Greenwood Goddard students raise money for charity

Preschoolers at Goddard School locations in and around Indianapolis, including Greenwood, successfully raised over $6,000 for a charity, Art with a Heart. Greenwood students worked on furniture pieces and created a variety of items, including a plant stand, a small stool, a wall shelf and a large display tray. The items were displayed within the school for people to place bids for the item of their choice.

LIVING THE DREAM

Local softball league gives kids with disabilities the chance to play

BY STEPHANIE DOLAN

Running, skipping, jumping and playing ... a part of childhood that many of us take for granted.

Some children, though, feel forced to sit on the sidelines as they watch others have the fun, unable to kick the ball, make the shot or run the bases. That is where Lead the Challenge (LTC) comes in, a softball league specifically designed to give children and young adults with disabilities the opportunity to participate in organized sports.

"Oftentimes, children with disabilities may have never had any experience with sports due to limitations they face regarding their certain disability," LTC board member Dustin Gilmer said. Lead the Challenge is based in Franklin Township. >>>

>>> "There are various different disabilities represented within our league," Gilmer said. "They range everywhere on the spectrum from different sensory disabilities, auditory disabilities and physical disabilities. Some of the kids who participate were born with autism, Down syndrome, ADD or ADHD. This year, we have our very first participants who will be playing who are visually impaired."

LTC was founded in 1997 by Mike Black. It is now run by the board of directors, which includes Gilmer.

LEADING THE CHALLENGE

"I come to the board as the only board member who has a disability," he said. "I was an original player in the league back in 1997, when the league was first founded by Mike Black. My role is to help move the league forward by marketing, communications and publicizing league happenings, while also providing my knowledge from experience as a person with a disability."

Gilmer is a graduate of Ball State University, where he graduated with a bachelor's of arts in Journalism and Telecommunications. He currently serves as the project manager for the Office of Disability Affairs for the city of Indianapolis. He was an LTC player for seven years.

"I was always interested in sports," he said. "Being able to be a part of LTC allowed me to go to school and talk to my friends, who also played sports, about my games. It allowed me an opportunity to enjoy sports more than just from behind a TV screen."

Gilmer said that team sizes vary from year to year, but that LTC has anywhere from four to six teams with eight to 10 players participating on each team.

"One other factor that goes into team size is the amount of peer players that we have sign up for that year as well," he continued. "Peer players are what makes LTC unique. They are individuals, often peers of the players themselves, who volunteer to assist with various things during the season such as batting, fielding, throwing the ball, running the bases and even learning the game of softball as they go. Peer players are also tasked with ensuring that the players stay safe while participating."

Gilmer said that being a part of the team allows peer players to see the disabled as no different than they are.

"They see that in a whole new way," he said. "These kids might do things differently than they do, but they share some of the same interests, have goals and often build new friendships out of participating in LTC."

ANSWERING THE CALL

Gilmer also said that being a member of the league brings the opportunity for the kids to be kids and experience sports in a small way like ordinary kids would. Parents are also given the opportunity to sit in the stands for their child's games, which is something they would never have thought they'd be able to do before LTC.

"It definitely gives me the opportunity just sit in the stands and be a regular parent," Amy Camp said.

Camp's daughters, Grace, 17, and Emily, 16, both participate in LTC.

"A lot of times, with special needs kids, you have to be involved," she continued. "So it's just great to have that hour on a Sunday afternoon to just sit and watch your kids be able to participate with other kids in their own age group."

Grace is autistic, and Emily has a seizure disorder. This will be their sixth year participating with LTC.

"I heard about it through a teacher at Franklin Township Schools," Camp said. "Grace was nervous at first, but now she just loves it. Talking about it just makes her smile, and she gets so excited. Grace is hoping this year they're going to be training her to be a peer next year. That's one thing that the organization does, even if you have a disability. It's a really nice pay it forward program. Not all peers are high school age, and some are kids with disabilities of their own."

