Indianapolis firefighters recognized for contributions

The Indianapolis Fire Department recently honored their own, with more than 100 awards given to IFD firefighters and citizens of Indianapolis. Awards were presented for those who displayed exemplary performances during 2018. Ninety-two firefighters and 14 civilians were recognized for outstanding contributions during an incident or for their role in the community. The awards ceremony marks 160 years of service to Indianapolis citizens.

Perry Township Board of Education welcomes new members

Membership - Perry Township Schools Board of Education has welcomed new members. In November, there were three vacancies on the General Election ballot as Ed Denning and Jon Morris retired from the board after more than eight years of service and Dr. Steve Maple moved out of the district a year prior after more than 23 years of service. Collin Fultz and Hannah Dale ran for office in the November 2018 election. Fultz had already served one year, filling the remainder of Dr. Steve Maple's term. Both Fultz and Dale were elected by voters. To fill the remaining vacancy, the open board seat was advertised. Applications were received and interviews were

Strange rumblings in Kentucky: Part II

HAUNTS & JAUNTS

By Rick Hinton

There are mysteries in southern Kentucky ... secrets not obtained easily, yet secrets all the same, just inside the range of shadows. As with any small town across the country, some things are best left unsaid. Jamestown, Kentucky, however, became my point of origination in the study of "things" that go bump in the night.

When the Indianapolis grandkids invaded tiny Jamestown for a weekend, including the tiny house of my grandparents, mirth and mayhem ensued. The mission became keeping all the kids out of the small living quarters as long as possible. That meant we could play outside long after darkness fell. The solitary streetlight at the crest of Sunset Drive (formerly Mud Road) weakly illuminated the front yard and little else. The backyard stretched downward into the blackness of a field. Grandpa Arnold always told us not to go into the backyard, and certainly not to climb the fence into the field. "Why?" we would ask. He would smile and say nothing. I would stop in that backyard after a bout of catching fireflies in a mason jar and stare off into the black. I always felt "something" was watching me.

After my grandfather Arnold died, my grandmother Lucille sold some of the land. My aunt June got the tobacco field next to the house. That tobacco field had been a challenge for my grandfather in keeping the grandkids, and their dirt-clo'd battles, out of. It was a losing proposition. She put in a single-wide mobile home until she could build a house. That solved some of the issues with sleeping accommodations when the grand kids visited. One night, with several of us spread out across a pull-out sofa/bed, I couldn't sleep. Too wound up from being a kid, I guess. I distinctively heard footsteps climbing up the outside metal steps, and the door opening, making their way to the kitchen. Drawers opened and I could hear silverware rattling. I raised up enough to look into the large mirror on the wall behind the sofa that overlooked the kitchen. The noise continued as the streetlight illuminated the room, yet, there was no one there! I buried my head into the covers and waited for morning.

My mother was born with a caul (a piece of the amniotic sac) over her face. This happens to less than one in every 80,000 babies. It is referred to as "born with a veil." It's not just a Kentucky thing, yet they seem to embrace it as a sign of good luck ... or, as the superstition goes ... one associated with supernatural gifts, including psychic abilities. My mom always believed it. Who am I to disagree?

There is one particular story my mom always told. It stuck with me then and continues to this day. Maybe she broke the vow of silence — to keep inside what best needs to be kept silent. Maybe this veil upon the face had something to do with what happened to her? I don't know. Yet, what I do know, was that it had everything to do with me eventually exploring the shadowy realms of ghosts and spirits in the future. It takes time to answer all questions...

READY to WORK

ACT Work Ready program rolls out in Johnson County

By Stephanie Dolan

The strength of a community can be measured in many ways. And everyone knows that when the job market is strong, the community thrives.

In Johnson County, the ACT Work Ready Community program was launched earlier this month by the Johnson County Development Corporation. ACT Work Ready communities are billed as a part of a national infrastructure creating community-based networks to link, align and match America's workforce.

Dana Monson, 54, is the executive director of the Johnson County Development Corporation, and she is passionate about the rollout of this new program in Johnson County.

"One of the beauties of this program is really identifying those skills gaps with your employers and helping them with retention," Monson said. "By going through this system, getting those jobs profiled and understanding exactly what is needed they can better connect that and better align that with the workforce that they already have. If you get an employee that's in a skilled job that they can do well and that they enjoy, they're going to stay longer. So, this helps with that retention.

"It also helps employers identify skills that are weaknesses overall and help employees understand the skills they actually need for a job. ACT Work Ready Communities Program is a national program. Our role has been to bring this national program and bring it here through a partnership with Johnson County Development Corporation, Aspire Johnson County, Central Nine Career Center, the Franklin Work One Office and the Johnson County Public Library as well as Ivy Tech and Franklin College."

Gayle Brooks, 59, is a continuing education coordinator for the Central Nine Career Center, and she is seeing firsthand how the ACT Work Ready program is benefiting her students.

"Anyone can benefit from it," Brooks said. "There are two parts to the certification – the number of individuals earning the national career readiness certificate through the work keys testing and then a certain number of employers recognizing that testing. Work One has done the testing, and employers ask for the testing. We just are kind of pushing it up and getting more organized about it."

Community Engagement

Brooks said that this initiative is gaining national recognition.

"There are six counties in Indiana that are already certified ACT Work Ready communities," she said. "I heard about it at an adult education conference. I'm on the adult education side of Central Nine. There are a lot of gaps, and there are a lot of employers who aren't getting the employees that they need. Or students are going to college when they could really just learn a trade and be happier and more well off, but at the same time there's kind of stigma that goes along with that."

