A serious decision needs to be made about investigating your own home for ghostly activity. (Photo by Rick Hinton)

Are paranormal investigations in your own home a good idea?

HAUNTS & JAUNTS

By Rick Hinton

Paranormal investigators are a hearty lot, willing to explore a world of shadows and mysteries at the drop of a dime. However, when it becomes a matter of strange shenanigans in their own private residence, should they investigate? Most would say - no!

There is no better justification for investigations than helping someone in need and providing answers. But who's going to help you when your fortress of solitude is invaded? You begin to look for reasons:

- · Maybe it's something I brought home from an investigation?
- · Something that's been here all along, and as curious about you as you are of them?
- · Maybe it's you that is haunted rather than the location?

You have the initial reaction:

- · You've got to be kidding me!
- · Look the other way, dismiss, look for rational explanations (as you often advise your clients). If you don't recognize it as a ghost maybe it will just go away.

Now, some paranormal enthusiasts may very well embrace their house being haunted. It's a novelty at first but that won't last for long; any sort of rest and relaxation will be fleeting at best. Then begins the rationale – it's dear Aunt Clara, Uncle Jim, mom or dad, so a kinship with the spirit forms, whether the association is factual or not. Investigating your own residence - especially if you're involved - might just take it from a dormant watchful state to a ramped-up fiesta. (They know that you know, so the fun and games begin!)

· You are on a constant ride of pins and needles when you really should be recharging your battery. Nighttime walks through a darkened house has you on edge; and you have to go to work the next day! No rest for the weary.

• It's not a win-win situation when the paranormal consumes every aspect of your life!

An association with a spiritual entity in your own residence becomes a personal matter, and like it or not, you either learn to co-exist, take measures to rid your home of them, or move. They may be unwelcome guests, but at the end of the day, they're still your guests. But, when suddenly you bring in a troop of unfamiliar faces with an arsenal of cameras, recorders, meters with colorful lights, and a barrage of questions, then the game changes; sometimes drastically.

It is believed investigating your own personal abode is not a good thing. For the spirits involved, it's an intrusion; and for us, an intrusion also. Let's face it: you have to live there after the equipment is packed away and the investigation ends. The investigation may either ramp up activity (spirits can get highly pissed off over this invasion of their personal space) or quite the opposite - they retreat into the shadows during the investigation, most likely to re-emerge after it's over. And, most likely, not happy campers over it all!

Our residences are sanctuaries where we refuel and regroup, and for paranormal investigators, to have some semblance of a normal life beyond hunting ghosts and a world full of dark shadows and mystery. Investigating takes not only a physical, but also mental toll over time. You need time off! Yet, this balance is altered when paranormal activity hits the home abode. After all, do you really want to be on call 24/7?

Local broadcast journalist shares his thoughts as a father and the joys of Hoosier hospitality

By Nancy Price

Every weekday, thousands of Hoosiers in central Indiana area begin their mornings waking up with a cup of coffee and watching broadcast journalist Carlos Diaz on WTHR-TV. Diaz, a Greenwood native, has already achieved an envious lifetime of success.

Dream job

When Diaz was just 26, he already snagged a broadcaster's dream job at ESPN. "Whereas most people in their middle 50s will have a midlife crisis and they want to go buy a sports car, and they want to go on vacation, and how they want to live the biggest life they can. That was me at 26. I'm like, 'I work for ESPN and now I want to travel the world and I want to interview everyone I can.' There was nothing that I felt that I could not do. Then you go, 'OK – what's next?' It was the NBA, and then Extra and then CNN, and you turn around and 20 years have gone by and you've been on national TV for 20 years and you go, 'Wow!' And you have all these experiences.

"None of that matters if you don't have family. If you don't have someone to share your happiness with, then is it even real? Even when I was at the biggest sporting events, on the red carpet, the Oscars, traveling the globe, interviewing the most interesting people in the world, I was completely unhappy because I was alone."

When Diaz was working for Extra, he had a live morning show on radio stations all across the U.S., including Tampa, Fla. He traveled to Tampa to introduce stage acts at a concert festival. Olga, a promotions manager for the local Florida station, booked travel arrangements for Diaz. When Diaz met Olga, "it was like a bolt of lightning," he said. "Like, I just met my wife and I don't know it yet."

