Kent Stephens

Greenwood Fire lieutenant enjoys the life of a public service professional

BEHIND the BADGE

Lt. Kent Stephens is right where he wants to be in his career: serving at Station 92 for the Greenwood Fire Department (GFD).

"There's always something new and interesting," Stephens said. "I enjoy the public service part as well. I'm a social person and this is a social job."

Stephens graduated from Monrovia High School and Ball State University. He moved to Johnson County shortly after college and joined the Whiteland Fire Department. He was hired part-time to the GFD in 1998 and full-time in 2005. He is an officer on the dive team and is a hazmat team member. While he, his wife, Teena, and three children recently moved to Martinsville he said he looks forward to continuing his work with the GFD.

"We have a good, progressive department with good support from administrative staff," Stephens said. "We have good residents. I enjoy the city. We have good support from the city in general."

What was your inspiration to become a firefighter?

My dad was always a volunteer when I was growing up. I became a volunteer when I first got out of college. I just enjoyed the job, the trucks, meeting the people. I got on part-time and from there I just fell in love with it.

What has been one of your most memorable moments on the job?

We responded on a possible childbirth. We get there and they were all Spanish-speaking so we had some difficulty figuring out what exactly was going on. I go downstairs and there was a young woman sitting on the floor. There was a blanket next to her.

I pick the blanket up and there was a baby underneath, the cord still attached. I picked the baby up and it started crying. It was an interesting scenario to go into and for everything to be okay.

What aspect of the job do you find most challenging?

It's a good thing, but there's something new every day and you never know what it's going to be. You can be sitting at the dinner table, laughing and joking and 10 minutes later be crawling through smoke and fire or doing CPR on someone's loved one. It's challenging to deal with the things as they come along but that's also what makes it exciting and interesting.

What do you enjoy doing in your off-time?

Spending time with my family and working around the house – anything outdoors.

What are your future goals, professionally or personally?

I'm pretty content with where I'm at right now, at least professionally. I enjoy the work here and where I'm at on shift and the job I'm doing right now. Personally, I always want to pursue things that will give me a little more time to spend with my family and pay the bills at the same time.

What would you have done if you hadn't become a firefighter?

I started out in IT, which is where I was when I got out of college. I actually have a degree in criminology and criminal justice. I was going to be a police officer until I found firefighting. I would have been in IT longer.

Fundraisers to benefit Franklin Township Rader family as 1-year-old Maddox recovers from liver transplant

By Nicole Davis

One-year-old Maddox Rader has spent most of his life so far in and out of the hospital, diagnosed with Biliary Atresia, a disease of the bile ducts that only affects infants. This causes the bile ducts to become blocked, the bile to remain in the liver and damage the liver. With all he's been through, his mother Alicia, said he's still constantly smiling.

"He is an amazing baby," Alicia said. "He never cried and was so smiley even when he had a big belly. He is really calm and happy."

Maddox was born April 14, 2014 to Franklin Township residents, Kenneth and Alicia Rader. He is their third child. Alicia said from birth, it looked like he had newborn jaundice. His skin was a darker complexion and the white in his eyes began turning yellow. Their pediatrician recommended they have him tested at Riley Hospital for Children, where he was diagnosed.

On July 1, he had a kasai procedure, replacing the blocked bile ducts with pieces of the child's small intestine. The surgery is effective in 80 percent of patients. After three months, doctors said it didn't work. By Feb. 4, Maddox was put on the regional liver transplant list for Indiana, Michigan and Ohio. Late February, doctors became worried that he had a clot in a vein that leads to the liver, and moved him to the visceral transplant list, meaning he could potentially need multiple organs.

The Rader family was called to the hospital at midnight May 24 with news of a possible donor. By midnight on May 25, the operation began. It took four and a half hours. Doctors were able to clear the clot so he only needed the liver transplant. Alicia said Maddox is taking to his liver well, though he spiked a fever and is currently in the Intensive Care Unit. She says once he gets off of antibiotics, he will be moved to the transplant floor, where he will relearn how to eat and they will learn how to care for him at home.

"This whole first year is going to be a lot of ups and downs," Alicia said. "Just having the support, the prayers, is what we want more than anything."

To cover some of the hospital bills that the family has and will accrue, they joined the Children's Organ Transplant Association (COTA). The organization assists family with fundraising free of charge. A group of the Rader family's friends continue to brainstorm ideas for raising money. They will host a Poker Tournament on June 13, 6 p.m. in Indianapolis and a Rummage Sale on June 27, 8 to 3 p.m. at Hornet Park Community Center in Beech Grove.

"I'm amazed of how much support we've received from friends, family and people we don't even know," Alicia said. "Most importantly through all of this, it's not the fundraising, it's the prayers we've received. He's on so many prayer lists from different churches. We've had lots of help with people bringing us dinner, with house work or just babysitting the kids."