Central Nine Career Center services both high school students from Central Nine High School as well as adults who take advantage of nighttime classes.

"Our main focus, when people think of adult education, are high school equivalency and English as a second language classes," Brooks said. "That's kind of our base. We also have continuing education job training classes. But the department of workforce development has really

5 questions with Dana Monson and Gayle Brooks

What did you want to be when you were a kid?

DANA – I wanted to be a teacher. I was a teacher for a long time before I switched gears mid-life. I loved teaching.

GAYLE – I was always interested in fashion merchandising, which is what my degree was in. My mom was a designer. She sewed, and I really enjoyed the fruits of her labor.

What was your first job?

DANA – It was working at a restaurant called Burger Queen in Kentucky. I was 15.

GAYLE – When I turned 16, I got a job at South Keystone Twin Cinemas.

Do you have a work goal that you've yet to reach?

DANA – I do. As far as working with our communities, I'm working very hard on that collaboration and bringing our communities together. I'm seeing that happen but it's one of those things that we can always do better.

GAYLE – I think mine is similar in that we're seeing that now with a lot of community initiatives working together. We have guidance counselors, principals, different HR people. There's a good cross section, and instead of us all trying to do their own thing, I feel like we're all connected better. I think this program is the result of that. It's great to bring people together. We do want the community to be the best that it can be.

What are you currently reading?

DANA – I just started a book last night called The Three by Sarah Lotz.

GAYLE – I read the new Nicholas Sparks' book, Every Breath, last weekend. I've also been rereading the Seven Habits of Highly Successful People.

Would you consider yourself a feminist?

DANA – I consider myself an equalist. I grew up very blessed. I grew up with parents and grandparents who told me I could be whatever I wanted to be. For me, I never really felt like I'm a girl and I can't do that. I believe that if we got past labels and we saw people as they are, we'd be a whole lot better off as a country.

GAYLE – I believe in some aspects I'm a feminist. Opportunities for women were starting to change when I was growing up. I feel like it's so important that women be given the same opportunities. We've come a long way. When I grew up too no one told me I couldn't do one thing or another. My parents were very open, and I was one of the youngest of the cousins and one of the first to go to college.

Top, The program was formally announced on Jan. 23 at Franklin College. | Left, Brooks took some time to outline the program on Jan. 23 when it was formally announced. (Submitted photos) changed how we do things. They don't want someone to just get their GED and be done. They want job training of some sort and to get them a job. We've really expanded the continuing education in recent years. We have great labs. There's a whole building with car lifts for auto repair. There are kids there during the day and adults there at night."

Central Nine also offers welding, certified nurse assistance and certified electronics technicians, as well as classes in QuickBooks, Microsoft Word and Excel.

"We probably have at least 15 off-site locations around Johnson County and southern Marion County as well," Brooks said.

Community benefits

Monson added that the Johnson County Development Corporation is a one-stop shop for the county when it comes to growing a business.

"We are here to represent any community, any business, anyone who's wanting to start a business or who's been here a while and wants to expand," she said. "We're here to help with all facets of that. We're non-profit so we're apolitical. We represent all of the county. We're not beholden to one little area or another. We look at what's in the best interest of the community and the company. We help them through the incentive processes and through sight location. Just like if you were buying a house and setting things up for the first time. Which utility company do I go through? How do I get my electric turned on? We go through those same questions. How do I get this permitting or that zoning done? It just helps to have one office where you can get all that done and to streamline that process to make sure we're doing everything we can to make our businesses successful."

Monson also said that this program is going to help residents of the community.

"We want vibrant communities," she said. "We want opportunities for residents. We want to see them in communities with nice amenities. We want to see them in communities that are healthy and safe. And having those good-skilled quality jobs that give folks that income – that is going to help everybody. The rising tide raises all ships. That's what's important to me."

University of Indianapolis features faculty-created artwork

By Nancy Price

A local exhibit is showing the inspiration behind artwork created by 14 faculty members from the University of Indianapolis Department of Art & Design. The display, located at the Christel DeHaan Fine Arts Center Gallery on the university's campus, opened during a reception held last week.

The exhibition, which runs through Feb. 8, includes ceramics, visual communication design, painting, drawing, photography, printmaking, illustration and sculpture. Featured artists are Steven Garst, associate adjunct; Alan Bundza, Christine Dearth, Donna Adams, Wendy Shapiro and Lauren Ditchely, adjunct professors; Katherine Fries, Sarah Pfohl, Rhonda Wolverton, Nathan Foley, Randi Frye and Barry Barnes, assistant professors; Jim Viewegh, chair of Art & Design; and Julie Taugner, associate professor.

The Christel DeHaan Fine Arts Center Gallery at the University of Indianapolis features several exhibitions of two- and three-dimensional art each year. The gallery is open 9 a.m. – 9 p.m. on weekdays. Admission is free.

For more information, go to uindy.edu/arts/art.

