Southside construction update

Southport Road bridge, State Road 37 exit ramp to State Road 144 is open

Compiled by Nicole Davis

• I-69 Indianapolis: The new Southport Road bridge over the future I-69 is now open! It is one of the largest bridges on the I-69 Finish Line project. The new southbound State Road 37 exit ramp to Southport Road has also opened. A preexisting section of Southport Road and the S.R. 37 traffic signal remain open temporarily, connecting with the new alignment to the east for other traffic movements. Learn more and watch a short video showing Southport Road access routes. When all the ramps are completed, the new interchange will improve safety and traffic flow for a heavily traveled area. Southport Road is expected to be the ninth stoplight out of 14 removed for through traffic on S.R. 37.

• I-69 Indianapolis: Crews are making progress on the future I-69 section west of the existing S.R. 37/Harding Street. Structural beams were lifted into place last week for a new Epler Avenue overpass. This week, crews expect to begin driving steel pilings into the ground for flyover ramp bridges at the future I-465 interchange.

• 1-69 Johnson County: The northbound S.R. 37 exit ramp to S.R. 144 is now open! The southbound S.R. 37 ramp to S.R. 144 shifted slightly onto new pavement last week. Stay alert for a variety of work taking place along S.R. 37 including installation of crushed stone shoulders, fiber optic cables, and fencing. For more updates, visit i69finishline.com.

Beech Grove's new Thompson Trail to create safe passage for pedestrians

Amenities - The city of Beech Grove officially opened the Thompson Trail along the busy Thompson Road corridor on Oct. 28. The one-mile asphalt trail runs on the north side of Thompson Road from Emerson Avenue to Ninth Avenue Located on one of the busiest thoroughfares in the community, the trail creates a much-needed pathway for pedestrians, safely connecting them to stores, restaurants and local businesses. From 2012 – 2018, Beech Grove police officers logged more than 300 accidents along this stretch of Thompson Road, prompting the city to partner with the Indianapolis Metropolitan Planning Organization (MPO) and INDOT to build a pedestrian pathway. The MPO funded 80% of the $1.2 million project, with the City contributing a 20% match. The city is currently extending the Franciscan Trail for an additional 1.1 miles, funded by nearly $1.9 million from the MPO. The trail extension will include the areas around Beech Grove High School, Hornet Park Elementary and the Hornet Park Community Center. Beech Grove will have the distinction of being one of the only school districts in the region with a trail system on its high school campus.

Inspiration to help

A single moment can begin a domino effect that creates lasting change. For Dawn Whalen, founder of Whalen's Heroes, that moment came in May of this year while she was doing a continuing education class for her real estate business. The class was geared toward helping realtors as they work with military clients.

"The continuing education class taught us to be better advocates for our military clients. It taught us things that we don't know because they don't tell us. During the event, I learned about some of the hardships that our military faces due to deployment and other duty related events. Some of the stories we heard about what our military members have seen and the trauma they have endured were eye-opening for me," Whalen described.

"I left there wanting to do something, wanting to make a difference and wanting to be able to help those people to the best of my ability," she stated.

Wasting no time

A few conversations later, Whalen's Heroes was already being created. Whalen found overwhelming support from friends and co-workers right away, and she wasted no time taking action to get her dream off the ground. By June 1, Whalen's Heroes became a legal entity in the state and in early August they received their 501(c)(3) determination for nonprofit status. On Aug. 10 they received their first donation, and on Nov. 10 they presented their first service dog after having raised $25,000.

That's how fast the dominoes fell for Whalen's Heroes.

Choosing an impactful avenue

Why service dogs?

"A client of mine who is a Purple Heart veteran had gotten to the point where he was withdrawn from his family and didn't really feel comfortable going outside of the house. After getting his service dog, he began to come out of his shell and was able to interact more with his family. This showed me how service dogs not only help with the mental health and quality of life of the person receiving the dog, but also for the entire family as well," Whalen shared.