Q: June is National Hunger Awareness Month; how can we do more to feed the hungry?

"Definitely donate more to the food banks. Especially down here at Hunger Inc. They could always use volunteers, they could always use donations, they could always use food. Also, there are good service clubs here in here in Perry Township such as the Lion's Club which supports the food banks."

AJ Johnson of Perry Township

"The best way is to get the word out where they can go such as the food banks, churches and food pantries. Communication and getting the word out where they can go is important."

Dave Weiger of Perry Township

"The media could do more to remind people that people are hungry all year long and not just at Thanksgiving and Christmas. Also we should encourage small businesses to volunteer at soup kitchens and give company donations to a food bank. My church, Center United Methodist Church, has a program in which they take a little red wagon downtown. In the wintertime they take a big container of coffee and in the summer time a big container of ice water and they go downtown and hand-out sack lunches that are prepared by volunteers of the church."

Robin Barnett of Perry Township

"We just need to be more generous and more aware of people around us."

READER'S WRITES

Delve into the details of climate change

Recently, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration reported that atmospheric CO2 levels are continuing to soar. A NOAA scientist is quoted as saying, "It's both disturbing and daunting. Daunting from the standpoint on how hard it is to slow this down."

I used to think that if people just knew more about climate change and its causes they'd take adequate action to address it, a phenomenon Joshua Howe, in his book Behind the Curve: Science and the Politics of Global Warming, calls the "forcing function of knowledge." But as Howe explains, for various reasons, there is no such thing, at least not to the degree or in the way one might think.

So there are those who don't believe climate change exists or if it does that it's not an immediate and serious threat to civilization. But who isn't convinced we need way more good jobs than are currently available?

For several years, an organization called

Citizens Climate Lobby (with an active chapter in Indianapolis and in Bloomington) advocated for a Carbon Fee and Dividend policy. Last summer, they released a study which they commissioned a well-respected economic-forecasting company called Regional Economic Models, Inc. to conduct that showed that not only would CFD quickly and significantly decrease greenhouse gas emissions but would also quickly and significantly increase employment.

And Carbon Fee and Dividend does not grow the government to achieve these ends. It is not another cap and trade scheme. It is increasingly supported by people across the political and ideological spectrum. Go to remi.com/clients to see a partial list of REMI's clients. Delve into the details of their report at <http://citizensclimatelobby.org/carbon-fee-and-dividend/>.

Beech Grove Wal-Mart woes

Beech Grove became Internet-famous over the weekend after two videos of a "brawl" between two adult women and one child were uploaded to YouTube (each video has accrued millions of views in just a week's time). Not exactly the kind of notoriety or reputation Beech Grove is looking for—especially on a national scale.

Whatever it is about this particular Wal-Mart—perhaps the land it was built upon is cursed—has made it a headache for Beech Grove residents and even city staff.

Proposed ordinance 13 from the Beech Grove City Council doesn't mention the store by name, but businesses with more than 10 police runs for thefts of less than $50 may be subjected to fines after the July council meeting.

According to the Beech Grove Police Department, there were 789 police runs to the aforementioned Wal-Mart in all of 2014 (which is an average of 2.16 runs per day). For a department as small as Beech Grove's, that's quite the burden. And it's costing the City and its taxpayers money. As of the end of May 2015, the department has already responded to 486 calls this year. At this rate, BGPD will have to send two officers to Wal-Mart a total of 680 more times this year (an average of 3.4 times per day).

Something has to give. In an ideal world, the thefts and brawls and general misconduct and other tomfoolery would end, but things are never that simple. So keep your eyes and ears peeled (but don't hold your breath); we'll soon have an update on Ordinance 13.

In the meantime, let's hope the ruffians leave the shampoo on the shelves and take their fighting elsewhere.

QUOTE OF THE WEEK

"Rest is not idleness, and to lie sometimes on the grass under trees on a summer's day, listening to the murmur of the water, or watching the clouds float across the sky, is by no means a waste of time."

~ John Lubbock

We'd like to know: Who shot Wal-Mart video?

Well, now that Beech Grove has gained national attention via a fight between two grown women at Wal-Mart – maybe we should rethink that old adage that any kind of publicity is good publicity – there's one thing we'd like to know. What kind of individual stands and shoots video of a fight between two grown women – one of which had her young son watching and participating? That had to be a traumatic experience for the youngster – one that may be with him for some time to come. In our opinion the person behind the camera could have and should have done everything in his/her power to stop the altercation. But then again, in our narcissistic society, it's not about anybody but "me." We're convinced the welfare of the young boy never entered anyone's mind. It was all about this idea that there was a good video to be made. Yes, it made The New York Daily News and the Bill O'Reilly Show, to name a few, but more than that, it made a lot of people sick.