A budding romance over 'linner'

However, Diaz and Olga were in other relationships at the time, and three years passed before they connected again. This time, both were single, and Diaz invited her to breakfast on a Sunday. "She said, 'Does that typically work on women, that line, breakfast?'

And I go, 'Yes, it does'. She's like, 'No, tomorrow's Sunday. I go to church on Sunday.' And I go, 'How about lunch?' and she said, 'It's a Catholic church. I'll still be there.' And then I said, 'How about dinner?' And she said, 'I think you're getting ahead of yourself.' And I said, 'How about linner (an afternoon meal between lunch and dinner)?"

Olga and Diaz maintained a long-distance relationship before getting married and moved back to Greenwood in 2016. "When I wanted to start a family, I wanted to start a family in the best place possible. And that is Indiana," Diaz said. "Hoosier hospitality is a real tangible thing. I have a very dear friend here in Greenwood and she actually said to me, 'Carlos, people are people. And people are the same all over the world.' And I looked at her and said, 'I'm sorry, I've been all over the world and I disagree. There is just a level of kindness and generosity in Indiana that does not exist in everyone in other parts of the world."

It's all about family

Today, Olga and Diaz are parents of a son, Dacio, 4, and daughter, Deyla, 2 ½. "He's a devoted father," Olga said of Diaz. "Everything he does, it's for his family. Just like any other parent, he wants a better life for his kids than he had. Every day when he comes home, it's like, 'Daddy's home!' Dacio plays golf with his daddy. Here we are watching every Disney princess movie. He hates waiting in line but he waits in line so his little girl can meet a Disney princess. He'll drop everything when it comes to the kids."

As a father, Diaz said he encourages his kids to express themselves and voice their opinions. "I will allow a little talkback. I will allow a little rebellion. Because I don't want to stifle their voices even at a young age," he said. "The message that I want to say to my kids, is, 'We are going to give you rules and guidelines. And as long as you work within those guidelines, I want you to be whatever person you want to be, and I want you to express yourself in whatever way you want to express yourself within the guidelines that we set." Carlos Diaz describes reporting on 9-11 and which celebrities left him starstruck. For more information, go to sstimes.com/the-family-man.

Seven steps to follow when buying a first home

REAL ESTATE

By Dawn Whalen, Whalen Realty Group

Buying a house is one of the biggest investments a person will make in their lifetime, so it's important to go through the process correctly. There are so many different ways to look for what real estate options are available, but before going to a showing make sure the important paperwork is complete first.

- 1. GET PREAPPROVED It's difficult to purchase a home without already having a pre-approval letter that describes the financing the buyer needs to close. A trusted realtor or the bank can offer suggestions for a quality lender. If multiple people are interested in the same home, waiting on a pre-approval letter can waste valuable time and gives an opportunity for the home to go to someone else.
- BUDGET Do not ask to look for homes outside your price and comfort range as this can be a waste of time for all parties. The current market has limited inventory, which means buyers will not spend time entertaining offers that are considered lowball. Go through monthly expenses and figure out approximately how much could be spent each month on a mortgage and insurance, plus utilities and other associated moving and homeowner expenses. Don't forget to identify how much money will be needed for closing costs.

- 3. PRIORITIES Make a list of what traits are important for the home. Think about the number of bedrooms, bathrooms, size of the yard, if a home office is needed, location to schools or other places.
- LOCATION Many people want to be near work or in a certain school system. Narrow down which area(s) to focus on.
- 5. BE DECISIVE As has been the trend the last few years, there's less inventory available than buyers. Once there's a house that is of interest it's important to act quickly.
- 6. DON'T PLAY GAMES Realtors are experts at real estate, which means they understand the market and can give credible advice on concessions, pricing, credits and other monetary factors that can come into play.
- 7. NOTHING IS PERFECT Each homeowner will have a different taste in styling, so it's common that painting, fixtures, landscaping and other features may need changed. Plus, minor repairs are always something that can easily remedied in a productive weekend or two. If major repairs are needed, talk to your realtor for advice on how that may impact the price or closing.

There is so much information available to first time homebuyers that many come to the table knowing what they want. More important than knowing what's on the list of most desired features is being approved, so anyone who is currently looking for a new home needs to talk to a lender before moving forward; otherwise it could mean missing out on a great home.