Camp said that Grace's communication and social skills have improved dramatically in the time she's participated in the league.

5 QUESTIONS WITH DUSTIN GILMER

Who or what inspires you? My parents. They taught me, despite my disability, to work and fight for anything that I want to accomplish. My dad once told me that just because you have a disability doesn't mean the world owes you anything. You still have to go fight your best.

Is baseball your favorite sport? (If not, what is?) Baseball is my first favorite, followed by football.

What's your favorite sports-themed movie? The Sandlot.

What position did you play when you were a member of the team? I loved to play catcher!

Do you have any pets? No, but I have a service dog named Carver.

LIVING THE DREAM

"As a parent, it means the world to me," she said. "I would say to anyone considering signing their child up that everybody there is so friendly and welcoming. It's a safe environment for your child. Come give it a try. You'll really get to be a part of a fun event for a Sunday afternoon."

"As a league, we do not focus on the outcome of any game," Gilmer said. "Our league operates with no winners or losers in games. Every batter on each team bats every inning. We also do not keep score. The reason for this is because this is oftentimes the players' first taste of any organized sport. So, we focus on helping the players understand their abilities and helping them enjoy the game."

Gilmer said that anyone interested shouldn't be nervous about playing – just come to a game!

"From there forward, they'll want to get out there and swing the bat and run the bases as well," he said.

And just like the kids he tries to inspire, Gilmer himself feels blessed to be a part of LTC.

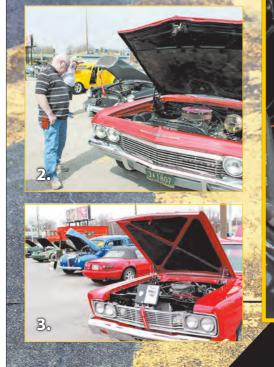

"For me, it's the opportunity to give back to a league that has provided a lot to me as a young kid with a disability," he said.

Registration fees are $40 per player and $20 per peer player and go toward equipment players need such as bats, helmets and balls, as well as uniforms, trophies and awards. For more information on Lead the Challenge, visit the website at ltcsoftball.com or find them on Facebook.

MOTORING INTO THE PAST

By Rick Hinton

Carol Sissom knows how to throw a party! Carol's Adventures celebrated its first car show of the season on Saturday, April 6 in the parking lot of Beck's Service Center, 6025 S. Madison Ave., Indianapolis. The theme was "Batman's 80th Birthday," bringing in a whole lot of cars and folks to see them.

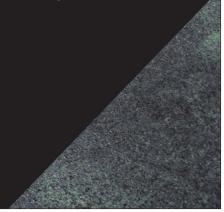

Sissom, an Indianapolis author, was the master of ceremonies in an annual event that has gathered no dust on the Southside. "I had my first car show in 2012. We had four cars," she stated. "The next year we had 75!"

It was an overcast day, yet warm. Neat rows of waxed cars were parked with their hoods and trunks pointed skyward as a steady stream of onlookers paraded through. Music played, along with the offering of gyros, a Subway on the corner and birthday cake and ice cream to celebrate the caped crusader's milestone birthday.

"The goal is to make everyone who comes to my car show blessed," Sissom said. "Every show does have a different theme. After I started planning, I realized it was Batman's birthday. How could I pass that up?"

The car shows are dedicated to the memory of her mother, Roanna Jane Caldwell, who passed away at the age of 90 in 2015. Her spirit drives these shows on. It's a form of healing. And reflection. Veterans are always honored, including three this year.

