For the past two years, the Greenwood Rotary Club has hosted live Bids 4 Kids auctions to benefit United Way Fast Track, Greenwood Community Schools, Greenwood Little League and Central Nine Career Center. This year, due to COVID-19, there will be no live auction. Instead, the club will focus on a target project for Bids 4 Kids: Greenwood Public Library's "Focus: Foster Kids!" The project will allow the library to provide up to 500 foster children with literacy kits, including an age-appropriate book. Greenwood Rotary Club's goal is to raise $10,000 by Nov. 30.

What is the difference between an apparition and a manifestation?

HAUNTS & JAUNTS

By Rick Hinton

Paranormal jargon is a foreign language for most, and an endeavor in understanding for the rest. There are those of us out there striving for some sort of understanding of metaphysical affairs and gray areas, including terminology that, for the most part, doesn't have a niche in normal day-to-day living. Dave just wanted some answers.

Are apparitions and manifestations one and the same? In many aspects they are, yet in other areas they are completely different. An apparition (the Holy Grail, for any ghost hunter in their investigative career) is a chance encounter and doesn't happen all that frequently. It's a visual experience focused in on a very real physical presence, often seen with a weary set of eyes that suddenly awaken and grow to the size of silver dollars. If it's solid and clear you should be able to make out the sex and features of the clothing, hair and face. Sometimes they are a tad on the fuzzy side and not so clear. Once an apparition is sighted, the poor paranormal investigator can never go back to any sense of normalcy. Their blood pounds for more!

A manifestation, on the other hand, can include an element of an apparition, yet it is often so much more! Manifestations become a mixture of tangible signs of a legit haunting, including: tactile (a sense of touch or scratches); auditory (noises – subtle or loud); olfactory (odors ... like the odor of grandmotherly perfume we get occasionally in our bedroom); shadow figures. These can manifest in situations when mind and body are fresh and observant; or in a tired mind and body, where sleep has been elusive. This needs to be taken into consideration.

There's two ways we perceive what we are seeing with our eyes – central and peripheral vision. Central is straight ahead, line of sight, only encompassing about 3 percent of our vision. Yet, it's what we use 95 percent of the time. On the flip side, peripheral vision is what we see to our side – about 180 degrees – and not so clearly defined, appearing as fuzzy and non-distinct. Peripheral vision results in the majority of paranormal sightings. "I thought I saw something moving out of the corner of my eye," is a common statement. However, how reliable is the experience?

It pays to sort it all out. It may have been something as simple as an eyelash. Or a flying insect catching your peripheral's attention. It might have been light from the television shifting across the surface of your glasses. Or a car's headlights filtering through the window and across the room. These experiences add a touch of mystique to a great story, but it might not be an accurate one. However, there's those that are, and possibly an encounter in this fuzzy peripheral realm that's the real deal: a shadow figure residing in the corner of the room, sitting still and waiting. Eventually it will move. You might just catch a glimpse, and after that, many more!

Apparition ... manifestation ... examples of paranormal jargon. Next week the list goes on. ...

THE FUTURE LEADERS OF TOMORROW

Southside college students become politically aware in organizations, gain experience by campaigning

By Nancy Price

In college, many young adults are often exposed to different belief systems. They're meeting new people from different races, religions and socioeconomic groups and may become passionate about civic engagement for the first time.

"I really became interested in politics once I went to college," said Ted Deitz, a 20-year-old junior majoring in political science at the University of Indianapolis. "I started having more conversations with people from around the United States and learned that while there are many differences between people, deep down we all want to improve things; we just have different ways about making improvements."

Leaving a Comfort Zone

Deitz, a lifelong Southsider, transferred to UIndy and changed his major after spending his freshman year at Belmont University in Nashville, Tenn. "One of my professors at Belmont, Dr. Andy Watts, really inspired me to learn about issues that are not necessarily in my comfort zone," Deitz said. "He introduced me to the problems that are facing indigenous communities across the United States and encouraged me to look beyond my own life at what was happening across the United States. I wanted to do whatever I could to preserve the environment for future generations."

Deitz joined the UIndy College Democrats and began campaigning for Angela Elliot, who is representing District 93 as she runs for Indiana House of Representatives. He's made new friends as a result of his political involvement, including Ellie Wilson, 20, a sophomore at the University of Indianapolis majoring in international relations and philosophy and minoring in political science and Franco-Germanic studies. As the director of outreach and communication for UIndy College Democrats Wilson connects with 14 college chapters statewide, communicates with members of those chapters and with students attending universities without a chapter and is responsible for social media.