Moles last week said the long-suffering Transportation Security Administration is nothing more than a government creation hindered by a philosophy of "fear and distrust." They also said the coveted TSA Pre-

Check – the lane that gives expedited passage through the Skinner box – is doled out "like Halloween candy." That's all well and good. What shook us was this, according to Fox News: "A second report released ... showed the agency failed to flag 73 commercial airport workers 'linked to terrorism.'" More: "Washington hasn't leveled with the American people," Sen. Ben Sasse (R-Neb.) said. "And (the Department of Homeland Security) is treating this like a PR crisis instead of a homeland security threat." Of course.

"...maybe we should rethink that old adage that any kind of publicity is good publicity."

Are there experts in the paranormal?

HAUNTS & JAUNTS

By Rick Hinton

The general scheme of ghost hunting would seem rather cut and dry: a methodology involving paranormal investigation that is rooted in a firm foundation of predictable occurrences, and consequently a familiar process of investigative techniques. However, in this field predictable occurrences are a nice thought, but don't always apply—resulting in paranormal investigators getting rattled by a hit out of left field. For those new to seeking these answers in a realm of mystery and intrigue, they may very well encounter make-or-break situations that ultimately determine their continuation. In exploring and documenting things that go bump in the night, certainty is a luxury.

This field of paranormal investigation holds no absolutes or definitive summaries, only a truck load of theories and speculation with no right or wrong answer. We are no closer to the truth now than we were in the dawn of 'formalized' paranormal investigating. These days witness a continuing procession of new folks emerging into the field, while older ones take their leave and move on to saner areas of interest.

There is no such thing as a paranormal expert, yet television would convey otherwise. Yet, there are seasoned veterans with mileage under their belts and just wanting to get good night's sleep for a change. The claims of those who choose to designate themselves "experts" should cause one to run for the hills in a glassy-eyed trance and shrieking like a schoolchild on the playground. Remember... everyone has an opinion, and it's just that!

Such experts will occasionally make a degree of sense in what they say, and it is food for thought.

However, more often than not, they will spew a rambling tirade of gibberish that comes around full circle in the end—arriving no closer to the truth than from where they started. Many experts imagine themselves as celebrities as a result of media exposure: books, lectures, television and movies. It's a tight-knit club of paranormal stars that grace the ghost circuit and quite frankly, ghosts are a hot selling topic these days. It can also be a trap if you allow it to be. Some of those involved in self promotion have forgotten why they started seeking this very different realm of co-existence in the first place.

All of those involved in the field of paranormal investigation—new and old alike—need to gingerly tip-toe around this star mentality trap and focus in on the "art" of the investigation. Humbleness is the best policy at the end of the day!

Rick Hinton, a Greenwood resident, loves researching things that go bump in the night. His articles can be read on Facebook; Rick Hinton-Greenwood Paranormal Examiner or examiner.com/paranormal-in-indianapolis/rick-hinton.

TAKING CENTER STAGE

Five actors guarantee laughter as they portray 39 characters in 'Around the World in 80 Days' at Southport Park

By Nicole Davis

Everyone is invited to jump on board as Center Stage Productions presents "Around the World in 80 Days." Community theatre should be accessible, said director, Aaron Cleveland, which is why they've associated with the Southport Department of Parks and Recreation to offer the performance free to everyone on June 12, 13, 19 and 20, 7:30 p.m. and the matinee June 20, 2 p.m. at Southport Park.

"Even as a director, I go in laughing because the show is really hilarious," said Aaron Cleveland. "It's unusual... We're using a child's imagination. The things you see on the set, it's very minimal. It's not so high brow that people are going to be lost or fall asleep. It's constantly changing. It's constantly slapstick. We make sure it's entertaining while covering all of the text."

Center Stage Productions is a ministry of Southport Presbyterian Church. Cleveland said the goal is to provide entertainment and show that the outreach is beneficial to the surrounding community.

"I really liked the community-driven nature that the church, Southport Presbyterian, was putting on," said Josh Turner, who has been involved with Center Stage for nearly 10 years and recently joined the board. "I loved that Center Stage was willing to get out into the community and tap into the talent of the Southside that largely has gone unnoticed. It's great that the church has recognized that theatre is something the Southside is desperately in need of. That is really what has kept me coming back."

This will be their first performance outdoors, rehearsing and performing on the baseball diamond at Southport Park.

"I was looking for something to do in the park – something that didn't need a big, fancy set," Cleveland said. "I wanted it to be comedic and allow people to understand 80 Days without having to pick up the book first."