Greg Stevens, who serves on the board of Whalen's Heroes, is a marine veteran and former IMPD officer who was shot in the line of duty. To help people understand what military and law enforcement go through, he explained:

"We ask our military service members to place their life in harm's way to go into combat and take another human being's life. We ask them to do unspeakable things that are uncomfortable to talk about and the military trains them accordingly. Unfortunately, you can't just 'shut off' that training so to speak, and many veterans have trouble adjusting back into civilian life."

Running the nonprofit

- Dawn Whalen

Whalen's passion for this project has motivated her to give her time and resources to make sure that every dollar raised goes directly to the mission.

"Whalen Realty Group, and myself and my husband personally cover administrative costs for the nonprofit so 100% of the money donated goes to the dogs and none of it goes to operating the foundation," Whalen stated.

In addition to the cost of the dogs, the foundation also covers the training of the dog and a dog care package. The veteran will be provided with a crate, food, and a dog bed so that they will have what they need to take care of the dog when they first receive it.

The first service dog presentation

The first recipient of a service dog from Whalen's Heroes is Lois Schenk. While it was meant to be a surprise, an accidental slip during a TV interview while on "Lifestyle Live" tipped her off to the news. But that didn't stop her from being excited about receiving a dog. She had experienced combat trauma and other trauma from serving in the military and looks forward to bonding with her new companion.

"Our goal for next year is to be able to present two dogs. We have three to four fundraising events planned for next year to help us achieve our goal," Whalen mentioned.

Chin Community attains first elected official in the state of Indiana

Dr. Hre Mang adds school board to his resumé

FEATURE

By Todd Travis

Over the last 20 years, the Chin-Burmese community has grown from a handful of residents to close to 30,000 residents today. They have steadily worked to make the Southside of Indianapolis a place where they can thrive and support one another as well as the surrounding community. Much of this growth has been focused on basic needs and well-being. As the community has begun to stabilize, they have realized that now is the time to begin getting politically involved.

"After 20 years, we are maturing as Americans and realizing the importance of representation in the political realm. Our community now makes up more than 30% of the school population for Perry (Township) Schools. A recent meeting with the school superintendent and his group encouraged us to pursue a position on the school board," said Peter Thawnhmung, president of the Chin Community of Indiana.

Some of the leaders of the Chin community asked Dr. Hre Mang if he would be willing to accept this responsibility. While he was already very busy with other responsibilities in the community, he decided he would add this to his plate, given the blessing from his wife.

Dr. Mang is the pastor of Falam Christian Church of Indianapolis but also volunteers his time as a member of the executive committee for the Indiana State Southern Baptist Convention, member of the board of directors for the Indianapolis Theological Seminary, serves as vice president of Cobblestone Homeowner Association, and as vice president of Crossroad Baptist Association.

"The need for engagement has been increasing over the years as our community has grown. We've been talking about this over the last three years — we need to contribute and take responsibility in the community. Chin people tend to stay home, work hard, and go to church. They haven't really engaged much in politics and (their) voting rate was very low. So we are trying to encourage our people to take more civic duty," Dr. Mang explained.

"Where we came from, the government took control of everything. The government owns the school, so parents and community members don't really have responsibility in deciding the policy there. So this is different for us," he added.

On voting day, Dr. Mang showed up at the school to meet people and to ask for their vote. He was happy to see how people responded so warmly to him and was pleased to earn his seat on the board. He became the first Chin person to win an elected position in the state of Indiana.

"I think this is one of the key points where community members are invested, and I strongly believe that my participation on the school board will contribute to bridging the gap and bringing people together for a better future," Dr. Mang stated.

Thawnghmung noted that voter participation from the Chin community was higher for this election and sees this is a momentum builder for the Chin people in future elections and for other elected positions. He also noted that a good majority of the votes came from non-Chin people and feels encouraged by the support of the members of Perry schools.

"This is a first step for our people that is very encouraging. There are already people talking about what positions the Chin people may be able to run for next year and what ways they can participate in the future. It's a small step in the grand scheme of things, but it is the first spark that will ignite enthusiasm for the future," Thawnghmung mentioned.