1. This sculpture was created by Nathan Foley, an assistant professor of art in the department of Art & Design at the University of Indianapolis. Foley's artwork was inspired by his lifetime passion of aviation. 2. Sarah Pfohl, who teaches art at U of Indy, photographed her mother in rural New York, where both grew up. "In a large family, especially during warmer months, the ritual and rhythm of laundry grew over time into a powerful force that shaped each day, while sheets and towels on the clothesline became a play structure, an outdoor fort moved by the wind, a place within which to imagine," she said. 3. Rhonda Wolverton is a faculty member in Visual Communications Design at UIndy. "Building Barrios not Barriers" is an installation that is part of that work to subvert known language and American symbols of immigration to create dialogue and to share real immigration experiences. I gathered in-depth personal stories of immigration experiences," she said. 4. Wolverton's display was originally housed at Fletcher's Coffee Shop near Fountain Square during election month last year. 5. Wolverton's message behind the artwork is to embrace the diversity and beauty of immigration. (Photos by Tony Frampton)

Buckley announces third term run as Beech Grove Mayor

FEATURE

By Nancy Price

Beech Grove Mayor Dennis Buckley has decided to run as mayor for a third term.

"There are several young people that I want to groom to take over leadership of the city," Buckley said. "This will give me the opportunity to work with them. I envision new leadership five to 10 years from now when my term is done. I want them to have the same, clear vision that I've had in the last 12 years."

D. Buckley

Buckley, a democrat, said that he will continue to focus on improvements in infrastructure this year, noting that the city has received more than $10 million in funding for these projects.

"We're getting ready for Phase One of the Greenway," he said. "We've installed sidewalks throughout the city and repaired sidewalks. We've made significant drainage improvements through the city. We still have a ways to go, though our road maintenance is excellent. We've paved so many roads."

We are working on a new concept: roundabouts at 26th and Churchman Avenues. We're looking to get funding for a peanut roundabout to correct a series of dangerous intersections altogether. We're looking to get funding for a sod grant on Main Street. Main Street has done really well and we want to spruce it up; we're looking at improvements for some of these buildings. I'm really excited."

Buckley noted that Beech Grove's economy is doing well; property values have increased and the number of new businesses has grown tremendously.

"Since 2012, we have become home to more than 100 new businesses. Our value has assessed over $125 million. My property value has risen 16 percent in the last three years. Property sells really quick in our city," he said.

Buckley said he will continue to focus on crime and safety in the community, although a high number of police officers and firefighters in Beech Grove has helped to reduce the city's crime rate.

"Crime rate is down by over 5 percent from the previous three years," he said. "We have more police officers and a more aggressive patrol. We (still) have to be very vigilant and ask the public to help us. Call when you see something (going wrong), say something. Turn the outside light on at night, lock your car. It's a deterrent; all those little things help."

Buckley is a lifetime Beech Grove resident and was a fireman for 30 years. His has been married to his wife, Patty, for more than 40 years. They have two children, Christopher and Lyndsay, and four grandchildren.

Rick Skirvin, a republican, has recently announced that he will be running against Buckley as Beech Grove Mayor. Attempts to reach Skirvin were unsuccessful.

PMHS students recognized

Achievement – The following Perry Meridian High School juniors were recently recognized as Rising Stars of Indiana: Joseph Carper, Sung Nichin, Makayla Gomperts and Duncan Soughan. The honor is awarded by The Indiana Association of School Principals. PMHS congratulates those students on all they have already achieved and offers support and encouragement as the juniors continue their accomplishments and expand their knowledge, growth and leadership skills well into the future.

Recognition – A large crowd came together at Perry Township Education Center to honor the life, legacy and dream of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. During a special dinner program, students, families, administrators and staff enjoyed and opportunity to fellowship. During an awards program students were recognized for art, poetry and essays reflecting the theme of "Unity." Staff and community partners were also honored for going above and beyond to serve the district's students.

Perry Township Schools' new learning center helps students succeed in a smaller environment

FEATURE

By Nancy Price

Not all students thrive in a large classroom setting. They benefit from learning in an environment with fewer distractions and a smaller student-teacher ratio.

Perry Township Schools' Compass Education Center has recently opened to help those students who have social anxiety and/or to earn credits over a shorter period of time or catch up on credit hours so they can earn their high school diploma.

"We started the Compass Education Center to help students that are credit unhealthy," said Tim Lovejoy, director of CEC. "We help them recover credits that they have missed for whatever reason."

"Our kids are the kids that have not been successful at the high school," added Martin Johnson, assistant director. "The CEC is a program that gives these kids much-needed individual attention. Our smaller numbers and emphasis on relationship building allows our kids a different way to achieve success. The small building and the teacher/student ratio make it impossible for our kids to get lost in the shuffle."

CEC, located at 1319 Stop 10 Road, has seven classrooms, multiple offices and conference rooms. The center is also home to the Perry Township Schools Police Department. The $1.85 million building, funded with district resources, is 14,678 square feet.

The center has five classes per day and aligns with the same hours as other high schools in the district, from 7:15 a.m.-1:40 p.m. Each class is 69 minutes long. Ten staff members teach subjects ranging from 12th grade English to Spanish to 75 students, with a student-teacher ratio of 15 to 1.

"All subject matter is covered for the students," Lovejoy said. "We tailor our curriculum to our student body."

The program is built on four cornerstones: caring, compassion, courage and conviction.

"When we put them all together, we can help the students understand the value of setting goals and reaching them," he said.

Students and their parents have already noticed positive changes as a result of the center's environment.

"We have received very positive feedback from the students and their parents," Johnson said. "The students have told us that they feel like this is a place where they belong and can be successful. Parent feedback has also been very positive; they see their children receiving positive results. Many were tentative at first but they now understand that this is a great opportunity for their kids."

Beech Grove bakery offers free pizza to those in need

FEATURE

By Nancy Price

A Southside bakery is offering free pizza to those in need, inspired by the financial strain of those affected by the government shutdown.

