Staff at Perry Township's Indianapolis Dentistry fundraises for mission trip to El Salvador

FEATURE

By Nicole Davis

Mission trips can be life-changing. That's why staff at Indianapolis Dentistry in Perry Township has had a desire to take a trip to El Salvador and offer free dental care and training this coming January.

"(The staff is) already very compassionate, but you can't go to a third world country and not come back humbled," said Dr. Ted Reese. "We can offer superior care... The biggest impact is on us that we are going rather than the care they're receiving. The Salvadorian culture is very gracious."

Dr. Reese has made trips to El Salvador in the past, although it's been eight years since the last trip. He says the staff, none of which had been before, had asked him about the possibility of him returning. He has been working with a family in the South American country to plan the trip.

"I think it's a great opportunity to get out into another country, see how they live and deal with everyday life," said Brittany Ford, dental assistant. "I'm interested in working with them and not working with all the things we have here: suction, water. I think it's just going to be very rewarding, figuring out things we're blessed with here that they don't have and making it work."

Dr. Reese said they will focus on a women's group to help and providing dental care rather than urgent care. He will host a lecturing and teaching day and a half to "help them raise their standards of care."

"Since the majority of us are going, we can make a big impact by teaching them the skills that we know," said Melissa Callahan, dental assistant. "I'm really excited for the children aspect, taking care of them and helping them while I can."

The trip costs approximately $1,100 per person plus supplies. What funds the office cannot raise, each employee will supplement out of their own money. Indianapolis Dentistry will have a Dental Day, a day of reduced cost dental care, on Oct. 3 at the office, 7218 US 31 S. They will offer flat rates for dental work, such as $50 for cleanings and $35 for sealants. Indianapolis Dentistry is also collecting flip-flops and used eyeglasses for the trip.

"The most expensive part of the trip is materials," said Lucy Hill, office manager. "We can only take two bags along. We're trying to keep what we take personally down to nothing so we can fill the bag with stuff; flip flops, eyeglasses, dental supplies."

For more information or to schedule an appointment, call (317) 882-0028.

Allegheny Flight 853: The Crash

Rick Hinton

HAUNTS & JAUNTS

The small Cherokee passed up and over the DC-9's right wing. Its front left side just inches from where Bob Carey sat behind the controls—impacted into the DC-9's upper right tail section at the vertical stabilizer. The Cherokee was cut in half. Its impact sheared off the entire tail section of the DC-9. The remains of the Cherokee and the tail of the DC-9 dropped like a stone... almost landing directly beneath the point of impact. The right wing and fuselage of the Cherokee, carried by momentum, landed a couple of hundred feet to the south.

Carey's body, still strapped into his seat, was the only body in the wreckage found intact.

When the remainder of Flight 853 hit the soybean field just a hundred yards north of the Shady Acres Mobile Home Park, it disintegrated.

Eight witnesses purportedly saw the actual collision, yet as with any eyewitness reports, descriptions vary. Some described the descent of Flight 853 as "nosed over", "spun in" and "barrel rolled" as it impacted the earth. Some described the pieces falling from the sky as slow and fluttering like leaves from a tree. The National Transportation Safety Board (NTSB) and the county coroner feel the plane crashed inverted. Regardless, the plane was completely destroyed... shattering into pieces by the explosive impact into the field. All passengers were killed instantly... pieces of the plane, luggage and bodies were scattered over a distance of half a mile. Many of these remnants rained into the mobile home park.

A school bus letting off children at the mobile home park was a silent witness to the event. The bus driver still lives in the general > area of the crash. One of the children, now deceased and the brother of a husband of a co-worker, was impacted when he saw an arm hanging from a tree limb. His attention was focused on a ring that adorned a finger. He never quite shook the memory.

> Of the 78 DC-9 passengers and four crew members, only five were positively identified. For two days searchers painstakingly combed through the three-foot high field of soybeans, marking the areas of human remains with wooden stakes, and gathering pieces of the aircraft. The smell of kerosene (jet fuel) was overpowering and hung like a toxic curtain. It was grim, silent work at best.

Next in the conclusion: The paranormal ramifications of Flight 853.

Rick Hinton, a Greenwood resident, loves researching things that go bump in the night. His articles can be read on Facebook: Rick Hinton-Greenwood Paranormal Examiner or examiner.com/paranormal-in-indianapolis/rick-hinton.

What's in an area code?

Indianapolis and its suburbs can expect to see some changes in the coming years regarding our iconic 317 area code. The Numbering Resource Utilization/Forecast Report (NRUF Report) indicated in April of this year that the 317 area code will run out of numbers by the middle of 2017.

The Indiana Utility Regulatory Commission (IURC) has since been asked to add a new area code to the current 317 area in an effort to reach a long-term solution.