Greenwood Parks & Recreation to host holiday-themed festivities

Holiday Events – Greenwood's Parks & Recreation Department will host the return of beloved events and activities for all ages throughout this holiday season, including the Amphitheater Lighted Trail, KiD CiTY Christmas, musical performances, a coloring contest and Breakfast with Santa. The festivities will kick off at the Greenwood Community Center on Dec. 2 with KiD CiTY Christmas and the Amphitheater Lighted Trail. Attendees are invited to take a train ride along the trail, watch a holiday movie, enjoy various refreshments including popcorn and hot cocoa and take a photo with Santa. For an additional fee, attendees can participate in a special make-your-own stuffed animal craft. Tickets are now on sale and can be purchased online or at the Greenwood Community Center.

- The Amphitheater Lighted Trail is free all season and will continue to be lit every night from dusk to dawn through New Year's Day. Musical groups will take to the amphitheater stage at various times throughout the month to further enrich the holiday ambiance. The trail itself will incorporate over 42,000 lights, including candy cane tunnels and 85 trees of lights.
- Children are also invited to participate in this year's Christmas Coloring Contest. Entries will be accepted until Dec. 10, and three winners will be selected for each age group: ages 4 and under, 5-7, and 8 and up. Parents with interested children can find the coloring contest image on Greenwood's events page on the city website.
- Breakfast with Santa will also return on Saturday, Dec. 10, at the Greenwood Community Center. Follow this link to learn more about ticketing for this event.

Greenwood Common Council approves 2023 budget

Balanced Budget – The City of Greenwood Common Council adopted the 2023 operating budget during the Oct. 17 common council meeting. The budget outlines Mayor Mark Myers' commitment to a balanced budget focused on strategic initiatives surrounding public safety, economic development, quality of place, infrastructure investment and operational excellence. Public safety continues to be a top priority for Myers' administration. 31.48% of the budget will go toward public safety spending, including a 7% salary increase for merit positions and a 5% salary increase for non-merit positions. The police and fire departments will also receive three new probationary police officers and six new probationary firefighters. Plans also include purchasing 16 new police vehicles and a new fire engine. Among all Indiana cities with more than 10,000 residents, Greenwood has the lowest city tax rate, while steadily increasing the city's net assessed value. The city's net assessed value increased by 82% since Mayor Myers took office. In 2022 alone, Greenwood's net assessed value increased by more than 20%. As part of Greenwood's commitment to transparency in all aspects of government, the city designed a way for residents to understand how the city spends and receives money by launching the Financial Transparency Portal. The city of Beech Grove marked Veterans Day with a ceremony on the steps of City Hall on Nov. 11. The ceremony was presented by the Mayor's Faith Based Roundtable, the city of Beech Grove, and American Legion Post #276. The Samuel Bryan Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution in Beech Grove read the names of the fallen and lay a wreath in their memory. "It is a tradition in Beech Grove that our community comes together on Veterans Day to remember the countless Hoosiers who have bravely served our country," said Mayor Buckley. "It's also important that we remember and thank the Beech Grove residents who fought for our freedoms. Since our city was founded, these selfless individuals not only served our nation, but many came home to Beech Grove and Indiana and worked in public safety and other public service careers. We thank them for their commitment to our country, and to us." (Submitted photo)

Docey Lewis: Living Threads

New exhibit, Docey Lewis: Living Threads explores extinct and endangered species in Indiana, opened Nov. 4 at Tube Factory artspace, 1125 Cruft St, Indianapolis. Lewis's Living Threads takes the viewer on a journey of contradiction. Our technologically enhanced culture facilitates our ability to see and create both real and virtual connection while relentlessly making us more aware of the threats humanity faces. Seeking balance, we alternatively seesaw between retreating to our cocoons and interconnecting. The materials used in creating artworks for Living Threads have as much meaning as the pieces themselves. "I have been entangled for many years in the cultures, natural materials and co-creations of faraway communities who have had to pivot from utilitarian and ritual use of their materials and techniques to making salable products for a global market,' said Lewis. "Along the way, a large body of samples and materials have piled up in my studio. During the pandemic, I began to untangle the accumulation and recycle it into artwork. Many hands have touched the raw materials, and I celebrate the living farmers and artisans whose participation has made this work possible. Connections with communities and all living things are represented in this collaborative body of work." This exhibit is open through Dec. 11.