Five actors portray 39 characters in this comedic play adapted by Mark Brown from the novel by Jules Verne. The play is about adventurer, Phileas Fogg, as he races around the globe in a never-before-achieved 80 days. He is followed by a detective who things Fogg is a robber on the run.

"I look forward to showing Fogg's transformation," said Nathan Rollins, the only actor with one character: Fogg. "He starts out as a very selfish character. His whole life is dictated by the clock and he has these habits he did just because. Through this journey he finds people he really cares about and finds something to really live for. Trying to show that is challenging."

The show's actors include Ben Rockey who will play 17 characters, Cleveland, Turner, Eden Rea-Hedrick and Rollins. Cleveland took on the acting role in addition to directing after one actress had to drop out.

"We have an amazing cast, probably the best cast that I've been a part of in quite some time," Turner said. "Everyone brings something new to the table that their role couldn't be done by anyone but that specific actor. I've never been a part of a cast with so much talent before. It makes me so excited to get this show on the road."

As soon as the actors arrive at rehearsals, they're instantly practicing their accents and rehearsing lines.

"Ever since high school I've always been into characters and voices," Rockey said. "Then it was fun and silly. Being here, I'm able to take that and apply it. I'm looking forward to the audience. I like it when the audience finally gets there and we can put it into work."

They promise to have the audience laughing with their constant jokes and silly scenarios.

"Just making people laugh. I don't do much comedy. I'm not usually the one that's making people laugh which should be a lot of fun..." Rea-Hedrick said, "I think it will have a broad range of appeal because it's so silly. There's nothing fancy or complicated about it. It's kind of cartoonish at times."

While the show is free, Center Stage will offer preferred seating for $5, providing chairs for those who choose to pay. Any proceeds will help pay for the show. Audience members are also encouraged to bring their own chairs and blankets to the show. For more information, visit centerstageindy.com.

Emerson House celebrates five years with Friday open houses

Five years and counting, Indianapolis Senior Living's Emerson House has offered seniors a roof, a family, and a refuge.

Paul and Kathy Brakke opened their non-medical assisted living custom built home with 12 private bedrooms on Memorial Day weekend of 2010. Since opening, 25 seniors have called Emerson House home.

In celebration of these five years, The Brakkes and their Emerson House family are opening their doors for open houses 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. on Fridays in June: June 12, 19, and 26.

"We want people to be aware that we have been in business for five years, we plan to stay, and that this is a valid and beneficial living environment for the seniors," said Paul Brakke.

Kathy Brakke, who has a background in geriatrics, envisioned Emerson House as a "family living" alternative to traditional senior living arrangements.

It is small, meals are home cooked, transportation is personalized, the common area is a large living room, and it tucked into a wooded area giving it a country feel.

"Kathy's contention that some people would do better in a smaller environment has proven to be true," said Paul Brakke. "We are hoping we will be able to grow this concept because we have seen such benefit to the residents who live with us."

Currently have four residents live with the Brakkes at Emerson house with room for another four to six residents. They can be contacted at (317) 412-1247 or online at indianapolis-seniorliving.net.

Healthcare 'four' generations

Southside's healthcare industry is a course of pride for Christie Vision Care owner, Colin Christie

When Colin Christie, a Perry Meridian graduate, went on to college at Butler University to earn his Bachelor of Science in Biology, he knew he wanted to get into a form of healthcare and continue a growing family tradition. He opened his business, Christie Vision Care at 6845 Bluff Rd., Indianapolis, in November, 2009.

He grew up in a family of Southside healthcare professionals. His great-grandfather, Merrill Christie was a pharmacist at Bluff Road and Meridian Street; grandfather, Marvin Christie was a physician for 50 years; father, Randall Christie is a dentist; and brothers, Drew and Reid, are podiatrists. His wife, Anne, is a pharmacist.

"My dad told me to treat everyone like you want to be treated," Christie said. "It's kind of that golden rule. If you give good care and treat your patients and families the way you want to be treated, they'll probably tell all of their friends about you."

Colin chose eye care, after attending Indiana University School of Optometry, for the retail component that it offered and the added opportunities he would have to interact with clients and customers.

"I look forward to building more relationships with the people around here," Colin said. "That's what I find the most fun. I enjoy going to Kroger on the weekends when I'm off and running into three or four patients. We do a scholarship at Perry Meridian every year. I try to use local, small business around here."

Colin purchased Shimp Optical, 932 S. Meridian St., Indianapolis early 2015 – and views it as another opportunity to give back to the Southside community.

"I have an optometrist that's working for me at the new location," Colin said. "My patient time will be mainly focused here. I'm lucky to have the employees that I have there – loyal and able to treat patients well like they should."