"I've learned what it looks like to organize around important issues and to build inclusive coalitions," Wilson said of her participation with the organization. Like Deitz, she has also spent time campaigning for state democratic candidates, including 5th Congressional District candidate Christina Hale and Ashley Eason, running for Indiana State Senate District 36.

Learning on the Campaign Trail

"My favorite part about campaigning is getting to meet people," said Wilson. "Hearing their concerns and their values is what politics is all about. Each person who takes the time to talk to a campaign is really saying, 'I care about my community and want to make it better. Can you help?'"

"You cannot beat the conversations that you can have on the campaign trail," added Kegan Prentice, 21, a graduate of the University of Indianapolis who currently attends the IU McKinney School of Law at IUPUI. "Just this past month, I was knocking on my last door of the day and I ended up speaking with this voter for an hour. I may have had other places to be, but nothing could beat the joy that voter gets when they finally feel like their issues are being heard."

Prentice, a member of the College Republicans while attending UIndy and a precinct committeeman for his home precinct in Seymour, Ind., interned for State Senator Jack E. Sandlin, representing District 36. "It takes a lot of man hours to be successful (while campaigning)," Prentice said. "You need people that are willing to do a variety of different tasks."

Although Wilson and Prentice may have different views politically, they both agree that residents should be aware of what is happening around them and the impact of their vote.

"National, state and local government affect your life daily," said Prentice. "The only way to make the changes that you would like to see at all levels of government is to be politically active."

She said she seeks to represent and serve the people with a bold, pragmatic vision that will deliver real results for the families and communities in District 32 and for all Hoosiers.

★ Aaron Freeman (R)

What inspired you to run for office?

From a young age, I have loved public service and helping my neighbors. I was raised in southeast Indiana where many of those communities depend on volunteers for their ambulance and fire service. I began in public service by volunteering as an Emergency Medical Technician. I also served as an emergency 911 dispatcher and reserve deputy sheriff. Serving in the Indiana State Senate over the past four years has allowed me to continue to give back to our community. Simply put, I believe our community members deserve principled leaders who will advocate passionately on their behalf.

What are your top three priorities?

If re-elected to serve in the Indiana Senate, I would focus on job creation, public safety and delivering a first-class education for our children. Our communities must have a vibrant and growing economy to allow everyone to be employed and earn a living. Taxes should remain low and regulation should not prohibit job creation. We must support our law enforcement officers and give them the tools they need to keep our communities safe. Our children must have an education that will prepare them to live a life full of success and meaning. We must give teachers and schools all the resources necessary to help our children.

What do you enjoy in your free time?

I enjoy spending time with my lovely wife and our two fun and very active boys. Our family enjoys being outside together, we like IndyCar Series and watching all kinds of local sports.

What do you value most about your community?

We live in a great part of the world and are fortunate to be able to call the southeast side of Indianapolis home. We have neighbors who genuinely care about one another, communities that want the best for their citizens, places of worship that are engaged and impactful and some of the best schools in the area. We have so much to be proud of, but there is plenty of work left to do to ensure our children have all the tools necessary to build upon the great community we live in today.

Ways to observe International Day of Older Persons

Every time I visit my 86-year-old dad, I learn something about history, whether it's tales of his time spent in service during the Korean War, growing up during the Great Depression or being stricken with polio in his youth. Oct. 1 is International Day of Older Persons and a good reminder about why we should take the time to visit with those who have rich stories of history to tell.

Here are some fun facts about seniors:

- Roughly 55,000 Americans are over the age of 100. By 2050 the number will reach 600,000, roughly the population of the entire state of Vermont!
- The oldest human recorded by the Guinness Book of World Records was a French woman named Jeanne Louise Calmet, who lived to be 122 years and 164 days. She was born on Feb. 21, 1875 and died Aug. 4, 1997.

There are a few ways you can observe the day:

CHAT WITH OLDER PERSON. We may see them in a new light and learn something about ourselves in the process.

VOLUNTEER YOUR TIME. Research local organizations that work with the elderly and see what you can do to help, including Perry Senior Services at (317) 783-9231 and The Social of Greenwood at (317) 882-4810.

BECOME AN ADVOCATE. Go to brightstarcare.com/indianapolis-nw/blog/resources-senior-services-central-indiana to read about 13 resources providing senior services and information in central Indiana.