A car show brings out the teenager in all of us; associated vehicles from our past that have somehow melded into our future. "Oh my God ... my dad had a car just like that!" are often reactions she hears. 1. Carol Sissom interviews Southside resident David Biggerstaff about his entry, a 1934 Ford Five window coupe. 2. Sometimes it all comes down to close scrutiny. 3. Hoods pointed to the sky. 4. The car show was dedicated to Roanna Jane Caldwell, who is Indianapolis author Carol Sissom's mother. 5. Friends together watch their childhood fly

HAUNTS & JAUNTS

By Rick Hinton

I've always heard that as you grow older, time accelerates. Yes, sir. It's no longer the long, endless summers of our youth, seeming to stretch forever. Yep ... no longer. Our past becomes that – just our past – as we accelerate time into an often uncertain future, and in the process, grow older. They say, "If only I could go back then to what I know now!" Yep, pretty much! Friends and acquaintances who helped to shape and define those past days often disappear, becoming only a memory. However, sometimes these very "ghosts" of the past return. And ... just when you need them most!

Mike Foster is my oldest friend from the haze of school days. He was there when junior high school transformed into an arena of horror for a young teen. Has been there since. Paul Echart came along after high school and Warren Central ended, but is no less important because we didn't happen to "hang" in high school. We eventually did "hang". The three of us eventually lived together in one in carnation or another. We became partners in life, crime, a new world of self discovery and halfheartedly exploring our lot in life. Those were strange days indeed!

Always blue jeans, and most often no shirts; cowboy hats, no ball caps; a diet of the Marshall Tucker Band, Pure Prairie League and Poco for enlightenment; camping and caving near Bloomington to soothe the soul; an impromptu trip with Paul to Canada, then one to the Mardi Gras where we were almost arrested in Mississippi and our van blew an engine as we rolled into New Orleans. Yes ... those precious moments!

My friend Mike invested – working his way to his first million dollars – in two houses on North Delaware Street in Indianapolis long before the current renovation craze. He had decided to become a slumlord. It was all good! He talked Paul and I into living in an apartment in one of the houses. Yes ... we were the hit of the neighborhood! During that cold winter we often found ourselves often lying in a crawlspace under one of the homes, fixing busted water pipes in the middle of the night; collecting weekly rent required while carrying a gun; and most often finding a homeless person sleeping in our car when we left to go to work in the morning.

Yet, there are those memories – fuzzy, yet timeless: frugal Mike providing the food (often buying cases of unlabeled can goods that became a surprise when opened); sitting on the stone porch with the neighbors, sipping adult brew and watching cars march forth on Delaware Street; playing drums (me), congas (me) and electric guitar (not me), fully knowing that all of the other residents of the house, and street, were listening, trying to make sense of it all.

The three of us have reconnected. Was there any doubt that at some point we would? Friends are eternal. We hold them close. They're an heirloom to our past, growth and hopefully a part of our future. Never let them go!

"It seems to me a crime that we should age, These fragile times should never slip us by, A time you never can or should erase, As friends together watch their childhood fly."

Youth aging out of the foster system need your support

A recent report by the state of Indiana shows that youth in foster care have far lower graduation rates than other students, higher graduation waiver rates and much higher rates of suspension.

The report, mandated by House Enrolled Act 1314 (HEA 1314), was approved by the Indiana General Assembly and signed by Governor Eric Holcomb in 2018. The report is the first effort by the state to track and compile education data.

The statistics are as follows:

· 64.6 percent of foster students graduate high school, compared with 88.1 percent of their peers. • Nearly 21 percent of foster youth receive a graduation waiver, compared to 8.9 percent of their peers. • 21 percent of foster youth are suspended each

- year, compared to 8.9 percent of their peers. Foster students are expelled at nearly two times the rate of their peers.
- Black foster students are expelled at four times the rate of their peers.
- •9.1 percent & 28.7 percent of foster students in 10th grade pass the Math and English ISTEP tests, respectively.

Although the statistics are bleak, an Indianapolis-based nonprofit is helping youth who have, or about to age out of the foster care system. Indiana Connected By 25 provides financial, educational and social support for those who have been in foster care after their 14th birthdays.