So what does this mean for local citizens and businesses? Are we going to have to change our business cards and go through all our contacts on our phones? If an overlay is approved, chances are that it won't change a thing for current 317 numbers.

"What are your thoughts, Southsiders? Share them with us at news@ss-times.com!"

According to the IURC – and this is from their website – an overlay approval would bring the following changes throughout 2015:

- All existing 317 numbers would remain unchanged.
- All customers would dial ten digits for local calls (area code + number), though local calling areas would not change. Calls that are currently local would remain local.
- Businesses, not-for-profit organizations, government agencies and other customers would not need to incur costs for reprinting signage, stationery, advertising, or business cards because of the area code change.

There will also be public field hearings, for citizens to make comments or ask questions, held at the following locations around the Indy metro area, including: Indianapolis - Friday, Sept. 26, 10 a.m.: Room 222, PNC Center, 101 W. Washington St.; Franklin - Tuesday, Oct. 14, 6 p.m.: Student Center Branigin Room, Franklin College, 101 Branigin Blvd.

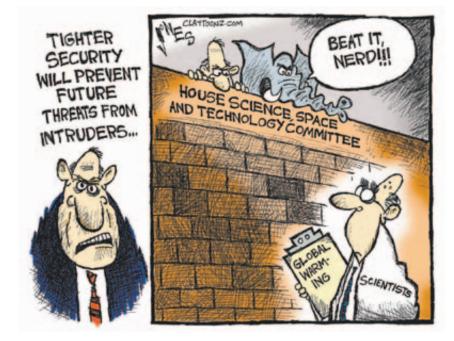

We're sad to see 317 exhausted, but we're equally curious to know how exactly this new area code will be implemented, and where. What are your thoughts, Southsiders? Share them with us at news@ss-times.com!

You can't make up this stuff

Last week, we read with interest about how a federal judge ordered the state of Alaska to increase outreach to Native American voters with limited English proficiency - because, you know ... democracy, right? This, of course, led us to ask: Limited English proficiency? Doesn't that pretty much sum up what is lacking amongst the majority of the United States' population? The days of "grammar school" have gone the way of the running board, we're afraid, and it shows so horribly in everyday conversation, writing, speech and media. Have you noticed the billboards on I-70 between Indy and the Ohio line touting "Busses welcome"? Excuse us as we go watch everyone queue up for kisses from the French.

Then comes the recent 60 Minutes report about how scammers have made small fortunes by taking advantage of the joke that is the Internal Revenue Service. It seems the opportunists – and we're talking about the scammers here, not the IRS – sent in fraudulent tax returns with anticipated refunds in the low four figures. Well, they received the checks, because there was no checks-and-balances protocol to prevent it from happening. None of this probably would be the case had former IRS chief Lois Lerner's hard drive not been wiped clean. What's that, you say? You forgot all about the IRS scandal involving Lerner? We're sorry to learn that, because that's exactly what the IRS was hoping would happen.

We're extremely happy for our sister company, Current Publishing, and its latest plans for expansion, this time into the Geist market. With an anticipated launch in the first quarter of 2015, they're fast at work finalizing the staffing and more pin-pointedly familiarizing themselves with the area. The product will be delivered by U.S. Mail every Tuesday to 11,306 high-income, high-education households that "hug the lake" (and beyond). The move into the northeastern market comes at the behest of advertisers large and small. The launch will bring to 119,439 the number of households Current serves.

Top Ten reasons the K-Mart on Madison Avenue is closing

By Torry Stiles

- 10. Frivolous lawsuits. One too many people walked into the barbed wire display while texting.
- 9. Changing economic climate. The store's employees and wholesalers kept insisting they be paid which meant the store had to insist customers pay for stuff... the whole system bogged down then.
- 8. Rough neighborhood. Even the handicapped folks were stealing the metal "Handicap Parking Only" signs and taking them to the scrapyards.
- 7. Poor management decisions. Overstocked with Backstreet Boys products hoping the comeback tour would rocket everyone back to the top.
- 6. Changing neighborhood. Management just never got over the loss of the Key West Shrimp House. The loss of a good lobster chowder finally proved too much.
- 5. Political correctness. The name is just two "K's" away from being real bad for the neighborhood.
- 4. Traffic patterns. Commuters spend so much time dodging potholes and lumpy pavement they pass right by.
- 3. Tough competition. With so many stores selling low-priced name brand products that were past their expiration date their fresh noname stuff got left behind.
- 2. Tough economy. A lot of us Southsiders will be shopping for Christmas from the McDonald's Happy Meal toy selection.
- 1. Changing clientele. Nowadays whenever they have a Blue Light Special half the customers either run out the back or stop and put their hands on top of their heads.