Warbler Quilt. (Image by Docey Lewis)

Aftersun

A tender rumination on memory

MOVIE REVIEW

By Bradley Lane

What separates our memories from the photos and videos we take? Are these digital artifacts substitutes for our own memories, or is it that these documents shape our view of times past? Writer-director Charlotte Wells wrestles with these ideas throughout her achingly beautiful debut feature film Aftersun. Set through the lens of a woman desperately trying to make sense of very complicated feelings, Sophie explores her memories of a trip with her father through the home videos they took together.

From the very beginning of the film, Wells establishes an uncharacteristically foreboding atmosphere. Sophie and her dad Calum get along like the best of friends. They joke and laugh and share an intimate bond. So why then does a melancholic, almost tense tone pervade their idyllic vacation? Clearly there is something unspoken between them or between their experience and the audience's understanding of it. They clearly love being around one another. Their relationship is the driver of the otherwise slow, uneventful film. They get to a hotel, swim at the pool, go to dinner, and see embarrassingly lame performances of old Elvis covers and staff lead macarena sessions. Despite this unassuming story, tiny moments paint the audience's emotional experience. A fleeting facial expression, a shot that lingers just a bit too long, or a composition slightly askew all cue the audience to lean in and question what is being communicated.

This attention to detail of the form combines with utterly transfixing performances by Paul Mescal and Frankie Corio to create something wholly transcendent. Wells pioneers a lyrical style of editing that interrogates the very nature of memory in a uniquely immediate and realistic framework that sneaks up on the viewer. It feels so universal to find oneself rummaging through old photos and home movies to try and make sense of what would come next, applying hindsight where there was once just the moment.

They had such a tough time growing up but they're so much happier now. I can't believe it was just a few years ago they left for college and now they're getting married. I miss them so much; we were just together what felt like days ago.

Wells has a way of juxtaposing the unflinching reality of a moment with the idealized, forever crystallized, recording of moments just after or proceeding them. This technique recalls one of the masters of editing Alain Resnais, specifically his 1959 master work Hiroshima Mon Amour. Both Resnais and Wells highlight the haunting qualities of memories. Ghosts, hiding in the deepest most vulnerable parts of our psyche, less seen than felt in quiet pain. Only appearing when shocked into our system by external stimuli; a smell, an image, or in this case a low-quality camcorder tape.

Wells feels deeply, she has an empathetic soul that is laid bare by the vulnerable contents of her first film. As a fellow intense feeler of feelings, I walked away from Aftersun just incredibly thankful to be able to share in what I can only imagine must have been a difficult story for her to tell. It is rare for a film to so quickly entrench itself within my being. Aftersun creates a world that audiences, like its principle character, will beg to live in for just a moment longer, if only to mourn more completely, to get closure that never comes. Currently only available in theaters, Aftersun is essential viewing, pure cinematic magic. - 5/5 stars

GRAMMAR GUY

By Curtis Honeycutt

Of all the Scrabble letters, Q and Z hold the most value, at 10 points apiece. In 1982, Karl Khoshnaw – the Michael Jordan of Scrabble – used both letters to spell the word "caziques." Caziques (plural form of a type of oriole) earned Khoshnaw 392 points, which still is the world's top-scoring single Scrabble move.

You don't see many Q words out there, but one has always intrigued me: queue. I've seen the following phrase online in many language humor forums, which probably means Mark Twain said it: "Queue' is just the letter 'Q' and four silent vowels waiting in line."

Queue can't be a word. It looks ridiculous and feels even more strange to type. However, it's a word. Pronounced like its first letter, queue (as a noun) means "a line of people or cars." As a verb, queue means "to get in line." It's more often used in British English in the same way that the word "line" is used in American English.

