “camera” both appeared on their own in the dictionary, they had never appeared together until now. A doorbell camera has a smart doorbell that is connected to an app or device in the home that allows residents to talk to visitors who show up on their porches.

Faux-hawk: a faux-hawk is the mock turtleneck of hairstyles, resembling a Mohawk without fully committing to it. To achieve a faux-hawk, a person pushes the hair on top of his head upward to the middle, usually using some kind of hair gel.

I love new words; they show that our language continues to adapt and change in interesting and creative ways. Just as you shouldn’t blame the meteorologist for bad weather, don’t blame lexicographers for adding words you don’t like to the dictionary.

Southport publications take top honors in State:

Journalism - Southport High School's student publications, The Journal, The Anchor and thejournalrewired.com, were awarded top honors by the Indiana High School Press Association (IHSPA.). All three publications were named winners of the Hoosier Star competition, an annual recognition of the state's top student-produced newspapers, newsmagazines, websites, and yearbooks. This marks the second year in a row that both the newspaper and yearbook were named among the top in the state. In addition, Southport was one of only two schools in the state to have all three publications, newspaper, yearbook and website, named Hoosier Stars. The other school was Carmel HS. IHSPA announced awards on Monday, November 1 as part of the organization's annual convention and recognition program. The original posting on the organization's website can be found here: <https://ihspa.net>.

Perry Township schools help fight food insecurity with annual food drive

Community - Southport Elementary School fifth grade students recently completed their annual food drive event. Last week, every fifth-grade class walked around the neighborhood around the school knocking on doors and handing out hand-made flyers along with attached donation bag. At the end of the week, each classroom revisited those same neighborhood homes to pick up any canned food item donated by the community. In total, the fifth-grade students from Southport Elementary collected over 3,000 cans of food, weighing almost one ton. In a Facebook post, Perry Township Schools shared the food collected was either donated to the Southport High School Food Pantry or to Hunger Inc.

Weekly Devotion

24 Then Joseph being raised from sleep did as the angel of the Lord had bidden him, and took unto him his wife:

25 And knew her not till she had brought forth her firstborn son: and he called his name Jesus.

MATTHEW 1:24-25

The name of Jesus and the word salvation are forever connected. Jesus, Jesus, Jesus, the song says, "there is just something about that name". And there is. It is a name known all over the earth and attached to that name is a wonderful list of attributes that speak to the human need and the One who can meet them in one act of grace. Jesus is the mighty King of kings, He is the Prince of Peace. He is an insightful Counselor.

He is God with us, thus His title is Emmanuel. He is our salvation and our sanctification. He keeps us daily. He is our all in all which means He is everything wrapped up in one body of flesh and in Spirit. Aren't you glad that Joseph named Him with the name that God gave him to name Him with? I am.

In a world where peace seems to be so elusive and wars seem so easily begun and too difficult to bring to an end, we can have His peace which passes any ability to comprehend it. In a world where wisdom seems so lacking in business and politics and education, there is Jesus who is endowed with the wisdom of His Father in heaven and Who endows the church with the same. In a world where greed and avarice seem to be so prevalent, there is the heart and mind and Spirit of Jesus Christ which is by its very nature a giving Spirit.

In a world where the philosophy of most is me, my and mine above all else, there is Jesus who shows us the way to get outside of ourselves and into the acts of charity that do so much for a hurting world. Jesus. His miraculous birth was necessary in order that the miracle of the second birth could happen to us. Without His supernatural birth, we could never have experienced ours in the second birth that brought us into the family of God. God bless and go and have a great day. Paul A.