Wounded Warrior tournament benefits amputee softball team

FEATURE

By Marais Jacon-Duffy

Krystal Earl sits on a picnic blanket near a chain link fence following the first base line. The Indianapolis Sports Park on Harding Rd. is busy on a Saturday morning in September, but she scored a prime seat.

She and her three young children travelled from Kalamazoo, Mich., to watch her husband play in a weekend softball tournament.

He's up to bat, and Earl tells her daughter, "Yell, 'Come on, Daddy!"

Kyle Earl smacks a line drive between the second and first basemen. When he eventually returns to the bench, he doesn't stay for long.

Earl is the team's pinch-runner, a player who replaces a player on base, because he has something that his other teammates don't: legs.

Earl plays for The Wounded Warriors Amputee Softball Team, a team comprised of Iraq and Afghanistan combat veterans and active duty service members from all over the United States. The organization, a 501(c)(3) charity, aims to "raise awareness, educate and inspire the public about the strength and resiliency of our wounded warriors, showing how a positive attitude, commitment, dedication and perseverance allow them to overcome any obstacles," according to their website.

The team plays in exhibition, celebrity and competitive games and tournaments across the U.S. They will return to Indianapolis Sports Park annually for a Wounded Warrior tour-day morning. The park was packed with local teams, some with matching uniforms, some all-male, some all-female, and some co-ed.

The Wounded Warriors easily stood out in their sharp dry-fit camouflage uniforms. Earl donned the number 17 and played center field on Saturday. Earl, a U.S. Marine Corps veteran, lost his right hand in 2006 in Iraq when his Humvee hit an IED. He has played with the team for three years and travelled all over the country.

"The team has really helped him a lot," his wife said. "It's a sense of therapy for him I think." Earl stole bases and smacked drives deep into the outfield for the entirety of the game. Midway through, he came over to see him wife, two daughters and son.

When complimented on his hitting, he joked, "No, I know my job is running."

The team's slogan is "Life without a limb is limitless." Their website shares a vision, saying that "our dream would be the return of our soldiers from harm's way without the resulting loss of life and limb... until such a time, our vision is to support and honor our soldiers and veterans sacrifices, and to show other amputees and everyone who sees or hears about us that life without a limb is limitless."

The WWAST also hosts kids' softball camps for children with amputations and missing limbs.

All proceeds raised at last weekend's tournament benefitted the WWAST, which is not affiliated with The Wounded Warrior Project. Future plans for the annual tournament have not yet been finalized, but games will be held at Indianapolis Sports Park Inc., on 6701 S. Harding St.

Southport and Southside residents began lining the streets two hours before the Southport High School homecoming parade on Sept. 19. The Student Booster Club presented the annual Homecoming Red and White Parade, followed by the Cardinal's game versus Bloomington South at Perry Township Stadium.

The grand marshal this year was an Indianalocal celebrity, Rupert Boneham. After 20 years employed in the mental health field, Boneham found success on the TV reality game show Survivor, having been on four separate times. Boneham went on to give back to his community as a youth mentor and advocate. In 2012, he campaigned for governor of Indiana. In 2004, Boneham founded Rupert's Kids, a nonprofit organization dedicated to mentoring and training youth ex-offenders. Learn more about that organization at rupertskids.org.

"To run around and get pictures with the kids, to get pictures with people young and old," Rupert said. "To be a 50 year old man and to be cool to the high school kids, elementary school kids, 20-somethings, it's not a bad world."

TRIATHLON TRIUMPH

Perry Township's Todd Shellenberger achieves his dream of qualifying for Ironman World Championship.

COVER STORY

By Nicole Davis

Ever since Todd Shellenberger began competing in triathlons 20 years ago, he would watch the Ironman World Championships in Kailua-Kona, Hawaii with his family and dream about going. The last three years, his finishing times have continued to drop. This year, he finally qualified for the 2014 championships to take place on Oct. 11.

"I feel like I'm one of those people saying dreams really can come true," Shellenberger said. "This was literally just a dream I never thought was going to happen. My best time before three years ago was 11 hours and 11 minutes – at least an hour off from getting in and an hour is a long time. I just went out and did as good as I can do at something and now I have to do it an hour faster? To cut that kind of time off, I've been really fortunate."

Shellenberger, a Perry Township resident, began running during college, beginning with short-distance sprint races. He competed in his first Ironman distance triathlon in the mid-90s. Shellenberger, who spent approximately 20 years working as an accountant, decided to change careers and work in the industry he was most passionate about. He has worked as a personal trainer and triathlon coach for five years at the Baxter YMCA.

"For me, the most enjoyable thing is seeing people get into this sport and having fun at it," Shellenberger said. "The rewards are great. People feel good about themselves. These sports help to build self-esteem. Seeing people cross the finish line and doing something they thought they couldn't do, it's amazing. It's not for everybody. People enjoy different things. But if people decided this was something they wanted to do and wanted to work at it, they can do it and it might not take 20 years like it took me. It's just fun when you get to finally live your dream... Once people start, usually you fall into one of two groups. You do your first one and you love it and you're hooked forever or you do your first one and you think okay, I've got that off my bucket list."