In computing, queue is a type of linear data structure. I won't get into any more detail, as I have reached the limits of my hacker knowledge.

We get "queue" directly from the French word for tail. This makes sense, as a line of people is essentially the "tail" for the head of the line. The French term for "ponytail" is "queue de cheval," which directly translates to "horsetail" or "tail of the horse." I really wanted to get horses into this column, as I am deathly afraid of them and do not trust them.

As many people agree with me (about typing "queue," not about horse panic), we find people writing "que" instead of "queue." The word "que" is an often-used word in French, Spanish and other Romance languages that means "that" or "what," depending on context. Que and queue are not the same. If you didn't know

- now you know.

Do you find yourself more often getting "queue" and "cue" mistaken? You're not alone. As the two words are homonyms, "cue" seems like the right word to write. "Cue" generally means "a signal to start something. In billiards, you hit the "cue ball," which is the first ball hit before all mayhem breaks loose.

So, as you queue up for a burger at your next barbecue, an awkward silence is the perfect cue to begin explaining to people the difference between these confusing words. I've been told people love English language explanations while waiting for their meat.

4 tips to guarantee you close on time

REAL ESTATE

By Dawn Whalen Whalen Realty Group at F.C. Tucker Company

Scheduling the closing date on a home is an exciting moment. It gives buyers and sellers a date to anticipate the transfer of ownership, and it's an important meeting for all parties involved (realtors, families, lenders and the title company). However, before reaching the finish line at the title office, there are several tasks that must be completed first, and any delay can push back the closing date.

Deposit the earnest money immediately

Buyers willing to pay an earnest money deposit are proving to the sellers that they're serious about the property and want to make a deal work. On average, an earnest payment is 1 to 3 percent of the home's purchase price.

Earnest payments are generally due within a day or two of an agreed upon offer. Failure to make the deposit in a timely manner can result in the seller cancelling the contract or delaying the estimated closing date.

Have financing in place

Having a pre-approval letter before submitting an offer is important. It takes time for a financial institution to arrange funding and determine the dollar amount loaned to a borrower. Once the pre-approval process is complete and an offer is accepted, the buyer simply needs to complete a mortgage application and the remainder of the financial process is straightforward. Failure to have financing in place before submitting an offer can delay closing.

Time is the biggest challenge when it comes to arranging financing because there are multiple documents and organizations involved to review credit reports, bank statements, pay stubs and more. Depending on the time of year or the current real estate market, applying for financing can take as little as a week or as long as a month.

Inspections and response time

It is the buyer's responsibility to arrange any inspections on the home prior to closing. This usually takes place seven to 14 days after contract acceptance. During that time, the home inspection must be completed, and the buyer needs to respond, in writing, any requested repairs. Failure to acknowledge any defects identified in the report within the amount of time disclosed in the purchase agreement automatically means the buyer accepts the property in its current condition. For example, if an inspector makes note that plumbing under the bathroom sink is faulty, and the buyer fails to ask the seller to fix the problem, then the buyer will be stuck with the plumbing defect. Any updates or repairs can push back the closing date, but it's also important to have a home that's in good working condition. No one wants to move into a home with faulty plumbing.

Don't miss deadlines

Deadlines are just as important in real estate as the financing. Missing deadlines can push back the entire process and make it more difficult for any party involved in the process to get their work completed. There are so many moving parts when it comes to completing a real estate transaction that not responding to questions or requests for more information can delay closing. Experienced realtors are used to working with deadlines and will encourage their clients to respond in a timely manner, but ultimately, it's up to the buyer or seller to take action.

Currently closings are mostly taking place on time but following these tips will help keep the process on track and limit any potential problems.