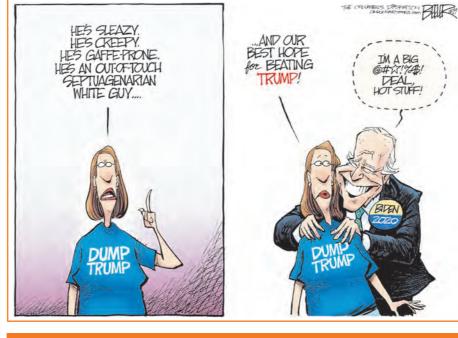

If you're looking for a meaningful way to give back, Connected By 25 welcomes those who wish to donate or become an ambassador for foster youth. For more information, go to fostersuccess.org.

TOP 10 SUGGESTIONS FOR THE UP-AND-COMING TOP TEN LIST WRITER

By Torry Stiles

- 10. Never take yourself too seriously. Remember: your wife may love you but she still thinks you're an idiot.
- 9. Never be afraid to try new things, especially if they worked before.
- 8. Relax. Nobody remembers the crappy ones.
- 7. Never open lumpy fan mail.
- 6. If you have to steal someone else's joke make sure it isn't anybody famous.
- 5. Avoid putting funny stuff in the fifth spot. Folks need a rest from laughing. ... See?
- 4. Ask for the corner office, settle for a card table in the hall. Get too demanding and next week the editor replaces you with old Andy Capp comics.
- 3. Avoid any dirty words stronger than "crappy" or "booger."
- 2. Tell the kids you work for the Mob or are a stripper. They don't need the shame of knowing you do this.
- 1. Don't sweat the folks writing those letters to the editor. You'll be in next week's paper and they'll be back at the house yelling at the squirrels to get off the lawn.

Bring your garden, yard and home back to life this spring

By Brian Ruckle

The tilt of the earth finally overcame winter's grasp and now is the time to start working on your garden, home and lawn.

Bring back color to your home with some flowers or start on your garden by stopping by the Gary Greenhouse open house April 27 & 28 at 4706 Bluff Road. Melinda Gary, of Gary Greenhouse, has spotted a few popular trends, including container and raised bed gardening.

"Both options allow the gardener to control growing variables, such as water, soil and light. Trending planters include upcycled items boots, metal household items, etc. - with added drainage and moss liners," Gary said.

Kelly Bowling of Indy Rental and Sales stocks equipment to help homeowners with spring projects, whether it's preparing the lawn or installing a new fence or patio. Popular rental items are seeders, aerators and dethatchers to keep lawns green and healthy. Bowling keeps other tools on hand - like ladders, scissor lifts, skid steers and mini excavators - to make tasks easier and safer. Paver patios are especially popular right now.

After a long winter, you may be able to give your heating and air conditioning system a temporary rest. You may wish to check out your system before the temperature climbs again.

Joe Annee, of Annee and Bartram, urges homeowners to get their furnace and air conditioner checked in the spring.

"We're going to have some cold weather through May, so it still needs to work properly on the heating cycle," Annee said. "The blower runs constantly on the air-conditioning cycle, so it's important to have that running properly also."

Chris Huser of Lamping/Huser Heating and Cooling, reminds homeowners to maintain their furnace filters.

"Always make sure your furnace filter is cleaned, and check your outdoor condenser coil, which can get clogged up with cottonwood and other debris," Huser said. "Have a professional check the Freon and controls in your air conditioner to ensure proper operation."

Dan Hornaday, of Flooring by Stretch Rite, said today's big flooring trend is hard surfacing. "Many consider replacing carpet in large room areas, (since) hard surfaces are more durable in high-traffic areas, especially after winter, with salt and snow tracked in," he said.

Bob Knight recalls memories as former IU coach

FEATURE

By Angela Norris

Former Indiana University college basketball coach Bob Knight captured the attention of an audience at Center Grove High School as the coach that was once a hero to thousands of people, young and old.

The Hall of Fame coach, also known as "The General", spoke to an audience of several hundred people for 90 minutes at the high school on April 4. Knight coached from 1971 to 2000.

Former sports editor of the Bloomington Herald-Times, Bob Hammel, moderated the event and sat beside Knight, helping the coach to remember some of his fondest memories from his time with IU.