He has run nine Ironman triathlons, a 2.4mile swim, 112-mile bike ride and 26.2 mile race. Shellenberger said he noticed from observation over the years that the athletes that made it into the championships always finished the race in fewer than 10 hours. At this year's qualifying Ironman triathlon in Louisville, he finished in nine hours and 43 minutes, finally reaching his goal of qualifying for the world championships.

"It's not really glorious or any real secret," Shellenberger said. "It's that consistent effort. In any profession or anything you really enjoy, the more time you put into it, the better you get at it, generally speaking. The other thing and probably my hardest job as the coach is getting people to not do too much. Injuries and all that stuff happen when you're tired and do too much."

Knowing he was getting close to qualifying, Shellenberger said he made a training plan in December for a triathlon team at the YMCA. The team started training seriously on Jan. 1. Every Saturday they'd be in the gym, spending two hours on the bikes and then running outside, in the cold. He said a large time commitment and consistency are the keys to building up the endurance.

"It's been a really good group effort, with all the support," Shellenberger said. "There were nine of us from the Baxter Y that went to Louisville. For about seven of them, it was their first Ironman. They all finished. If you ask at least five of those seven if they ever thought they'd do an Ironman, they'd say no. It was very rewarding that not only I did very well but the team did really well. We had a good time. It was a fun process with a lot of dedication but a really nice play-out in the

Preparing for the Ironman has taken a lot of time, and Shellenberger said he couldn't have done it without his family's support, particularly his wife, Jamie, who helps him with the strategic planning behind getting to the events. He said his two children, Erika, 15, and Drew, 12, have come to many of the races and do a lot of running, too. His family and a few of the Baxter YMCA triathletes will go to Hawaii together. He said the trip was perfect timing and is made even more special because he and Jamie recently celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary in August.

"The hardest thing is going to be staying focused and not getting caught up in all the lights, that it's the world championship," Shellenberger said. "It's focusing, doing your job, doing what got you there. If I have a bad race, I'm still in Hawaii so it's not terrible."

Shellenberger said he knows he's going to be racing with the top couple percent of athletes that do triathlons. He is one of 1,800 people that will compete in Hawaii. He said he looks forward to enjoying the experience, and most importantly, not getting too focused and stressed about the competition so that he will enjoy the vacation afterwards.

"This year I wasn't thinking past Louisville," Shellenberger said. "Now I'm focusing on Hawaii. Once that passes, and we come back from Hawaii, then I'll think about more. It won't be hard to find another goal. It's just that kind of activity. There's always something else to do and to get better. Even when you have a great race and you finish you think, well, I could have done this better. You have to be able to enjoy the outcome the way things are. You always focus on the next race."

On the cover: Todd Shellenberger finishes the Ironman triathlon in Louisville which qualified him for the World Championship.

Chair yoga benefits Southside seniors as they exercise without leaving their seats

FOCUS

By Nicole Davis

Seniors from across the Southside have participated in National Yoga Month this September. Although, when many people first hear the word yoga, they don't know what to expect from it, said Jessie Friskney, who instructs a chair yoga class for American Senior Communities, including Rosegate Assisted Living, 7510 Rosegate Dr. on the Southside of Indianapolis. The exercise which encourages stretching and relaxation is something than can be varied to fit anyone's health needs.

"It keeps them active and moving," said Friskney, who also teaches yoga at City Yoga in downtown Indianapolis, 2242 Central Ave. "Sometimes the older we get the more sedentary we become. It helps us with posture. A lot of the posture issues you see in seniors can be overcome. Balance, it's important to continue to work in balance. Relaxation, too. So much of yoga is clearing your mind, focusing on the practice. They feel very calm at the end."

Friskney said since she's taught the chair yoga classes, she's seen improvement in the senior participants. Sometimes the participants can't do things like bending to touch their toes. As time goes on, they eventually can. Yoga isn't about doing everything perfectly; it's about doing the movements to the best of the person's abilities and improving over time.

"I want to take as many exercise classes as I can," said Imogene Moore, yoga participant at Rosegate. "It keeps me going. I'm in this wheelchair all the time. (Chair yoga) is easy to do. I can't do all of it the way it should be done, but I do everything I can."