Customers who ask for an “elephant pizza” will be given a pizza from the staff at Victory Rolls and Baked Goods, 702 Main St. in Beech Grove, no questions asked.

The term “elephant pizza” was coined by the grandmother of store owner, Amy Norcross.

“It’s for good luck” Norcross said. “It’s meant for someone down on their luck and needs a little help. We’ll keep this going as long as there’s a need for it.”

Norcross added that there have been a lot of people in the community who’ve given money in a donation jar to help others.

Former Greenwood City Council member charged with voyeurism

FEATURE

By Nancy Price

Brent Corey, a former Greenwood City Council member, has been charged with level 6 voyeurism.

The charges were filed by a Johnson County prosecutor on Monday, Jan. 27.

In June of last year, a victim reported to Greenwood police that she, along with several other women, were unknowingly filmed while they were at Corey’s lake home over the summer. Videos were discovered by the victim as she was searching for client files on a shared computer at Sizemore Insurance Company. The woman was employed by Corey, who owned the insurance company at the time.

The women were filmed nude or partially nude as they were changing clothes and using the bathroom at Corey’s lake home.

Indiana State Police were handed the investigation as Corey was on the Greenwood City Council at the time.

In August, Corey sold Sizemore Insurance Company to Walker Hughes Insurance Group. Several days later, he resigned from Greenwood City Council after 10 years of service.

Corey is due for an initial court appearance on Feb. 21. He could face up to 2 ½ years in jail and $10,000 in fines if convicted.

Wagner announces run for Indianapolis City-County Council, District 16

Election – Patrick Wagner has announced his candidacy for Indianapolis City-County Council, District 16. Wagner, an Indianapolis native, will seek the democratic nomination in the party’s primary on May 7, 2019. Patrick grew up on the west side of Indianapolis and has been involved in civics since his youth. He graduated from Ben Davis High School and pursued undergraduate degrees in biology and Spanish at DePauw University. He holds a master’s degree in biology from IUPUI in District 16. Wagner is an Information Technology Program Manager for a locally-grown consulting firm. “My studies and my service to my community as a Court Appointed Special Advocate and a healthcare provider to the medically underserved foundationally altered my own life and how I approach the world around me,” he said. “I have contributed to a number of campaigns, both in the private and public sector, and I have brought about positive change to my teams and to their customers. I am motivated by this civic opportunity which pairs my professional knowledge with my passion for advocacy – to develop architectures of change for my neighborhood.” For more information on Patrick Wagner, his values and his vision for Indianapolis, please visit Patrick4Indy.com.

Indianapolis EMS offers tips during dangerously cold weather

Health & Safety – Indianapolis EMS is urging people to use extra caution and avoid exposing themselves to dangerously cold temperatures. If possible, stay inside and ensure your home has adequate ventilation to avoid dangerous carbon monoxide buildup from heat sources. If you must go outside, wear multiple layers of loose fitting, lightweight clothing in addition to water repellent and hooded outer garment. Cover your head, face/mouth and wear gloves or mittens that are well secured to the wrists. It is also dangerous for children to be outside playing when temperatures are this cold. Neighbors who are medically at risk, such as the elderly or disabled, should be checked on.

Franciscan Health offers training for life-threatening bleeding

Medical – Franciscan Health is offering free training to teach non-medical personnel how to stop life-threatening bleeding through wound-packing and tourniquet use. The hospital is bringing “Stop the Bleed” classes on the following dates and sites: Feb. 2 – Wayne Township Community Emergency Response Team (Drexel Gardens Christian Church), 2200 Beulah Ave, Indianapolis, 46241. Feb. 27 – Public class, Franciscan Health Education and Support Services, 431 N. Emerson Ave., Greenwood, 46143.

The courses are a combination of lecture and hands-on training on wound packing and tourniquet use to train, equip and empower the bystander in the critical first minutes after a trauma injury that causes bleeding. To date, 630 individuals have been trained through the Franciscan Health program and 48 tourniquets/bleeding control kits have been provided, purchased through a grant from the Franciscan Auxiliary. To learn more about the Stop the Bleed program at Franciscan Health or to schedule a training session, contact Christy Claborn at (317) 528-3360 or christine.claborn@franciscanalliance.org.

Junior League of Indianapolis to accept applications for Trust Fund Grants

Charity – The Junior League of Indianapolis (JLI) will soon begin accepting applications for its Trust Fund Grants. Nonprofit organizations serving children with physical or developmental disabilities in Marion County are eligible to apply and can earn up to $5,000. Before applying for a Trust Fund Grant, organizations must first submit a letter of intent by Feb. 1. The JLI will then select organizations to move forward by inviting them to apply for the grant process. Applications will be due March 15 and grant recipients will be announced during the JLI’s general membership meeting on April 25. “Our Trust Fund Grant allows JLI to support organizations in our community with a long history of aiding children with disabilities,” said JLI President Stacy Payne Miller. “In 2018, JLI awarded $30,000 to local nonprofits through this grant program. We look forward to seeing our donation make a major impact again this year.” To learn more about JLI’s Trust Fund Grant program, please visit jlinj.org/?nd=trustgrants.

Local firefighters to compete in Greenwood Kiwanis Cook-off

Proceeds benefit Riley Hospital for Children

FEATURE

By Dick Isenhour

The Greenwood Kiwanis Club's annual Chili Cook-off is set for Friday, Feb. 1, from 4:30-7:30 p.m., at Greenwood United Methodist Church, 525 N. Madison Ave., Greenwood.