Dawn Whalen is owner of Whalen Realty Group and has worked in commercial and residential real estate for more than 10 years. She's a licensed realtor, broker and is a member of MIBOR. She can be reached at Dawn@whalenrealtygroup.com.

Hundreds attend Greenwood Black Lives Matter rally

FEATURE

By Neal Smith

Last Friday, over 500 people gathered across from the Greenwood Public Library to show their support for Black Lives Matter. The evening was in contrast to demonstrations that occurred just a few miles north in Indianapolis and in other cities around the world three weeks ago, protesting the killing of George Floyd in Minneapolis.

Cindy Reinert, Democratic candidate for House District 58 helped to organize the rally. "We all have a responsibility to take a stand against racism and injustice," she said. "It is not enough to not be racist; we must be anti-racist. We know that there is a desire for action from our constituents for change to come."

Greenwood Mayor Mark Myers also attended the rally, sharing his thoughts on Floyd's homicide and asking for feedback from the community. "As a husband and a father, I think about my family and how it is impossible to imagine a world where they fear every time they walk out the door," he said. "I watched the video (of Minneapolis Police Officer Derek Chavin pressing his knee into Floyd's neck). That was not a split-second decision. That was an eight-minute and 46-second decision. We must not let our faith in good police officers prevent us from seeing those that are the bad. As a 57-year-old white male, I think the best thing I can do is to step back and listen ... to you. Listen to the people of color."

Bartholomew County NAACP President Olisa Humes urged for police reform. "If the passerby didn't use their voice and camera in the George Floyd killing, they (police) may never have been arrested," she said. "The police who brutally murdered Mr. Floyd, the police who murdered Breona Taylor may never have been arrested. Body cameras are good, but it has to go beyond that. We need to ask that the policies that control those body cams make sense, like they shouldn't be able to turn their cameras off. There are a lot of things that we need to make sure that we're also asking that the policies make sense for our citizens."

"This is the most beautiful thing I've ever seen," Jeanine Lake, 6th District Democratic candidate for Congress, said of the turnout. "I'll tell you what. If Black Lives Matter only to black people, we're going to be here again. When you say those words "Black Lives Matter," it has to mean something to you. It means that you're willing to step out into uncomfortable conversations. You have to speak up. It's time to speak up.

"We're asking for basic rights," she said. "To live in the land that gives us the pursuit of happiness just like you have. I love the signs that say, 'I may not understand, but I stand with you."

Greenwood Middle School hosts eighth-grade farewell event

End of school – Greenwood Middle School is excited to share that there will be an exit bell parade for the class of 2024 on July 7 at 7 p.m. The organized event will be simple, yet fun for a memory the students will remember. Students/family vehicles will be directed to park in designated parking lots (north and south lots GMS) and the roads that line both the north and south sides of GMS. An eighth-grade teacher, staff member or PTO Board member will deliver a bell to the student's family's car. Students and families must stay in their vehicles. Then, socially distanced students may roll down their windows or stand out of their sunroofs and ring their bells at a given time. Following the bell ringing, there will be a police-escorted parade from GMS to Greenwood High School. Families are invited to decorate their vehicles.

HAPPY FATHER'S DAY!

This year, we asked Southside students the following question: What would be the ultimate Father's Day gift for your dad and why (no cost limitations)? We received a variety of responses, from a gift overseas (the Colosseum and Mount Fiji), to a DJI Mavic Air 2 drone. Other responses included a gift card for games, notebooks, a coffee mug, breakfast in bed and a hug and a day for a dad to spend time with his friends. The Southside Times thanks all participants for submitting letters and we wish all dads a Happy Father's Day.

> My idea for the perfect Father's Day gift would just be a trip for us to do whatever he felt like in his favorite places. My dad always wants to do something with me all the time, so I think some time for us to do things in his favorite places would be fun and would be perfect. I would take my dad to Rome and go see the Colosseum. He has always wanted to go to Rome and see the Colosseum, so I think that would be a perfect idea. My dad also has an interest in museums, so that's another place where I would take him. I would take him to different museums and maybe make a day out of it. One of the days, I would take him to go see the Sistine Chapel. He would also love to see all of the different castles that are in Europe. After we visit Europe. I would take him to Japan. He would love to see Mount Fiji because it's a volcano and he loves volcanoes, so I would take him there. He also would like to try different foods in Japan. He would also just love to see what these places are like so I would love to make that happen. This is what the perfect Father's Day gift would be.