Culture is something to celebrate

Perry Cultural Festival to highlight the different ethnic groups in Perry Township

By Nicole Davis

As Perry Township continues to be a growing community with a diverse population, residents are encouraged to get out and talk to their neighbors, get to know one another and maybe learn a thing or two about a different culture. Perry Cultural Festival is designed to be an event to help residents do that. With a variety of events and entertainment designed to represent a variety of cultural backgrounds, the festival will take place June 20, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Baxter YMCA, 7900 S. Shelby St., Indianapolis.

"The whole thing is about community, getting to know our neighbors and celebrating the diversity of Perry Township, because it is something to celebrate," said Joan Miller, president of the Greater Southside Business Alliance.

The event, hosted by Positively Perry and the YMCA, will include live music, entertainment, craft vendors, cultural food vendors, a soccer tournament and community resources. The event begins at 9 a.m. with the soccer tournament and vendors. A family walk/run will take place at 10 a.m. and entertainment starts at 11 a.m. and includes a gospel choir, storyteller, Zumba, Polka Bob, and a traditional Chin dance. Everyone is invited to bring a blanket or lawn chair as the German American, African American, Hispanic, Chin and other cultures are represented.

"We want to look at how we're able and how to make Perry Township work because of our differences," said Marylynne Winslow, who has volunteered to co-chair the event along with Jo Ellen Buffie. "We want to celebrate who we are and learn from one another."

Title sponsors are Franciscan St. Francis Health, Community Hospital South and the International Center. For more information, visit Facebook.com/PerryCulturalFestival or email PerryCulturalFestival@gmail.com.

Southside Business Initiative could provide coworking space for Southside entrepreneurs

Bringing new business and how to best improve Southport is a central topic of discussion at every Southport Redevelopment Commission meeting. One idea is closer to reality after the RDC made a motion to support the efforts of the Greater Southside Community Alliance (GSCA) in establishing the Southside Business Initiative, a coworking space for home-based and start-up businesses.

GSCA, a 501(c)3 organization branched from the Greater Southside Business Alliance, is in the planning stages for SBI. GSBA President Joan Miller said the coworking space would be a development tool to support the growth of Perry Township small businesses. While they are still looking for a "home," they intend to establish SBI in close proximity to Southport Road and Madison Avenue.

Members would pay a yearly fee to have access to workspace, high-speed Internet, a kitchenette and conference room. Membership and sponsorship information can be found at gsbaweb.org/southside-business-initiative.html.

Southport students set track records

Southport Middle School had four new records set in track this school year.

Rachel Dean completed the shot put at 31' 6". Lexie Green ran 800m, 2:28.56; 1600m, 5:24.0; 2400m, 8:39.4.

BGPL considers merging with Indianapolis

The seven-member Beech Grove Public Library board of trustees is considering merging with the Indianapolis Public Library to improve the library's offerings and ensure its long-term ability to serve the needs of its community.

"When we conducted focus groups last year, our residents asked for things like improved online resources, expanded collections in all formats, expanded children's, teen and adult programming and updated technology," said Board Secretary Kim White, "We simply aren't able to make those types of improvements under our current model."

The library has 60,506 print books and 11,551 electronic books, and employs four full-time and six part-time staff at its 17,000-square-foot-building on Main Street in Beech Grove.

As a part of its consideration process before voting to form a planning committee, the board will host a public open house on June 23 from 6 to 8 p.m. at the library.

"The only way we'd agree to merge is if we had an agreement that the library would remain open in Beech Grove, all staff would be retained, and that the library would see an increase in available materials, programs and services," said Board President William "Butch" Fennema.

Spy... Melissa McCarthy delivers again

MOVIE REVIEW

By Adam Staten

From Leslie Nielsen's Naked Gun movies to the Austin Powers films, the spy/espionage genre has been spoofed over and over again. From memorable, eccentric villains, insane plots, and scenes showcasing unbelievable, over-the-top action sequences, it's little surprise why these kinds of films have inspired some of the most memorable movie spoofs in cinematic history. This past weekend produced just the latest film to mock the James Bond and Mission Impossible-type films. The new action-comedy, Spy, starring Melissa McCarthy, landed in theaters last weekend.

Spy is the story of a single, middle-aged, frumpy CIA analyst, Susan Cooper (McCarthy). Working on a computer in the basement of the CIA's headquarters, Cooper is perfectly content being the eyes of the CIA's top field agent as she navigates him through mission after mission. After a series of unexpected events, Cooper reluctantly agrees to go undercover in the field to stop the sale of a nuclear bomb.

What is intended to just be a "track and watch" mission ends up being much more than Cooper or the CIA could have imagined. Cooper is soon out of her league as she chases down some of the worst criminals the world has to offer.