"I meant to tell you all earlier, by the way, I'm 82 and Bob is 78. Now, if you have a grandpa or great-grandpa that age, I guarantee you (that) A: his memory isn't what it used to be and B: probably his hearing isn't very good, either," Hammel said, covering for his friend, Knight.

Knight displayed emotion at times and mentioned more than once that the best days of his life were when he coached IU. The first time he said it, he received a standing ovation.

At one point, Hammel said that he was going to read a list of great basketball players who lost their final college game to Knight and IU in the NCAA tournament. Included on the list was Michael Jordan, Shaguille O'Neal and Don MacLean. Hammel started talking about the Olympics gold medal game Knight coached in 1984, when the U.S. beat Spain by more than 30 points.

After that, an audience member asked Knight for his advice on coaching mental toughness; then Knight's cellphone rang. "Hang on," Knight said to the audience, and answered the phone. "What the hell do you want?" he said to the caller. "Well, I'm busy. Can you give me a call? Give me a call in about a month. All right, well, call me in a little bit. Well, hell, yes I'm busy. What do you think? You know, I don't just sit around on my ass like you do." The audience erupted in laughter and applause at the usual witty banter from the coach.

Hammel then introduced his and Knight's wives, who were sitting in the audience. Minutes later, after their wives had been introduced, Knight interrupted a story to ask if his wife was there. "My wife is over there; where are you?" Knight said. "Please stand."

"OK, well, the reason I ask for my wife to show her presence ... she's without any exception the smartest person I've ever known and she was a damn good coach and I actually would listen to her."

He then reflected on the past, time spent with the players and coaches and talked about his appreciation for them.

When asked by an audience member his predictions for the final four, Knight said, Well, I think it will be the team with the best defense." The audience cheered.

The former coach's legacy will be remembered throughout generations of basketball and Hoosier fans alike.

White River Alliance Clear Choices Clean Water initiative seeks volunteers

Conservation - The White River Alliance's Clear Choices Clean Water initiative encourages Indianapolis residents to take a pledge for improving water quality and conservation in Indiana. Participants who pledge can choose to plant more native plants, conserve water both indoors and outdoors, or they can volunteer in their own neighborhoods. Residents can "adopt a storm drain" by keeping their neighborhood storm drains free of debris and reporting polluters that they indiana.clearchoicescleanwater.org/service/adopt-asee: storm-drain. Residents can also form SWAT teams (Storm Water Actions Teams) in their neighborhoods. These teams remove leaves and debris from around storm drains in the neighborhood, mark the drains with educational markers and place Clear Choices Clean Water Adopt-a-Storm Drain door hangers on residents' doors: thewhiteriveralliance.org/ programs/storm-water-action-teams-swat. Relax and create through Arts in the Parks program

Parks & Recreation – Enjoy beautiful scenery while creating works of art through the Arts in the Parks and Historic Sites program, sponsored by the Indiana Arts Commission. The program is designed to draw upon both traditional and nontraditional arts and artists in Indiana and weave arts programming into the natural beauty and rural settings of Indiana. More than 250 projects are taking place across the state this year that encourage the creation of and public engagement with art, as well as the chance to experience Indiana's state park and state forest system, and its historic sites. Arts programs at Indiana State Parks properties range from a natural dyes workshop at McCormick's Creek State Park to creating art projects out of recycled materials at Versailles State Park to traditional Miami plant- and food-knowledge hikes at Chain O'Lakes State Park and crafting music in the trees at Mississinewa and Salamonie lakes. A complete listing of 2019 opportunities, including dates, locations and program summaries is at IN.gov/arts/files/IAC 2019-APHS-Activities. xlsx. For more information about Arts in the Parks and Historic Sites, visit IN.gov/arts/2905.htm. To view all DNR news releases, please see dnr.IN.gov.