Cierra Morton GRADE 8 Indianapolis Southside Christian Academy

Dear Father:

I am thankful that you are in my life. If you were never in my life, I would never have become a Christian. I know that life isn't easy, but you always make sure I have clothes, food, shoes, a school to go to and a family that loves me. I know you like notebooks. I have been saving my money, and I have enough to buy you some. Happy Father's Day and stay safe!

> Terkwe Thaw GRADE 3 Indianapolis Southside Christian Academy

I love my daddy! I would get him a blue gift card to a store so he can get games. He can play the games and we will laugh. He is strong and will pick me up so high! I love him and he loves me!

> Emilia Hatton 3 YEARS OLD Country Children's House Preschool

I love my dad! I've given my dad pictures and hugs a lot, but I think he needs something more special. I would get my dad breakfast in bed. He would like biscuits and gravy for breakfast. I don't think he's had breakfast in bed before. It would be a good gift because I'm really good at booking, so Dad will think it's yummy!

> Savannah Hatton 5 YEARS OLD Country Children's House Preschool

If I had a million dollars (or enough to buy anything for my father) it would probably be a drone, but not any kind of drone; it would be a DJI Mavic Air 2 drone. My dad has been spending a lot of time looking at drones on his computer, but they cost at least a thousand dollars! If I got him one, I know he would be happy enough to use it all day long. He's really into photo shooting and droning around our place so this would be useful for his family YouTube channel (for memories). I just hope that our family will have a happy Father's Day.

> Orlando Seal GRADE 5 Indianapolis Southside Christian Academy

The ultimate gift for my dad would be a special coffee mug because my dad drinks coffee every morning. It would let him know on the cup how much I love him. My dad always believes in me, cooks healthy food, protects me and keeps me safe, but most of all he loves me. My dad is really nice to other people and even coached baseball for me. He takes me camping and fishing in Michigan. He is always there for me when I need him, even when catching fish. That is why my dad is the best Dad ever!

The best Father's Day gift for my dad is a hug and a day to spend with his friends. I think he does not want to be rich with money but rich with happiness. I think a day to hang out would be nice, too.

CarDon resident receives birthday surprise

By CarDon & Associates

Longtime Bell Trace resident Paula Mueller received a big surprise on her birthday this year. Not only did she get to celebrate a major milestone – turning 108 years old – but staff members threw her a party complete with cake, balloons and the "Happy Birthday" song.

Best of all, Paula's family graced her with their socially distanced presence. Her son, daughter-in-law, granddaughter and three great-grandchildren greeted her outside her window. CarDon & Associates, which owns and operates Bell Trace, was thrilled to coordinate the visit and celebration

"Paula has been a CarDon resident since 2001, so we wanted to do something special for her," said Bell Trace Director of Community Engagement Kelsey Haislip. "Because of the visitation restrictions due to COVID-19, we want to make the best of this tough time and make sure our residents are still feeling loved."

Paula certainly seemed to feel the love, as a bright smile spread across her face when a staff member asked her to share the secret to living a long life.

"Be happy," Paula said, safely surrounded by her caregivers and loved ones.

Paula's long, happy life started in White Lake, South Dakota – a small city that still has a population of less than 400. She grew up alongside five sisters and a brother. Her father was a Lutheran pastor who preached at neighboring churches and even learned sign language to communicate with deaf churchgoers.

When she was a teenager, Paula's family moved to Milwaukee, where she attended high school and college. She went on to teach primary grades at a Lutheran school. At a Lutheran summer camp in northern Wisconsin, Paula met Emil, the love of her life. They married and moved to Chicago, where Emil served as a lawyer for the Chicago and North Western Railroad. They raised three boys in the Chicago suburb of Lombard.

After Emil left the railroad field, he and Paula moved back to South Dakota, where he served as assistant to the state's attorney general. A few years later, they retired to the San Francisco Bay area, where two of their sons live. When Emil passed away, Paula moved to Bloomington, Ind., to be near another one of their sons.

Paula loves living in the Midwest, seeing colorful leaves give way to lightning-white snow and watching April showers bring May flowers. She faces the seasons of her life with just as much joy.