Like most comedies, not all of the jokes here hit, but more times than not that they do. Spy is not something that will have you rolling on the floor laughing, but it does manage to stay consistently funny. While McCarthy is responsible for the biggest share of the laughs, Jason Statham, is a true scene-stealer. He's loud, obnoxious, profane, and hilarious. He plays a CIA agent who basically mocks himself and the dozens of action movies he's made.

In addition to the hilarious and scene-stealing performances, Spy also comes with an original enough story that keeps you entertained and interested. With that being said, the first half-hour or so drags along terribly. This does make the film a tad bit longer than it really should have been. However, if you are able to power through, you'll be treated to plenty of laughs, and a couple of twists and turns.

Like her or not, Melissa McCarthy is one of the biggest names in comedy today. From her sitcom, Mike and Molly, to The Heat and her Oscar-nominated performance in Bridesmaids, McCarthy has great comedic timing and instincts and those skills are on full display here. Spy is another comedic gem delivered courtesy of McCarthy. 3.5 out of 5.

Adam Staten lives in Perry Township and is a movie buff. Staten graduated from University of Southern Indiana with a degree in Communication Studies.

A dining dream: Mark Henrichs offers creative dining experiences for customers at Greenwood's Revery Growing up, Mark Henrichs says he was always called a daydreamer. Henrichs decided to take that character trait and incorporate it into his Greenwood business, Revery, which opened in October. Bar Revery opened in March.

"Business has been pretty good so far," Henrichs says. "It exceeded our expectations. There's a need for more upscale restaurants here."

The business namesake derives from the French word reverie, which means to day-dream. The restaurant which serves fresh, fine-dining food has butcher paper and crayons on the tables for everyone to draw on. They serve popcorn instead of bread service. Each guest gets a piece of cotton candy at the end of a meal instead of dinner mints.

"Every day is a new day," Henrichs says. "We're always tweaking something. We're always learning from our customers. We're always evolving. We're always thinking of new ways to do something different for the restaurant, to add some character and experience to the guests that they never had before."

Henrichs and head chef Danny Salgado have put a lot of their own personalities and work into the business. They chose to keep the wood floors from the original 153 year-old building in Old Town Greenwood. Henrichs used old barn wood from his dad's farm for the décor. They order local food whenever possible, which they said became more available in the spring. They recently completed a patio area, and plan to host outdoor parties in the warmer weather months.

"We're dedicated to bringing a service of good food and drinks to Greenwood," Salgado says.

Henrichs discusses more about opening Revery:

Why did you open this business?

"I moved to the Richmond Hills neighborhood and I was tired of going downtown to get finer, farm-to-table, local food where the food is the focus and not the atmosphere. There's not really a place here where you can get more upscale farm-to-table food."

What did you do to prepare for opening your business?

"My 12 years' experience, I've lived in five different states and out of the country. Danny has done double that. That really prepared us working with great people and learning about good food all around. We didn't just go from culinary school 15 years ago to owning a restaurant. We paid our dues. We did it the right way."

How do you plan to be successful?

"Danny and I are here every single day, 12-16 hours a day. We're off on Mondays but we're still here ordering and experimenting with new ideas and techniques to see how things change. We keep evolving with the seasons. We're not doing the same thing over and over again. We cook for Greenwood because in the end, we're locals and we're here to cook for locals. We want to keep the community tight-knit and providing products from Indiana as much as possible. We hire local, too. We're training young cooks, 17-28 years-olds, to be the next chefs when we're gone. It's about training them and bringing quality talent here."

What would we be surprised to learn about you or your company?

"When we go home we don't eat fine dining food. We order carry out. We nitpick all day long; when we go home we want something else like Chinese carry out, pizza, ice cream... We don't have a microwave or a walk-in freezer. Everything that comes in that back door is prepped that day and served that day. A customer will have to wait 25-30 minutes to get a well-done steak. I don't know if many places can say that they cook without a microwave or freezer."

BEECH GROVE

Beech Grove holds FFA Banquet

The year-end Beech Grove High School's FFA Awards Banquet was held on May 20. Many awards and recognitions were presented throughout the evening, with a dinner served to all guests. Special thanks were provided to the Beech Grove FFA partners and sponsors: Marion County Farm Bureau, Exotic Animal Rescue and Pet Sanctuary (EARPS), Archer Daniels Midland, and Dow AgroSciences. Awards included:

Mr. Kevin Banks, BGHS Science Department Chair, and Advisory Council member, was recognized for his exemplary service on the Advisory Council by Mr. Bruce Bye, Chair of the Council. Senior Jessica Benamou was presented with the Advisory Board Scholarship. Sarah Dehn, Exotic Animal and Pet Sanctuary, is recognized with an Honorary Chapter FFA Degree membership.