MOVIE REVIEW

By Bradley Lane

Pet Sematary was originally written by Stephan King in 1983, shortly after it was adapted into a feature film in 1989. So, now after 30 years have gone by, we are getting an updated version from the directing duo, Kevin Klösch and Dennis Widmyer. In 2017 Stephan King's It, a similarly remade property, was released and made its money back 20 times over with a budget of $35 million. This sort of box office success nearly ever goes unnoticed, so of course in the coming years we can expect a slew of Stephan King remakes and reboots, of which Pet Sematary is the first.

Pet Sematary follows the story of the Creed family as they uproot their lives in Boston to move to Ludlow, a rural town in Maine. Soon after arriving in their new house, they soon discover a cemetery for the town's pets that have passed in the woods on their property. Soon after this discovery, strange things start to happen to each of the family members, including their cat, Church. After Church is presumably hit by a car, Louis, the father of the family, and Judd, their new neighbor, go to bury him in the pet cemetery. However, Judd shows Louis a dark secret deep in the woods that leads Louis down a dark path that will affect everyone he loves.

So many elements of Pet Sematary are incredibly frustrating, none more frustrating than the first and second acts of this film. The first act of Pet Sematary, and more specifically the first 20 or so minutes, are fantastic. The film does a great job of foreshadowing what horrors await as well as teasing heady themes of death, past trauma and letting go. Unfortunately, after those opening sequences, the film dips dramatically in quality. For the next hour audiences will be treated with ample expositional dialogue, bland generic jump scares and character building that leads to nowhere. It is a long slog to get to the third act, and even then the film fumbles the ending, leading to a very anti-climatic ending.

The performances range from great to just okay. Jason Clarke, and especially John Lithgow, give emotional and convincing performances, while Amy Seimetz and the child actors give performances that are passable, but never hit the emotional depths that their roles demand.

Pet Sematary's weakest elements, however, lie in the filmmaking surrounding the story. The gray and washed out color palette they use at night and in the forest is visually displeasing, and the green screen utilization in the woods does not belong in a movie with a wide release in 2019. Additionally, the shot structure and editing in this film leaves a lot to be desired.

The most puzzling decision that the filmmakers made was the decision to remake this film. The original is certainly not a masterpiece in any right, but the remake does not further the themes of the original, nor does it have anything new and distinct to say about the source material. The film and source material deal heavily with letting go and the idea that things get nasty when you try and drag something back from the past. If only the producers, writers and directors had paid more attention to the messaging within their own film.

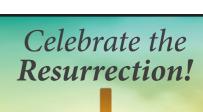

Bradley is a Beech Grove High School alumnus and has been enamored by film for as long as he can remember. He is currently in his third year studying at IUPUI, majoring in Media and Public Affairs with a minor in Film. Bradley can be contacted at blane2214@gmail.com.

Triumph, joy and validation after a successful surgery

NUTRITION

By Wendell Fowler

Words fail to express our joyous gratitude for the successful outcome of Sandi's tumor removal surgery. We call it a miracle and the surgeon described it the perfect scenario: healthy going in, healthy going out. (Exhale!)

After physical, mental and spiritual preparation, the successful surgery to remove the tumor was due to what her delighted surgeon explained: Sandi's confidant, optimistic attitude, our plant-based diet and lifestyle, exercise, community support, meditative prayer and intentions. Plus, at 72, she has no age-related disease like high blood pressure, heart disease, obesity, or diabetes, which "made surgery a breeze", the surgeon remarked. Because she entered surgery heathy, the surgeon said the outcome may not have been so good. Instantly, the sadness, worry or fear lifted as our hearts danced in joy.

Not just cancer, but the American Cancer Society states a plant-based diet can be used as a powerful potential treatment for chronic diseases and conditions — such as hypertension, heart disease, stroke, type 2 diabetes, obesity, osteoporosis and multiple types of cancer. Eighty percent of all healthcare spending in the U.S. is tied to the treatment of conditions rooted in the poor lifestyle choices you are going to change, right?