Paula's loved ones and second family at Bell Trace were happy to celebrate another year of her happy life.

Roncalli High School and the Indianapolis Children's Choir resume summer camps

By Nancy Price

While many summer camps have been canceled due to COVID-19, a few local camps will continue.

Roncalli High School is resuming their Junior Rebel Theatre Mini Camp July 6-9, from 10:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. The same camp is offered again July 13-16 with the same criteria as the previous camp. Camps will focus on improvisation, theatre games, costuming, musical theatre and much more. The camp cost is $50 ($10 for children of Roncalli's faculty and staff). Advanced registration is not required but needed if you wish to guarantee a T-shirt for your child. Registration forms are available at Roncalli.org (under Arts, theatre tab, then Junior Rebel Theatre).

The Indianapolis Children's Choir (ICC), meanwhile, will hold a virtual music camp during the month of July. This year's camp, called "Reach!" is for children going into grades first through eighth. Sessions will include choral instruction for four performance pieces (part-singing, music theory, movement class and orff class). Recorder class is optional for students in third through eighth grades who have a recorder at home). Modules will consist of one hour of activity per day (which may be split up throughout the month) and can be completed according to the participant's own schedule. Final submissions of performance recordings must be submitted by Friday, July 24 at 11:59 p.m.

Live sessions from home with ICC directors are optional and available through the week of July 20-24. Registered attendees will receive more information. All singers may virtually audition for the Indianapolis Children's Choir during camp.

Families may purchase a ticket code for $5 to watch the final performance on Friday, July 31 online from their homes. Additional codes for friends and family in other households may also be purchased for $5 each.

Tuition costs $85, which includes a $25 non-refundable registration fee. Financial assistance is available. For further questions or to apply, email lsouthar@icchoir.org.

Tips for raising great puppies

FEATURE

By Dr. Stacey Shore

A puppy can be the greatest addition to any family, but sometimes even the most seasoned owner can use a few tips. Here are some ideas to ensure that raising your puppy is a wonderful experience.

Socialization is an essential part of every puppy's experience. They need to be gradually exposed to other people, other dogs and cats, as well as potentially frightening things in a controlled environment. If they get these experiences when they are young, they will be much more confident and less fearful when they grow older. This period is from 7-12 weeks of age. The permanent man/dog bonding begins. When training your puppy, a key concept to keep in mind is that a dog only has a retention period of three to four seconds. You must praise or correct a behavior within that truly short period for him to understand the connection between what they have done and how you are reacting.

Housetraining can be made easier using these ideas. Remember that puppies will repeatedly do things for which they get positive feedback. They should go outside every few hours to eliminate. It is IMPORTANT that you go outside with them, preferably on a leash to guide them to the correct behavior. Do not let them get distracted, but instead immediately take them to a specific potty area. Let them sniff around that area until they start to urinate or defecate. Immediately praise them lavishly in a happy voice and give them a small tasty treat as soon as they are done. Remember that this needs to be done within seconds of the behavior. If you wait until they get inside, they will think that you are praising them for making it back in the house, not for the proper toileting behavior.

If your puppy has accidents in the house initially, that is normal. It is like a child learning how to use the bathroom. There will be some mistakes. Do not yell or punish your puppy, since they will only grow to fear you. Instead, clean the area with an enzymatic cleaner to remove all traces. Try to figure out why it happened and find a way to make sure that it does not happen again.

The most important thing to remember is that your veterinarian is the best source of advice and information about your young dog. It is particularly important that you have a good relationship with your vet and contact them with any problems or issues. An excellent reference is The Perfect Puppy by Dr. Sophia Yin. If you have any general questions for which you would like to see an answer, feel free to post it on our South 31 Veterinary Clinic Facebook page.

■ SCOUT

Scout is a female pointer mix. She is about 2 years old with a high prey dog for cats. She needs a fenced-in yard with someone who lives an active lifestyle. His adoption fee is about $350.

Rosie's Southside Animal Shelter gives a lot of medical attention to their animals, especially dogs. Our shelter rarely turns down a senior dog in need. Our senior panels we do for any animal over the age of 8 years costs $110 alone. That doesn't count the meds needed, the vet visits, surgeries, vaccines, dewormers, flesh and heartworm prevention. Our basic workup for the animals include age-appropriate vaccines, two to three rounds of de-wormer, flea and heartworm prevention, microchip and registration included in adoption fee, spay/neuter, heartworm tests for all dogs over 6 months, any needed surgeries for all animals in our care, grooming for those who need it, FIV/FELV tests for all our cats and kittens and rabies vaccines for all animals over 12 weeks old. We also assure that we will ALWAYS take our animals back no matter how long they have been gone.