Benefits of yoga can range from mental clarity and focus to better digestion. Friskney said she will often offer some aromatherapy in her classes, too

"I enjoy the exercise part, the movement," said Gwen Hamilton, yoga participant at Rosegate. "We've learned to relax. We would encourage others to come. It's wonderful relaxation."

rom our first breath till our last, we're told what's good for us, heavily influenced by our parent's eating behaviors and advertising. Unfortunately, most parents thoughtlessly project their silly fears of plant food upon their suggestible children and thwart their acceptance of the foods they should be eating, rather than foods they're told to eat by vegaphobic parents who don't know how to cook, or by the morbidly obese icon, Poppin' Fresh, along with scores of cutesy food mascots.

We weren't born to dislike God's heavenly apothecary of health-sustaining plant foods; we were taught. We are indeed a gullible species that would rather do what they are told than think and learn. After all, everyone wants to reach their highest potential, be happy, healthy and beautiful, correct? You must first give your temple the 40 basic vitamins and "How can I describe it?

Good food is like music you can taste, color you can smell. There is excellence all around you. You need only to be aware to stop and savor
it." ~ Gusteau (Ratatouille)

minerals needed daily to breathe, walk, talk, laugh and perform chores.

Our nation's departed the road of national righteousness onto the uncharted dirt road of nutritionally bankrupt, fake food passed off as, and I must snicker here, "natural." By their definition, cat poop would qualify as "natural," so don't be fooled by semantics. Again, Big Food thinks you're not paying attention, much to the glee of pharma and the medical fraternity. However, more awakened Americans are realizing the perverted Western diet is toxic to holy temple chemistry, but stimulates obscene profits.

Every day you make decisions regarding what you eat. What we are not is 'present' when we shop, cook and eat. Focus and be there when you shop. Don't robotically grab the same old crap over and over again. Instead, adventure outside your comfort zone for a refreshing blast of heavenly plant-based cellular nutrition. Smell the food, ponder its color, origin and beauty, then ask yourself, "Is this food feeding or depleting me?" Creation designed you to express perfect health, but you must take part.

Medical authorities have concluded inflammation from the environment plus eating dead food is the cause of 70 to 80 percent of today's largely preventable disease like cancer, heart disease, Diabesity, and digestive problems. I emphasize, largely preventable since within everyone, the power to overcome this Western diet of death, that patiently waits for your beckoning. You just need to be more aware of what you place into your most valuable possession; the Divine holy temple. I encourage "being present" when you make decisions. You're not at all the programmable mental midgets they assume you are.

Mary Bryan Chapter of DAR treated to folk music at monthly meeting

The Mary Bryan Chapter of DAR was entertained by The-Forget-Me-Nots at its monthly meeting. The meeting was held at the Bethel Community Church of Southport on Sept. 8. The members were treated to an evening of folk music which included vocal and instrumental music. The instrumentals were done with dulcimers. The instruments are some that were brought over by our ancestors. There were five dulcimers, one harmonica and one person playing spoons. Four of The-Forget-Me-Nots were members of Daughters of the American Revolution: Marti McCoun, Donna Kinninger and Barbara Grisgby. Bob Robson gave a talk on dulcimers and how they are made and how easily they are to play. Anyone

This is Where I Leave You... excellent cast, mediocre film

MOVIE REVIEW

▼very so often there comes a film that incites a great deal of anticipation. Usually, like a child waking up on Christmas morning to unwrap a package of clothes. Other times, on rare occasions, a film meets, and an even smaller percentage manages to exceed expectations. One of those films able to raise my interest considerably was the new film starring Jason Bateman and Tina Fey, This is Where I Leave

This is Where I Leave You tells the story of the Altman family, a large Jewish family who recently lost their father and husband. After walking in on his wife in bed with his boss, Judd Altman (Bateman), heads to the family compound for his father's funeral. Subsequently after arriving, Judd and the rest of his siblings are informed their father's dying wish was for his family to observe the Jewish mourning period, Shiva.

Fulfilling their father's last wish proves to be more difficult than anyone expected. Personal problems and matters are shared and confronted in front of the family which makes for awkward and often hilarious moments. Even though everyone puts up a façade of having the perfect life, their lives are far from ideal.

This is Where I Leave You boasts an exceptionally impressive cast. It's doubtful any film the rest of the year assembles a roster as talented and as accomplished as what we get here. However, what is likely its biggest draw > is also its biggest downfall. Jason Bateman as the lead and Tina Fey in a supporting role receive the most significant chunk of screen time and rightfully so. Unfortunately, with only so much screen time to go around, the rest of the cast is underutilized and their storylines and characters feel underdeveloped.

Having never read the novel upon which the film is based, from watching the trailers I still felt confident in the kind of story I would see and where it'd go. For the most part, my suspicions were proven correct. The story is often predictable, leaving you feeling you've seen that scene or heard that joke a couple hundred times.

This is Where I Leave You is not a bad film by any stretch of the imagination. Instead, it's a > film that could've and should've been something special, but try as it might, it never rises above mediocrity. A 3 out of 5.