Dr. Georgia Ann Pitcher

Dr. Georgia Ann Pitcher of Southport passed away peacefully at The Farm surrounded by her loving family on a beautiful snow-laden Nov. 13, 2022, at the age of 95. She was the only child of A.E. and Lyda Pitcher, born Feb. 22, 1927, in Indianapolis. She was known by a variety of names: Georgia, Georgia Ann, Georgie, Dr. Pitcher, Doctor P, and Grandmama to her family. Georgia Ann was a longtime educator and lifelong learner who graduated from Southport High School in 1944. She was fiercely independent and a proud Southsider. During high school, she moved with her parents to The Farm on Thompson Road. This began a powerful, 80-year connection with this piece of land that continues to this day. Early on, her father A.E. built the first residence on the former Guerdon Grange property. Over the ensuing years, three additional homes were constructed, and multiple family members continue to live on the property. In fact, Georgia Ann lived the last 10 years of her life in that original two-bedroom "Carriage House" built by her father. She began classes at Butler University the summer of '44. She became a proud member of Kappa Kappa Gamma and a rabid Butler Bulldog fan. She earned her BS in elementary education in 1948, then completed her master's in early childhood education. Upon completion of her masters, she was encouraged by the department head to pursue her Doctorate, the highest degree in her field. She matriculated at Purdue University in 1969 with a PhD in child psychology & development while also an instructor and assistant professor in the School of Education. She left academia in 1974 to take a position as the director of Psychological Services at St. Elizabeth Hospital in Lafayette. Following an eightyear stint at St. Elizabeth, she moved back to The Farm and opened her own practice focused on children and their families. She next took all this experience to Riley Hospital for Children where she became a clinical assistant professor, pediatrics and senior psychologist at the Indiana University School of Medicine instructing young physicians on the intricacies of pediatric patients and their families. She retired as professor emeritus. Her final career was with the Social Security Administration serving as an expert witness with benefit claims, with a focus on children. She worked with other professionals in this field and was well respected both by her peers and presiding judges. This work continued well into her 80s. In her "spare time" Georgia Ann owned and operated Frances Station Depot on Smith Valley Road in Greenwood, thus combining her love of train travel and antiques. She also took up ballroom dancing during this period, performed in competitions, and as executive producer of Casiana Productions, created a video titled "Strictly Dancing" which was aired on WFYI. Always the teacher, her most recent endeavors involved heavily researched, written pieces on both family trees which we all treasure. Whew! She set the bar high for the rest of us. As a child she developed an interest in movies, fashion, and dance. This extended into a desire to be a starlet. Her favorite movie was Gone with the Wind with its beautiful costumes and female heroine. In fact, she kept a Rhett and Scarlet paper doll collection from the 1930s. Any excuse to play dress up from the time she was 5 until 95 was to be relished. Her taste for fashion was shaped by her mother's focus on timeless quality, which was reflected in all she did. She and her mother shared many interests and developed a strong kinship over and above that of a mother and daughter. Her father was a successful teacher, coach, and businessman and she held him in high regard. Later in his life, he became a world class athlete with the three of them traveling the world to different track and field competitions. As a mother, grandmother, and great-grandmother, Grandmama was a calm port in any storm. Always welcoming, she was the focal point of the family and a steady influence for all. Grandmama was an active participant in all sorts of events, involving herself with enthusiasm in birthdays, holidays, and graduations. Any gathering, large or small, was an opportunity to be seized and influenced in a positive way. While living at The Farm, many holiday traditions took hold and will be continued through the generations in her memory. Dr. P made an impression on all those who met her. Often it was a quick recognition of her style, whether it be a bright, coral-colored outfit, quaffed hair, or her unique red-rim glasses. She made it a point to stand out from the crowd and make a "statement." She attempted to bring elegance to every facet of life, including work, travel, or just everyday living. She had Joie de Vivre, which Oxford Dictionary defines as "the exuberant enjoyment of life." That sums up her 95 years on this Earth very well. Georgia Ann was preceded in her death by her parents, Arling Edgar Pitcher and Lyda Lucille Doty Pitcher; her former husband, Donald A. Baker; son-in-law, David E. Black; and her eldest daughter, Catherine (Katie) Lucille Baker Black. She is survived by two daughters, Marti Ann Baker (Bob Mobley) of Indianapolis, Ind., Susan Jane Oakley (David) of Boone, NC and one son, Daniel Pitcher Baker (Martha) of Winter Park, Fla. In addition, there are eight grandchildren: Rosie Alvarez, Ruth Hurrle, Daniel Black, Rebecca Chapman, Robin Carson, Courtney Waltz, Holt Baker, and James Baker. Eighteen great-grandchildren also survive. Needless to say, she was as proud of her family as we are of her. Visitation will be from 4-8 p.m., Thursday, Nov. 17 at G. H. Herrmann Madison Avenue Funeral Home, 5141 Madison Ave., Indianapolis, IN. Funeral services will be private for her family and a graveside service will be conducted at 1:30 p.m. Friday, Nov. 18, at Greenwood Cemetery. In lieu of flowers we ask that you donate to any of the following charities that Georgia Ann embraced: Riley Hospital for Children, The Julian Center, American Lung Association, United Cerebral Palsy, or the charity of your choosing.