Volunteering is in the Supple family

Chad Supple is the middle school's co-Henry H. Hayes Community Service Award winner this year. On Honor Day, the middle school staff found out that Chad's father, Jacob, was also the Henry H. Hayes award winner when he was an eighth grade student at the middle school in 1989-1990. Chad is involved in boy scouts. He was Mr. Peak's Athletic Assistant, participated in band, FFA, golf and as a member of the Ambassadors Club. These are many of the reasons why Chad was named as the middle school's co-Henry H. Hayes Community Service Award winners.

Chad and his father are pictured in front of the plaque listing the Henry H. Hayes Community Service Award winners.

Twinkie or a Ding-Dong?

NUTRITION

By Chef Wendell Fowler

"... your body is a temple of the Holy Spirit, who is in you, whom you have received from God? You are not your own; you were bought at a price. Therefore, honor God with your body." ~ 1 Corinthians 6: 19-20

Your physical body, in most religions, is called a temple. Nutrition is the keystone for everything you do. You expect a lot from your temple daily, so it's logical to honor it with the proper fuel.

You weren't born to dislike veggies, you were taught: an unfortunate situation considering Americans suffer needlessly from a constellation of largely preventable diseases. You deserve to enjoy life, but you're going to have to reboot your perceptions regarding garden fresh produce that I call, "The Celestial Apothecary."

Vegaphobic? In order to do their job, your trillions of cells require earthy plant nutrients supplied by the food that creation intended us to eat—food that best fuels your Holy Temple. It's cliché, but you are what you eat. What are you: A Twinkie, Ding-Dong, or a verdant garden salad brimming with the sun's white energy?

When your cells are malnourished from the Standard American Diet fiasco, you cannot reach your highest potential. Believe me when I tell you, you can feel more alive, lighter, more mentally alert, more loving, happier, and stay above ground longer if you eat more from mother earth, not a factory.

Science supports: folks who eat 7-9 portions daily of fresh produce daily are less likely to acquire chronic diseases. Obediently eating veggies from the Celestial Apothecary is imperative for Holy Temple stewardship.

- Eating a diet rich in vegetables and fruits as part of an overall healthy diet may reduce risk for heart disease, including heart attack and stroke.

- Eating a diet rich in some vegetables and fruits as part of an overall healthy diet may protect against certain types of cancers.

- Diets rich in foods containing fiber, such as some vegetables and fruits, may reduce the risk of heart disease, obesity, and type 2 diabetes.

- Eating vegetables and fruits rich in potassium as part of an overall healthy diet may lower blood pressure, and may also reduce the risk of developing kidney stones and help to decrease bone loss.

- Eating foods such as vegetables that are lower in calories per cup instead of some other higher-calorie food may be useful in helping to lower calorie intake.

On being 'pedantic'

GRAMMAR GUY

By Jordan Fischer

Question: "Mr. Fischer, you may have heard about Jeb Bush's run-in with a college student this week who seemed to be grammatically challenged. Perhaps your column could deal with the proper use of the word 'pedantic' when berating a politician. Love your column. You rain! I mean, reign." (John Reichmann)

Answer: You know, John, people might say this column is a sterling example of pedantry in its own right. That being said: Onto Mr. Bush's run-in with Ms. Ivy Ziedrich.

A little bit of background, courtesy of the New York Times' Michael Barbaro: Jeb Bush (presumptive presidential candidate Jeb Bush?) had just finished a town hall meeting at the University of Nevada when 19-year-old Ivy Ziedrich asked him if he would take a student question.

She then proceeded to, as John puts it, "berate" Bush about how his brother's presidential policies had, in her view, directly contributed to the rise of the Islamic State, concluding her statement by saying, "Your brother created ISIS."

Bush responded with, "All right. Is that a question?" At which point Ziedrich suggested he was being pedantic.

So, was he?

Pedantry is an "excessive concern with minor details and rules" or an "excessive or inappropriate display of learning."

Politicians frequently resort to pedantry to avoid tough questions – attacking the form of a question, rather than answering it directly. Probably the best example of political pedantry is former President Bill Clinton's infamous "it depends upon what the definition of 'is,' is," statement.

On the other hand, as anyone who has ever been to a city council meeting can tell you, many people are looking to turn a question-and-answer opportunity into a diatribe against whatever it is they've decided needs yelling about.

The bottom line here is, if you want a politician to answer your question, it needs to be formed thus, and not as exposition. And, while I'm confident Mr. Bush has been plenty pedantic in the past, it does not seem like his comments fit the definition here.

As always, thanks for reading. I await your rebuttals on the irony of writing a 370-word grammar column dissecting whether or not something a politician said was pedantic.