New website promotes development opportunities in Johnson County

AROUND TOWN

A new website is promoting Johnson County's available locations for companies needing to expand or relocate and touting the community's business advantages and quality of life. Johnson County Development Corporation officials say the new website, jcdc.org, will help attract new companies and encourage existing ones to expand. "We know these companies are doing their research first and foremost on the Internet. This new website puts Johnson County on their radar," said Cheryl Morphew, president and CEO of the Johnson County Development Corporation. Morphew said JCDC committed to a more aggressive marketing plan earlier in the year. Having a robust website that provides critical data and information needed by company search firms and brokers was atop their list. The website was designed and created by Spinweb, a digital marketing company in Indianapolis. J Owen Media of Franklin collaborated on the project, which was sponsored by Community Hospital South and Runnebohm Construction.

A simple twist on after-school snacks

RECIPE

We all know it's important to start the day off with a healthy breakfast. As a parent, you also have lunch covered for your hungry student, whether it's packed in a brown bag or eaten in the cafeteria. But after a busy day of learning, young tummies often need a wholesome after-school snack to tide them over until dinner.

Keeping a stash of kid-friendly snacks handy is a sure-fire way to keep snack time manageable, while making sure kids don't have a full afternoon meal, which would spoil their appetite for dinner.

Instead of potato chips or cookies, try crunchy veggies paired with a flavorful dip. As an added (and educational) bonus, invite kids to help make snacks ahead of time, assigning them age-appro-

Kick off your new after-school snack routine with a recipe like this one for Ranch Pimento Cheese Celery Logs, created by country music star and busy mom of seven, Sara Evans, on behalf of Hidden Valley. For a little kick, Evans suggests substituting with Hidden Valley* Spicy Ranch Salad Dressing & Seasoning Mix. If your kids resist celery or you want a little variety, this spread also makes great finger sandwiches when layered between two slices of sandwich bread and cut into small triangles.

For more kid-friendly after-school snack ideas, visit HiddenValley.com.

Ranch Pimento Cheese Celery Logs

Makes: 30 filled celery logs Prep Time: 15-20 minutes

- · 8 ounces shredded cheddar cheese
- 1/2 cup mayonnaise
- 1 teaspoon Hidden Valley° Original Ranch Salad Dressing & Seasoning Mix
- 1 (4-ounce) jar pimentos, drained
- 30 (2-inch) celery logs, cut from about 1 bunch of celery

Place cheese, mayonnaise, seasoning mix and pimentos in bowl of food processor. Pulse a few times until well combined but still chunky, taking care not to over mix. Alternatively, you can mix by hand, but it won't be quite as spreadable.

Divide cheese mixture among celery logs (about 2 teaspoons per log), mounding it into cavity.

Serve cold.

Cheerleaders were encouraged to give their best Rebel yell, football players, from grades three to eight, were introduced during the halftime ceremony and young band members were encouraged to play along with the band. The CYO program is instrumental in developing quality athletes with a special emphasis on spirituality and being mindful of Christian values that foster personal development on and off the field. Many of Roncalli's best and brightest student athletes got their start as a CYO player. Rebels defeated Scecina 41-7.

How shall we slay thee?

GRAMMAR GUY

hy does the media keep using the word 'slain?' Why are they sensationalizing this story? It was just an accident!

Admittedly these questions weren't really posed to me, but I've decided to co-opt them for official Grammar Guy purposes. Great artists steal, and all that.

The story in question involves the recent death of a firing range instructor from an accidental shooting involving a 9-year-old girl at the range. The particular headline read something like, "Family of slain gun instructor reaches out to girl."

Now, tragedy of the story aside, many commentators took issue with the word "slain," suggesting that it overdramatized what was essentially an accident. There are two sides to the argument, and I find myself sympathetic to both.

Does "slay" not work? You would be hard pressed, I think, to argue that a word meaning "to kill by violence" is not appropriate in the case of a shooting death – no matter how accidental. Sudden, penetrating trauma is quintessentially violent. I would further offer that "killed" makes an awkward adjective.

Everything being fine on paper, notwithstanding, the issue is obviously one of connotation and denotation. The denotation of "slain" – killed by violent means – does not jibe with the connotation readers ascribe to the word, namely, "murdered."

This is the sort of tricky language issue that you can argue until you're red in the face about and, while you might be technically right, you may still fail in the ultimate goal of language: to communicate accurately your thoughts to another person. That is why, especially with loaded words, you must always be cognizant of the emotional baggage a word or phrase can carry above and beyond its dictionary entry. There is using a word correctly, and then there is using a word appropriately. Pick your battles as you see fit.