The event will feature entries prepared by local firefighters, all vying for the honor of best chili — and all helping to raise money for Riley Hospital and other child-related projects the club sponsors.

The cost is $7.50 for adults, which includes chili, cornbread, dessert and drink. Children 10 and younger are $3, which includes a hot dog (or chili), chips, dessert and a drink.

More than 1,100 cups of chili were served to chili connoisseurs last year. After votes were counted, Toni Wampler and Joe Kipfer of the Bargsville Fire Department emerged victorious.

"Firefighters love food and, of course, we're all competitive in nature," Wampler, an emergency medical technician, said at the time. "The chili cook-off was a fun challenge and we were honored to be part of a fundraiser to benefit kids."

This year's event also will feature a silent auction to raise funds for the club's Bill and Sharlene Mellencamp Scholarship fund. Each year, the club awards scholarships to seniors at Greenwood, Franklin Central and Center Grove high schools, where it sponsors Key Clubs.

"The Mellencamps were friends and fellow Kiwanians who left this earth far too soon," said Karenn Isenhour, auction coordinator. "Both were teachers with soft spots for children. As a continuing tribute to them, we established the fund that bears their names."

The Greenwood Kiwanis Club is one of more than 8,000 Kiwanis clubs around the globe, all dedicated to making the world a better place, one community — and one child — at a time. The club meets at 6:30 p.m. every Tuesday at Firehouse Subs, across US 31 from the Greenwood Park Mall.

For more information, contact Richard "Dick" Isenhour, (317) 442-7456; isenhour-richard@sbcglobal.net.

By Nancy Price

Seven Southside chefs will battle for the top spot at the Kiwanis Club of Perry Township's fourth annual chili cook-off and silent auction this Friday, Feb. 1. Proceeds from the cook-off will support the Hunger Inc. food bank, and a silent auction will support Riley Hospital for Children.

A big turnout is expected for the event, which is becoming a Southside tradition, according to club President Les Branham.

"Once again, we hope to see a big turnout for a great meal and two very good causes," said Branham. "As our fourth annual chili cook-off, it's become a Southside tradition. Proceeds from the event will help our Kiwanis club continue its mission to serve the community."

Participating chefs include Food Service Manager Barb Taylor of Five Star Residences of Banta Pointe (using a recipe of Food Network guest and Five Star Corporate Chef Brad Miller). In addition, Wellness Director Bobbi Finley of Baxter YMCA will serve veg-an chili, a "first" for this event.

Other chefs include Joe Leavell, sponsored by Leavell Photography (second-place winner last year); Kiwanis member Paul Annee representing the Annee family (third-place winner last year); Jane Jackson of Jackson Systems; Brent Bockelman of Southport High School; and Sarah Clark-Carson, representing Bubba's.

Silent auction items

Diners can bid on nearly 30 items during the silent auction. They include a private wine tasting for 20 at Buck Creek Winery; two tickets to the World of Wheels auto show in Indianapolis from O'Reilly Auto Parts; and a pair of tickets to a Fever home game with a parking pass from Perry Kiwanis. Gift baskets, passes and gift certificates, along with a variety of other items, will be featured.

Additional items include a gift certificate from Jockish Flowers; a pair of kids' games and a pair of family games from Southside Game Preserve; a cherub painting from Martin Fine Furniture; a train DVD and a toy train from A Trains; a pair of passes and a painting from Painting with a Twist; two gift cards from Zip City; jewelry items from Klayz Kreations; a sports drawing from Cardwell's Do It Best Home Center; a pet care gift basket from Uncle Bill's Pet Center; a set of three barbecue sauces from City Barbeque; gun range passes from Point Blank Gun Range; items from Cardinal Insurance; jam, jelly salsa and a gift card from Rise and Roll Bakery; and gift cards from Bubbas and from Play It Again Sports Indy.

Auction items donated by Perry Kiwanis members include a Google Home Mini and a Hub, a cooking basket and a fairytale gift set (Disney wooden sign with a fairytale book).

Items to be auctioned from Christy's Auction include, "Rural Landscape with Peasants and a Drover," Jan Van Goyen; "Reproduction # 1 Edward Patterson," Frederic Remington's "The Howl of the Weather," "View of Wilmington, DE 1851," lithograph of Endicott & Co NY and "Teddy Bear-Hans 1985" Limited Edition.

Diners will be given a form to vote for their favorite chili. Adult meals will be $8 and include chili, cornbread, dessert and beverage. Meals for kids under 8 will be $4 and include hot dogs, chips, dessert and beverage. Members of the Southport Key Club, the Kiwanis high school affiliate and UIndy Circle K club, the Kiwanis college affiliate, will assist at the event.

"The generous contributions made by several Southside organizations to the auction are most appreciated," Branham added. "We'd like to express gratitude to Center United Methodist Church for allowing us to use its facility. Thanks also go to Kim's Kakeery for desserts, Aqua Systems for bottled water and the Trophy House for trophies and ribbons."

Why business owners are members of the GBG Chamber of Commerce

FEATURE

By Renee Harlor, Executive Director
Greater Beech Grove Chamber of Commerce

We asked business owners why they chose to become a member of the Greater Beech Grove Chamber of Commerce. Some of the most common answers we heard were reasonable cost of membership, members are names and not numbers, a variety of learning and networking opportunities and the friendliness of the team. We were pleased to hear these answers. Our goal is to provide businesses in the greater Beech Grove area with the tools and support they need to grow, including networking opportunities and educational programs.