Weekly Devotion

Give not that which is holy unto the dogs, neither cast ye your pearls before swine, lest they trample them under their feet, and turn again and rend you.

MATTHEW 7:

With Thanksgiving around the corner we find ourselves flooded with emotions. Some are so wonderful it is hard to put them to words. Other emotions settle on our hearts like a cold winter's night, bringing to mind those we have lost along the way. In the midst of the holiday commercialism that blinds so many people this time of year, we find ourselves wanting to do something special to bring a light to those who find themselves seemingly abandoned this holiday season. We search for ways to share blessings with those less fortunate than ourselves, in hopes that we might bring a smile to the face of those who appear to have been left behind. Our church began a sock drive after God put it on my heart to preach a sermon about faith in motion. I shared all the things a homeless person might make out of tube socks. Things as simple as a pillow, a pair of gloves, potholders, wash cloths, and even feet warmers, are all possibilities with such a simple gift. The other day God reminded me of a very important lesson. A homeless man asked me if I had $2 to spare. I did not, but right behind me was a lady handing out brand new T-shirts and tube socks! I was so happy to see her, but the man told her that he had no use for what she offered. He told her to either give him $2 to buy a drink, or else leave him alone! Some are just not ready to receive what we are prepared to give.

Pastor Dan Bailey is the chair of the Mayor's Faith Based Round Table for the City of Beech Grove, who believes in its mission statement to "Strengthen the Community with Christ's Love." He is a lifelong resident of Southside with his wife, four children and five grandchildren. He has also been a criminal investigator for the last 30-plus years for the Public Defender Agency.

EMPLOYMENT

Accountant

Kelley Hardesty Smith and Co is an accounting firm designed for the closely held business. We provide clients with financial and consulting services that will assist with attaining their business and personal goals. We bring a vast background of experience from small, medium, and large public accounting firms to the trenches in industry.

This position will start out responsible for accounting transactions and relationships with a multitude of clients, including work in QuickBooks and other General Ledgers, and develop into preparing tax returns, payroll tax returns, sales tax returns, and property tax returns. This position will also work on Compiled, Reviewed, and Audited Financial Statements, and ultimately analyze businesses of clients to provide tax and other consulting advice.

What few other roles will offer:

- Work with and learn directly from the entire team. Open door policy with the partners is truly amazing!
- Serve some of the best entrepreneurs in Indianapolis, ranging from start-ups to $100M+ in sales.
- The opportunity to work alongside and build close relationships with clients.

What We Are Looking For:

- Associates in Accounting
- Bachelor's in Accounting (preferred)
- 1-3+ years of Accounting experience (please know your debits and credits!)
- Experience with Quickbooks and other accounting software

Other noteworthy benefits include:

- "Bank" your overtime! You may be an exempt employee, but you can still get paid for that overtime! i.e. You will get paid for the time you work!
- Competitive Salary, Full Medical and Ancillary Benefits, 401(k) match
- Flexible work environment we're people, we have lives
- Just about as many people have retired from KHS as have worked here since the beginning. We are a multigenerational firm, and have retired delighted team members since 1970!