Da 5 Bloods

Spike Lee's newest joint is among his best

MOVIE REVIEW

By Bradley Lane

Spike Lee's newest film released on Netflix last weekend, amid ongoing protests against disproportionate police brutality toward black Americans. Lee's work has, for the most part, always revolved around the black experience, and Da 5 Bloods is a perfect example of Lee doing what he does best. Telling a compelling story that beautifully combines the personal with the political to make something wholly original.

Set in modern-day Vietnam, Da 5 Bloods follows four black American veterans as they meet to take one last trip into the jungle. They return to Vietnam in search of their squad leader's remains and in search of gold they buried during the war. We learn more about their leader, Stormin' Norman, through flashbacks to their wartime exploits that paint Norman as a charismatic and wise leader. His absence is felt in the modern-day story as the squad struggle to maintain unity, as time and extenuating circumstances have taken their toll on the team's relationship to one another. With tensions boiling, the four men, accompanied by one of their sons, set out into the jungle where dangers await them.

Despite his near legendary status in Hollywood, Spike Lee struggled to get this film made, and after seeing the film, that does not surprise me in the slightest. Not only does it have a lengthy runtime and star older, less marketable actors, both of which are red flags to Hollywood producers, but it also contains challenging messaging. Its themes are, even today, contentious subjects including, but certainly not limited to, U.S. imperialism, inter-generational pain, racism, modern-day reactionary politics and of course, Black liberation. Thankfully, without box office pressure Netflix can more easily take on risky projects like Da 5 Bloods. This is all to say, I am incredibly grateful to Netflix and other streaming services for being able to take more risks with the projects they take on. It creates a more interesting film landscape in a time where the biggest films of the day are becoming increasingly homogenized, in both style and substance.

The style of Da 5 Bloods takes cues from foundational works of film like Apocalypse Now and The Treasure of the Sierra Madre, in that the movie is a sprawling journey with twists and turns around each corner that stretches each of the characters to their limits. The quick pace does wonders to mitigate the intimidating runtime but can leave some ideas left underdeveloped. Like most of Lee's work, he communicates a lot of profound ideas very quickly, but fails to translate them into a cohesive piece of work. Despite this, the film leaves the viewer with a lot to chew on and it is an easy recommendation for anyone with a Netflix subscription.

Bradley is a Beech Grove High School alumnus and has been enamored by film for as long as he can remember. He is currently in his third year studying at IUPUI, majoring in Media and Public Affairs with a minor in Film. Bradley can be contacted at blane2214@gmail.com.

Wander Indiana and create some lifetime memories

FEATURE

By Angie Norris

As things begin to open back up, families are venturing back out to their favorite spots they've missed. While still practicing social distancing, it's time to get back to them and make some memories

Everything's better downtown

Summer is the perfect time to bring the family downtown for a walk and learn fun facts about our city. Walk along the canal or visit Monument Circle and see the Soldiers and Sailors Monument. Check out the beautiful sculptures and outdoor gardens near the Eiteljorg Museum. Or, just visit the shops, grab some lunch and see the downtown sights. This is also a great time to take beautiful pictures of your family.

Gone fishin'

One of the greatest joys in life can be taking your kids fishing. Children as young as 2 can even go fishing with their parents' help. Whether standing on the shore, in a pond throwing out your line, or fishing from a boat, your kids can catch their first fish in no time with a little patience. Take a picnic and have lunch by the water. Building memories on the water is something your kids will remember forever.

Camping trip

Whether you go camping in a camper, or set up tents at a campground, being with your family around a campfire under the stars roasting marshmallows is what summer is all about. You can take hikes through trails and see what kind of different nature you can find. Cook campfire food in foil packets over your fire.

Schedule a day or weekend for some outdoor fun with your family.

Top, Lea Norris proudly shows the fish she caught. Bottom, Charles and Nate Norris enjoy spending time along the canal in downtown Indy. (Photos by Angie Norris)