Since the end of December we have welcomed six new members: Mader Design LLC, MacAllister Machinery, Beech Bank Brewing Company, Joy's House, Pro Resources Staffing Services and Heartland Commerce Solutions. On Feb. 16 at noon we will host a ribbon cutting at Pro Resources Staffing Services and on Feb. 19 at noon we will host a ribbon cutting at Beech Bank Brewing. The public is encouraged to attend these ribbon cuttings.

The Greater Beech Grove Chamber of Commerce is proud to serve more than 100 local businesses and nonprofit organizations. We are a part of your community and always welcome ways to get involved. Our upcoming community fair is an example of how the chamber connects businesses, nonprofit organizations and the community. We invite you to join us for this free, family friendly, St. Patrick's Day themed event that will be held on March 16 from 10 a.m.-1 p.m. at the Beech Grove Middle School. There will be free health screenings, local retailers, demonstrations and a special kids zone. More information about this event can be found on the chamber's website, beechgrovechamber.org.

If you are considering opening a business, are a current business owner or run a nonprofit organization we hope you will talk with us. Our yearly memberships are packed with benefits and our chamber is full of members who care about business growth and community.

Wear red to show support for American Heart Month

Tomorrow, Feb. 1, kicks off American Heart Month. Millions of people across the state and nation will celebrate National Wear Red Day tomorrow by wearing red sweaters, dresses, ties or dress pins to show support of the American Heart Association's mission to save lives from America's No. 1 killer: heart disease.

American Heart Month was started in 1964. Since then, a yearly presidential proclamation pays tribute to researchers, physicians, public health education professionals and volunteers for their efforts in preventing, treating and researching heart disease.

Every 80 seconds, a woman dies from heart disease. Yet up to 80 percent of heart disease is preventable through healthy lifestyle changes, such as a healthy diet, increasing physical activity, a healthy blood pressure, healthy cholesterol, healthy blood sugar, healthy weight and quitting smoking.

The American Heart Association is hosting a Red Dash and Casting Call on Feb. 8 on Monument Circle in downtown Indianapolis. Men and women, while wearing red, will dash around Monument Circle to raise awareness about heart disease and share how their lives have been impacted by heart disease and stroke.

A Go Red for Women luncheon is being held on Feb. 27 in Indianapolis. For more information about the luncheon and heart disease, please visit goredforwomen.org.

Kwiatkowski named Interim Executive Director at Indiana State Board of Education

Appointment – Gov. Eric J. Holcomb has appointed Dr. Lee Ann Kwiatkowski as interim executive director of the Indiana State Board of Education to replace Matt Voors, who has accepted a position outside of state government. Dr. Kwiatkowski will continue to be the governor's senior education adviser. "Lee Ann will serve in this dual role as we work through the legislative session. We're fortunate to have someone with her mix of expertise and experience to lead the board's operations," said Gov. Holcomb. Dr. Kwiatkowski was named senior education adviser to Gov. Holcomb in May 2018. She previously served as chief of staff to Indiana Superintendent of Public Instruction Dr. Jennifer McCormick. Before that, she was a principal and assistant superintendent for M.S.D. Warren Township. From 2005 to 2011, she worked for the Indiana Department of Education, leading Title I, differentiated learning and school turnaround efforts. She began her career in education in 1984 as a classroom teacher and literacy facilitator for Indianapolis Public Schools. The board will review the governor's appointment during its Feb. 6 business meeting.

Financial Center First CU announces scholarship program

Scholarship – Financial Center First Credit Union has announced a college scholarship program available to its members in 2019. In the program's first year, the Credit Union will award $3,500 to three members attending an accredited college or university in the fall of 2019. "Financial Center is known for its financial literacy program for youth and adults, and in 2019, we want to do something more," said James Davidson, Financial Center's Director of Financial Literacy. "We have started a scholarship program to carry our passion for education to members wanting to improve their lives by attending college." Funds for the scholarships were raised through Financial Center's 2018 charity golf outing. The Credit Union looks to build upon award funds over time through various fundraisers with its members, employees and vendors. The application deadline is April 1, 2019. Eligibility guidelines and directions on how to apply can be found at fcfcu.com/scholarship.

Richard M. Fairbanks Burn Center
at Eskenazi Health

Extreme cold weather is always a threat to hit central Indiana this time of year and the Richard M. Fairbanks Burn Center at Eskenazi Health is offering suggestions on how to avoid the excruciating pain and discomfort of frostbite and other cold weather injuries.

Proper precautions are necessary during frigid cold spells this winter season and frostbite is a tremendous concern for everyone who ventures outside this time of year. Caused by freezing of the skin and underlying tissues most commonly found on the fingers, toes, nose, ears cheeks and chin, frostbite reveals itself in the earliest stages when you notice your skin becoming very cold and red, then numb, hard and pale. Although frostbite is most common on exposed skin in cold, windy weather, it may also be found on skin covered by gloves or other clothing.

Additional symptoms of frostbite include a tingling sensation, followed by numbness on the affected area. Frostbite will make skin hard, pale and cold and there will be no feeling in those areas. In more severe frostbite cases, the skin becomes white and numb and may also have blisters and blackened or dead tissue may result. Untreated frostbite may potentially cause damage to tendons, muscles, nerves and bone.

Like many burn injuries, frostbite can be avoided. It is important to properly protect yourself against frostbite and other cold-related injuries that accompany the winter weather by wearing appropriate protective clothing.

By adding extra cover to more commonly affected areas, such as the nose, fingers, toes and ears, you may shield your skin from brutally cold weather. Dressing in warm layers with scarves, hats, gloves and boots is always prudent, and you should wear a waterproof outer shell. Be aware that the bitter winter winds will cause frostbite to accelerate and establish itself more quickly.