■ Depression linked to higher risk of death

A study presented at Heart Failure 2015—an annual meeting of the Heart Failure Association of the European Society of Cardiology (ESC) in Spain—claims that heart failure patients who are suffering from depression may be at a higher risk of death. Researchers observed three groups of individuals—those suffering from mild depression, moderate depression, and individuals without any mental illness issues. Of the 51 patients with either mild or moderate depression, 20 had died within a year of being discharged from the hospital, which caused researchers to conclude that severe depression "increases the risk of death up to 80 percent." – uncovermichigan.com

■ Ireland makes history with referendum vote

Recently, the people of Ireland voted on a referendum that would make Ireland the first country to recognize same-sex marriages by way of popular vote. After one of the largest voter turnouts on record, 62 percent voted in favor of the referendum. "The answer is yes to their future, yes to their love, yes to equal marriage. That 'Yes' is heard loudly across the world as a sound of pioneering leadership from our people," Prime Minister Enda Kenny told a news conference. "Ireland, thank you." – reuters.com

■ Conserving water with Wi-Fi sprinklers

California's most severe drought in recent memory is cause for start-ups to think outside the box when devising a product to meet the unique needs of the Southwest consumer. One such start up out of Denver, Rachio, has been selling "smart sprinklers" which combine automated sprinkler systems with the convenience of being controlled via a smartphone with data or Wi-Fi access. It's also "smart" in the sense that it can check the weather—if it's rained recently or the forecast shows rain, it will abstain from watering. Furthermore, the system adjusts to each season and the relative time of day to allow for maximum water absorption—ultimately cutting down lawn watering use by 30 percent, Rachio claims. Other companies promoting similar devices, such as Blossom and Skydrop, are also making a splash in a market that's thirsty for solutions. – CNN Money

■ SpaceX's emergency abort test a success

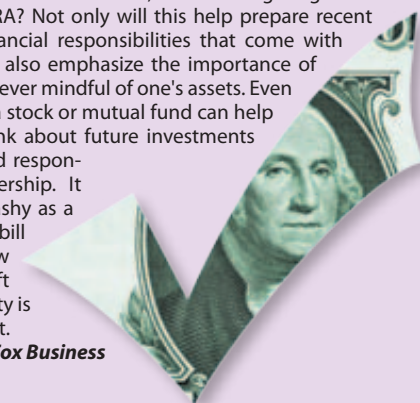

Recently, SpaceX tested an emergency mission abort procedure for their Dragon capsule—the spacecraft that may ultimately be used for manned missions to outer space. The system was developed to be used should the astronauts need to escape from a malfunctioning rocket that has already launched. Currently, SpaceX has only completed unmanned missions (shuttling supplies to and from the International Space Station, launching satellites, etc.) but CEO Elon Musk hopes to begin manned missions in the near future. Musk stated that "the test was very successful and that anyone who had been aboard the spacecraft would have been in great shape afterward." – perfsience.com

■ Graduate gifts that trump cash

Recent high school graduates will be throwing parties around this time of year and while gifts and especially monetary donations from loved ones and family friends are certainly welcome, there may be other opportunities to give that may be helpful later in life. Instead of a handsome check to be gobbled up by textbook costs or room and board fees, what about gifting a brokerage account or IRA? Not only will this help prepare recent grads for the financial responsibilities that come with adulthood, it will also emphasize the importance of saving and being ever mindful of one's assets. Even gifting shares of a stock or mutual fund can help young minds think about future investments and the costs and responsibilities of ownership. It may not be as flashy as a hundred dollar bill or a brand new laptop, but the gift of financial security is nothing to scoff at.

Weekly Devotion

"There remaineth therefore a rest to the people of God. For he that is entered into his rest, he also hath ceased from his own works, as God did from His. Let us labor therefore to enter into that rest, lest any man fall after the same example of unbelief. For the word of God is quick, and powerful, and sharper than any twoedged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart." ~ Hebrews 4:9-12

By Paul Kirby

As long as we are alive, we must keep working in behalf of the Lord. Where being a Christian is concerned, there is not retirement age. Our "day of rest" is coming but it is not yet.

God's Word is quick. That is, it is life-giving. It quickens the spirit of man and excites it to action. The Word is also powerful. It energizes the soul and gets it going when action is called for. The Word also is sharp. It is the sharpest of all swords and is the best of weapons against the mediocrity of the world. It pierces the heart of the believer and the sinner alike. It makes the most meager and the major of distinctions. The Word of God discerns. First and foremost it puts a microscope on the problem and calls it sin. The least of sins is an impediment to our relationship with Jesus Christ. We cannot grow in Christ if our relationship with Him is impeded by sin. The Word of God shows us how that sin stains the soul and kills the spirit of man.

We need to pray for God to help us to see how that we as a person and this nation as a nation of persons are hindered from being all that we can be because of sin.

God bless and go and have a great day.

Paul A. Kirby is the pastor at the Church of God at 3939 S. Emerson Ave.