Paying It Forward at Isom Elementary

Mrs. Santos, teacher, has organized the Pay It Forward Kindness program. The purpose is to demonstrate the power and importance of human kindness by promoting the practice of kind acts, large and small, ultimately developing caring, productive citizens. Through both planned and random acts of kindness, participants are engaged in making a significant effort toward the betterment of the world. The Pay It Forward program works like this: Step 1: An act of kindness is performed. Step 2: The act is recorded on a kindness strip. Step 3: The beneficiary of the kindness is asked to pay the kindness forward by doing two acts of kindness for two other people. Each kindness completed by the school learning community (recorded on the kindness strips) will become a link in the kindness chain. We are all working together toward the goal of 1 million kindnesses by Random Acts of Kindness week (Nov. 17-21). Homecoming spirit award winners

The Franklin Central High School Student Council hosted their annual Homecoming Parade on Sept. 17. The Homecoming Parade traveled through downtown Wanamaker as the Franklin Township Community rallied behind our Flashes Football team. All FTCSC Schools participated in the parade with a spirit award given to the entry that best fits the theme and has the most spirit. This year's floats, banners, costumes, tailgating, musical instruments, songs, chants, and enthusiasm were at an all-time high!

The 2014 HOMECOMING SPIRIT WINNER... Arlington Elementary

Congratulations to Principal Melissa Morris, students, faculty, staff and parents. Captain Flash presented representatives from the school with the trophy at the Homecoming Halftime Show on the Flashes' football field on Sept. 17.

Coffee in a Flash

Students in Mr. McCormick's business class at Franklin Central High School participate in real-life experiences. Business students, through the support of the FTCSC nutrition department, opened a coffee shop for staff and students. A variety of drinks are served each morning before school. The shop is managed and operated by FC business students. The students learn about marketing and sales as they try different ideas such as days with reduced pricing and seasonal specialties. This month, those wishing to stop by Coffee in a Flash can try the new Pumpkin Spice Latte.

"Kindness is our Strength"

did vou choose education? I began my college career as an accounting major. However, the direction of my career path changed after I worked at a summer athletic camp. Since then, teaching and working with young people became my passion.

What do you mean by, "Kindness is our Strength"? As a leader, I believe that creating a kind culture promotes the best teaching and learning environment. Many times kiddos believe kindness is a weakness and the weak are taken advantage of. By modeling kindness and caring, adults show our students that kindness is indeed a strength.

What is a rewarding part of your work? One of the more rewarding parts of my work is the opportunity to lead professional development for our secondary administrators. We discuss multiple topics and develop strategies for school improvement plans and long range goals.

I also attend weekly Instructional Leadership Team (ILT) meetings where school leadership teams meet to discuss and plan ways to support teachers in their efforts to raise student achievement.

What are your current responsibilities as Assistant Superintendent? My responsibilities include monitoring graduation rates, college bound students, Central 9 Career Center students, retention rates, AP/Dual Credit courses, textbook adoption, TAP teacher evaluations and more. My goal is to develop, and maintain the best possible educational programs and experiences for all students in Perry Township Schools.

What is a point of pride? If I just have to pick one, I'm extremely proud of our high schools for again being recognized "AP Honor Roll" schools. With the help of a grant from the National Math and Science Institute, we have increased the number of AP courses offered in the district, increased the number of students taking AP (Advanced Placement) courses and increased the number of scores of 3-5 on the AP exams. Our teachers receive exceptional training and support from NMSI. This has helped greatly increase the academic standards and rigor of our high school curricu-

How often do you get to interact with students and teachers? The best part of my job is getting out and seeing our kiddos in action. I attend multiple school events every week outside the school day-athletics, music, arts and academic programs. I also visit the schools and classrooms to see firsthand the high quality instructional practices of our amazing teachers.

Do you have a favorite quote? John Maxwell said it best, "People don't care how much you know, until they know how much you care."

Smart car testing: Sensory overload

CHUCKLE

Q: When Blackbeard retired from the sea he grew corn and sold it by the roadside.

How much did he charge?

A: He charged 'a buck an ear"!

CHESTER'S CORNER

By James D. Allen

My friend Ace Hawkins (techno guru and super salesman) is experimenting again. He wanted Jim to test drive a "smart car". It has a super computer that is practically human (something Congress could use!). So if Jim is talking while driving and not paying attention (a frequent problem in his life) the car will take care of itself. It will automatically slam on the brakes or shift lanes if it "senses" an obstruction (e.g. a stopped car or truck). It even has heat and bio-data sensors to detect a pedestrian or stray dog that might be hit.

Of course the smart car has sensors which sound a soft alarm if Jim has someone in his blind spots. This way he knows not to change lanes.

The advanced model features a digital emergency screen which pleads with nearby drivers to back off to a safe distance.

For problem drinkers, there is a built-in breathalyzer in the steering wheel which will disable the ignition if the driver exhales too much alcohol on his breath. Jim is a tea-totaler so this might not help him at all.