If you feel symptoms of frostbite, physicians suggest refraining from rubbing or massaging the affected area, as it may cause further damage to the skin. Move to a warm area, remove all wet clothing and apply dry, sterile dressings to the frostbitten skin. If the symptoms are severe and normal color and feeling do not return to the area, contact a health care professional immediately.

Verified by the American College of Surgeons and the American Burn Association, the Richard M. Fairbanks Burn Center is the only verified adult burn program in Indiana and treats more than 350 inpatients each year in addition to more than 4,700 outpatient visits with patients from across the country.

The Richard M. Fairbanks Burn Center is regarded as one of the finest and most progressive burn centers in the United States and is located above the Michael & Susan Smith Emergency Department at Eskenazi Health and the Smith Level I Shock Trauma Center at Eskenazi Health.

For more information about the unit or burn prevention, please call (317) 880-6900.

If Beale Street Could Talk

Hope in the face of impossible odds

MOVIE REVIEW

By Bradley Lane

Cinema is an extremely powerful medium for telling stories about humans and humanity. Barry Jenkins' adaptation of James Baldwin's 1974 novel, If Beale Street Could Talk, is, if not anything else, a story about humanity. It tests the limits of love, faith and hope in a story so grounded it will leave you just as furious as inspired. Jenkins is dealing incredibly dense and complex subjects in this film and it would be easy for him to make a film that is brooding and angry, but instead he uses hope and love to drive his narrative to masterful results.

If Beale Street Could Talk follows the lifelong friends-turned-romantic-partners Tish and Fonny. Together they struggle to get by in an unforgiving 1970s New York that is particularly discriminatory toward young black people like them. In a nasty twist of fate, a combination of a vengeful police officer and a traumatized victim, Fonny gets framed for rape. From this point the narrative pivots to Tish and her family's unrelenting effort to seek justice for Fonny, as Tish learns she is carrying Fonny's child.

Jenkin's adaptation of Baldwin's novel reads, in many points, like a stage play. Many sequences are meticulously blocked out and the dialogue ranges the gambit from heartwarming confessions all the way to razor sharp wittiness. Additionally, he sets his camera in positions that highlight the space between actors and draws attention to how characters move within that space. Accentuating the unique style of the film, bright yellows, blues and reds saturate the frame with a color palette that evokes an old school technicolor feel. All of these choices make If Beale Street Could Talk an extremely stylistic watch.

Do not get the wrong idea though; through all the style of the film, it remains a grounded story about two people desperately in love with one another. KiKi Layne playing Tish, and Stephan James playing Fonny, are so wholesome and sweet, their time on screen together is hard to look away from. Their relationship oozes sincerity and care for one another. It is their relationship that pushes the film forward and forces the audience to consider how you can keep pushing in the face of such impossible odds. The film is decidedly angry, and it has every right to be, but instead of channeling that anger into violence or destruction, it finds a quiet strength within the hope that in the future, with a lot of effort, things can get better.

If Beale Street Could Talk is one of the year's best films, with one of the year's most powerful messages.

Bradley is a Beech Grove High School alumnus and has been enamored by film for as long as he can remember. He is currently in his third year studying at IUPUI, majoring in Media and Public Affairs with a minor in Film. Bradley can be contacted at blane2214@gmail.com.

Coo-coo for cashews

NUTRITION

By Wendell Fowler

I'm nutty about cashews and can't resist their seductive, sweet creaminess and recently discovered my attraction to the tasty tree nut is actually enriching my health and creating a feel-good vibe.

The cashew tree bears edible pear-shaped false fruits called "cashew apples." The tropical tree belongs to the plant family: the mango, pistachio, poison ivy, poison oak and poison sumac. Native to the Brazil's rain forest, the tree was spread all over the planet by Portuguese explorers and today cashews are commercially cultivated in Brazil, Vietnam, India and many African countries.

Science supports eating cashews can be as effective as Prozac and other anti-depressants in maintaining a positive mood. You see, cashews contain the amino acid L-Tryptophan. Dr. Andrew Saul, a therapeutic nutritionist and editor-in-chief of Orthomolecular Medicine News Service says, "The body turns tryptophan into serotonin, a major contributor to feelings of sexual desire, good mood and good sleep." Two handfuls of cashews are the therapeutic equivalent of a prescription dose of Prozac. Inside your temple chemistry, L-tryptophan is broken down into anxiety-reducing, snooze-inducing niacin. Tryptophan is made into serotonin that gives a feeling of well-being and mellowness." This is such a profound effect that Prozac, Paxil and similar antidepressants usually either mimic serotonin or artificially keep the body's own serotonin levels high.

Beige cashews make some superfoods lists for their concentration of protein, fiber, minerals and antioxidants. The small kidney-shaped nut holds proanthocyanidins that actually starve tumors and stop cancer cells from dividing. Studies have also shown cashews can reduce your colon cancer risk, too. Cashews are high in heart-healthy "good fat" in the form of oleic acid, the same monounsaturated fat in domestic, virgin olive oil.

Delicately flavored cashew nuts are rich in vitamin C, protein, niacin, iron, manganese, magnesium, phosphorous, copper and zinc; contains 20 percent saturated and 60 percent mono-unsaturated fats. Magnesium is required for strong bones, a healthy heart, preventing depression, treating migraines, diabetes and inflammation. The vitamin is deficient in 80 percent of America's diet. Magnesium is involved in hundreds of biochemical reactions in your temple, according to HealthLine.com.