As sure as the sun's going to shine tomorrow, the plant-based diet and lifestyle I've been preaching is set in stone worldwide as your antidote to the current plague of largely preventable diseases of modern society. Reminder: a plant-based diet (PBD): A wholefoods plant-based eating pattern rich in non-GMO, fresh local fruits and vegetables, beans, herbs, nuts and seeds, good fats, minimal unprocessed whole grains, low in meat, dairy and zero-processed junk foods. (The genesis of many diseases.) A PBD, along with other healthy living habits, can improve many chronic health conditions and help keep your sacred temple healthy and energetic. It's doable because everyone has full access to the knowledge of how to prevent the heartbreak.

Health is the sum of our choices ... not a family hand-me down as you'd like to think. Genes may load the gun, but you pull the trigger. We must be thankful this info has come forward. We most certainly are!

It's about time we discussed this, noon or midnight

GRAMMAR GUY

By Curtis Honeycutt

If having kids has taught me anything, it's that I'm never going to be on time for anything again in my life. At best, I'll be 10 minutes late with at least one person crying and at least one person sporting an unidentified stain. But if time is all relative, does it really matter? Unfortunately, yes. In our culture of scheduled meetings, being time savvy is important.

I often hear people wondering about "next Thursday." When a corporate headhunter suggests you have an interview lunch at the steakhouse next Thursday, does she mean "Thursday a few days from now?" or "Thursday next week?" Is there a correct way to refer to this? Obviously, if she would have said "this Thursday," she would mean "Thursday a few days from now." But "next" is a relative term; there's no general agreement on "next Thursday." When in doubt, be as specific as possible and try to avoid confusion.

What about a.m. and p.m.? Great question. Some would suggest a.m. stands for "after midnight" and p.m. stands for "post midday," but that isn't true. These abbreviations are Latin: a.m. is short for "ante meridiem" (before noon) and p.m. is short for "post meridiem" (after noon). AP Style suggests writing these abbreviations with lowercase letters and periods after each letter (e.g., 8 a.m.).

While we still have some time, let's discuss noon and midnight. To avoid redundancy, don't say "12 noon" or "12 midnight." You can say "I left the bar around midnight," but it would be redundant to say, "I left the bar around 12 midnight."

Finally, we have to talk about time zones (because you'll inevitably find yourself in one before too long). Most of Arizona doesn't even observe Daylight Savings Time, so why do we need to bother with abbreviations like EDT and EST? EDT stands for Eastern Daylight Time (roughly spring and summer), and EST stands for Eastern Standard Time, which is approximately autumn and winter. Do we need to specify? Probably not, because it's just confusing. Instead, I suggest using "ET" for Eastern Time, "CT" for Central Time, and so on.

Now I'm officially out of time, although there are plenty more timely topics we could continue to discuss. Let me know what grammar-related time troubles you experience.

Weekly Devotion

14 And God said unto Moses, I AM THAT I AM: and he said, Thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel, I AM hath sent me unto you.

EXODUS 3:14

43 I am come in my Father's name, and ye receive me not: if another shall come in his own name, him ye will receive.

JOHN 5:43

I chose these two passages (one from the Old Testament and the other from the New) to illustrate the ongoing presence of God among and with His people. He is a constant presence even if we don't know it or are not aware of it. We find by these two passages of Scripture that He is one with His people even when they are going through some very disappointing and even disastrous times. He has promised that He will never ever forsake us nor leave us to be alone. He is the ever-present "I AM". He was this to Moses and Israel and He was this to Israel in the time of Christ and He is this to His church today.

Sometimes it appears that the Devil is winning. He is not. God knows exactly where he is and what he is doing and how far he has come and just how far he can go. All of this serves God's purpose and we must remember in times of great stress that we are "sheep accounted for the slaughter" and subject to some very hard times but in those times we must remain faithful to God.

It is not easy, I know. It is hard to understand the timing of God. People we know and love go through torment, but