The on-board display is linked to the Internet. It will automatically alert Jim's wife when there is a sale at Christopher and Banks in Greenwood. She can push the emergency "sale" button which will drive the car to the nearest parking spot.

The tires, if pierced, automatically seal and reinflate. The reinflation is generated by the wind from Jim's old sermons gathered in concentrated form. The reinflation lasts up to 50 miles proving that even old wind bags have their limits.

When Jim actually drove the car, he encountered some problems. The heated seats were too hot. But once he got the air conditioning on he couldn't turn it down. Thus he was too hot and too cold at the same time. The sensors worked well, too well. He was flooded with warnings about blind spots, stray dogs, low-flying aircraft, and reminders to change the oil within 500 miles. The computer voice was programmed by his wife. Thus her voice was constantly telling him where to go.

The automatic door locks refused to open once Jim stopped the vehicle. The power windows worked so he shinned through to freedom. Meanwhile, the trunk opened for no apparent reason and would not stay closed. When it began to rain, Jim went inside. He phoned Ace and told him, "Back to the drawing board."

Chester is a ventriloquist dummy who visits Edgewood United Methodist Church in Perry Township on special Sunday services. Pastor Jim Allen and Chester enjoy joking back and forth to drive home a serious message at church.

Roncalli and Franklin Central compete in annual Chick-fil-A challenge Roncalli High School squared off against Franklin Central once again for the annual Chick-fil-A Challenge, which ran from Aug. 23 through Aug. 29 at the Chick-fil-A, 5240 E. Southport Rd. (across from Meijer). Students, faculty, parents, alumni and other Rebel supporters came to support the effort. While both schools received a large portion of the revenue generated by the event, Roncalli brought in the most money with nearly $4,400 and walked away with the 2014 Chick-fil-A traveling trophy, which was awarded during halftime at the Franklin Central vs. Roncalli football game on Friday evening. The Rebels went on to win the game with a 16-6 victory.

Lutheran High School's Dave Pasch named Colts Coach of the Week

Dave Pasch of Lutheran High School has been named the Colts/NFL Coach of the Week, a program presented by Anthem Blue Cross and Blue Shield. According to the Colts website, "Pasch was selected after his Saints defeated defending Class 2A state champion Cardinal Ritter Raiders. Coach Pasch had his team primed for a dominant performance, which included five interceptions, four sacks and 370 yards rushing, leading to the impressive 42-6 outcome." Coach Pasch took over the Saints' program in 2008 and has guided the team to a 37-29 record in his previous six seasons at the school. Prior to that, he coached North Putnam to a 65-57 record in 11 seasons.

From left, Dave Pasch and Mike Prior, Youth Football Commissioner for the Indianapolis Colts, who made a visit to Lutheran to recognize Coach Pasch and to challenge members of the football team to excel in the classroom as well as on the field.

Fidelity: Covenant relationships need a revival

By Pastor Paul A. Kirby

"If mine heart have been deceived by a woman, or if I have laid wait at my neighbour's door; Then let my wife grind unto another, and let others bow down upon her. For this is a heinous crime; yea, it is an iniquity to be punished by the judges." ~ Job 31:9-11

Fidelity: A word that does not get the consideration today that it should. More than 48 years ago I made a promise. That promise is still binding upon my heart and soul and very life today. I promised to be the husband to my wife and to be her husband alone. I have kept that promise and I am glad that I have.

Today covenant relationships are nearly whimsical. People enter into covenants such as marriage with the idea that if for some reason they grow uncomfortable with the relationship or it becomes too overbearing for them, they can simply walk away from it as though the promises were never made in the first place.

I was pretty idealistic when I first entered into ministry. I thought that if I was stern enough with couples who came to be married by me that they would not marry if they were not truly in love and did not intend to remain together until death did them part. I have turned some couples away but not as many as

I should. Recently, I have turned more away than I have agreed to marry. Why? Because in my opinion, they do not take marriage seriously nor the fact that the covenant that is made in marriage is not only between them but made in the presence of God and they don't take Him seriously.

The Bible tells us that it is better not to make a vow than to make one and not keep it. Job is saying to us that he made covenant with God and man and his wife to be faithful to her and though he had many opportunities to break that covenant, he never did. He loved the wife of his youth and now, even though they had aged and the wrinkles had set in and the bones began to creak when they walked together; he still loved her and would be faithful to her.

Today, without the vow of fidelity, many couples just move in together. The Bible calls this cohabitation and it brings one into an immoral and illegal in the eyes of God and His church relationship. If one loves another truly, they will do what is best for the other always, even if it means putting their passions aside until a time when it is right to express them.

The entertainment industry has so glorified immorality and infidelity that the world has come to accept it as normal. It is not now nor will it ever be right to live contrary to the standards that the Bible sets for us.

God bless and go and have a great day.