Asian and Indian cuisines regularly include whole or chopped cashews in stir fries and curries. Sprinkle them into salads, grains, or breakfast cereals. I hit the local grocery to snag a bag for driving and eating out of my hand. If the label lists filthy cottonseed oil, pass. Ditch the artificially flavored variety as well. In a nutshell, cashews are at the least a snack, but at the most, excellent medicine. Thanks, Mother Earth!

How to get your Valentine's date just right

GRAMMAR GUY

By Curtis Honeycutt

Chivalry isn't dead — yet. Follow these tips to make sure your Valentine's date wants to smooch you into oblivion at the end of the night. After all, yours truly was quite the dating doyen prior to shifting my interests to grammar.

For instance, women love it when you open doors for them. They love it when you open jars for them. However, women don't like it when you open their mail and read it before they get home from work. They also aren't too happy when you open their medicine cabinets to check which prescriptions they're taking. Trust me.

Now that you're getting your dating life figured out, I want to tell you how to properly write dates. Perhaps your shortcomings in writing dates correctly are having an effect on whether or not you're getting romantic dates. It could be.

Anyway, according to the AP Stylebook, you should use figures for dates and years, and don't use -st, -nd, -rd, or -th with dates. So, you shouldn't write February 14th or February fourteenth; always write February 14. You wouldn't write Nineteen hundred and eighty-five (although that's one of my favorite Wings songs); you should always write out 1985.

As if that weren't enough mind-blowing clarity on writing dates, I have more rules to lay on you. When it comes to months, they are always capitalized. The months of March, April, May, June and July should never be abbreviated, but you should abbreviate the remaining months when they're followed by a date (e.g., Feb. 14). The correct abbreviations for these months are Jan., Feb., Aug., Sept., Oct., Nov. and Dec.

Add s (but no apostrophe) after numbers when you're writing decades or centuries (e.g., the 1900s). Do add an apostrophe when you're writing a decade if numerals are omitted (e.g., the '20s).

I'm going to throw this in because I'm sure you're wondering: the word February comes from a Roman festival of washing and purification (called Februa) that happened every spring. It was previously known as Lupercalia, which was a violent, sexually-charged fertility festival. In the late fifth century A.D., Pope Gelasius replaced this pagan holiday with St. Valentine's Day, which remembers the martyrdom of St. Valentine on February 14, 269.

If you want to speak the language of love to your sweetheart, make sure you know how to write dates the right way. Otherwise, the only dates you'll be getting are the kind that are less-good versions of raisins.

Weekly Devotion

5 Now the end of the commandment is charity out of a pure heart, and of a good conscience, and of faith unfeigned:

6 From which some having swerved have turned aside unto vain jangling;

7 Desiring to be teachers of the law; understanding neither what they say, nor whereof they affirm.

1 TIMOTHY 1:5-7

Charity and unpretentious faith should be the goal of every Christian. Charity for the Christian isn't what it is to the world. To the world it is a mere hand-out but to the Christian it is a hand up. The word is from the Greek "agape" and it means love but it is not a love of a worldly, lustful sort; it is the love of God which originates in heaven and flows from the throne of God into the hearts of those who love God first and foremost. Consequently, they cannot help but love their neighbors on a par equal to the love they have for themselves. This love purifies the heart of the Christian with nothing but kindness toward even those that have decided to be their enemies. This grows out of a faith that Christ was right in all of His teaching and not just a few select passages of it.

He taught that we must do good to those who persecute us and be prepared for nothing more than a slap in the face from them in return. There is no room for vindictiveness in the mind and heart of the followers of Jesus Christ. We believe that vengeance belongs to the Lord and not to us. This is what has made this country different even when it goes to war to defend itself. We have no designs on owning and dictating other nations. We just want to live in a world that is secure for all people to live in peace. Some have distorted that message. They read the scriptures and then they define them in worldly terms. This leads to more trouble than it solves problems.

For all of the wars that we have fought with other nations, how much better off are we today than we were before? I am not saying that they did not need to be fought and that future wars will not need to be fought, but I am trying to provoke your thinking. If all the world were to suddenly wake up and realize just how right Jesus was and is, there would be peace and safety for all. But the way things stand now, there will never be peace and safety because one person feels that another person has gotten a better deal out of life than they have.

James reminds us that fights, local or otherwise, originate in the hearts of men and women who lust for things they don't currently have. Jealousy is a key component. I see a friend or neighbor that seems to have it better than I do and I want what that person has and will do nearly anything to have it, legal or otherwise.

Paul wrote, "Godliness with contentment is great gain". I believe this. This contentment will save you an awful lot of heartache if you will just thank the Lord for who you are and where you are and what you have for now. Until you come to understand that portion of the teaching of Jesus Christ, you should not be teaching the other teachings of Jesus Christ.

God bless and go and have a great day.

Paul A. Kirby is the pastor at the Church of God at 3939 S. Emerson Ave.

WHY PRINT?

ENGAGEMENT
According to International News Media Association, printed newspapers boast the highest amount of ad engagement by readers. While other mediums allow for the option to ignore or "skip" an advertisement, newspaper ads are built into the content. (inma.org)

AFFORDABILITY
Newspapers offer a lower cost per thousand readers than radio, tv and direct mail advertising. (mediaspectrum.net)

TARGETING
Loyal readers and niche audiences are easier to reach when you know the geographic area and circulation. (fedena.com)