8. Size matters ... Who's got the bigger mask and bigger crowds?
7. Apparently, it is important to both open and close the economy down and to open and close schools simultaneously. So ... I think there's a catch in there somewhere.
6. Kindergarten teachers nationwide have been chiming in about how the moderator should've called a timeout for a juice break and nap.

Southside boy donates birthday money to buy treats for Franciscan Health staff

FEATURE

By Amy Moshier

When 9-year-old Southsider Hunter-Michael Hutchins said he wanted to use money his parents would have spent on his birthday to say “thank you” to local healthcare workers, his parents were pleased but not really surprised.

“He’s always trying to find ways to help others,” said Hunter-Michael’s father, John-Michael. And how did Hunter-Michael raise the rest of the money he needed? Well, he had $20 from his scrap metal business in addition to the $150 that would have been his birthday money. He asked for donations from a couple of places and ended up with over $2,100 to put toward treats such as frozen yogurt for healthcare workers at Franciscan Hospital.

“We talked about the pandemic, on the effects it’s having on everybody, especially healthcare workers,” said John-Michael. “He wanted to find a way to help.”

Indeed, Hunter-Michael has run a scrap metal business since 2016 and his father has been there to help every step of the way. The father-son team drives around in an old, white pickup truck. Hunter-Michael was able to pay the loan off with saved proceeds from the business. The duo stops by businesses that have scrap metal that can be donated, according to John-Michael.

Hunter-Michael has enjoyed seeing how much others want to help him in his business. “The response from the community has been amazing,” said Hunter-Michael.

In a time when there are a lot of tough things happening, his success has brought smiles and appreciation across the nation with media outlets, including Good Morning America, GMA which had a surprise from Lowe’s. “They donated $500 to his business,” said Joe Stuteville, media relations manager for Franciscan Health, where healthcare workers will enjoy the frozen yogurt and soft pretzels. The idea that a 9-year-old could have such an idea was not lost on the workers or support staff.

“They were very touched by the thoughtfulness,” said Stuteville.

Such success from a 9-year-old. The future, indeed, looks bright.

Central Indiana best-selling true crime author releases book about unsolved murders

FEATURE

By Nancy Price

A best-selling Hoosier book author has just released a book that includes forensic science efforts about the unsolved murders of two girls from Delphi, Ind.

The Clue at the Haunted Bridge of the Monon Trail is written by Carol Sissom, the author of 15 published crime novels, including The LaSalle Street Murders (books one, two and three), Hand over Heart: Love Letter from a World War II Soldier, Banking with Dillinger, Who Murdered Chynna? (books one and two) and Miracles Really Do Happen (books one and two).

The Clue at the Haunted Bridge of the Monon Trail uncovers evidence about who may have killed 13-year-old Abigail “Abby” Williams and 14-year-old Liberty “Libby” German. On Feb. 13, 2017, the two friends walked along Monon High Bridge, an abandoned railway bridge in Delphi. The next day their bodies were discovered near the trail. Thousands of tips were apparently sent to police after a still image of a man seen walking on the Monon High Bridge was released; in addition, a male’s voice can distinctly be heard on an audio recording from one of the girl’s cell phones that said, “down the hill.” The case, however, remains unsolved.

“He’s loose. He’s free. He’s not in prison right now,” Sissom said. “I think the man on the bridge was wearing a disguise. Read the book, because it was worded very carefully – every single word – so as not to harm the case but yet let the killer know I know who he is. I turned my tip into Delphi police very early in 2020. I felt so very strongly about my tip I wrote a book about my tip.”

“I do think he’s a serial killer and I do think he will act out again on or near Halloween,” she continued. “Keep your eyes on your kids around Halloween and know exactly where they are on or around Halloween. I don’t mean to sound like Sammy Terry (a TV horror host based in Indianapolis) but I do think more than one person was involved in Libby and Abby’s murder so it’s not someone acting alone.”

Sissom, a former Eastside resident, began her writing career as a stringer for The Indianapolis News in 1990. After devouring episodes of Unsolved Mysteries, a mystery documentary TV show, she learned that the show’s host, Robert Stack, was traveling to Anderson, Ind. for the most notorious unsolved crime in the state about three men found dead inside 1318 N. LaSalle St. in Indianapolis. “I wrote about Robert Stack coming to town and the mystery, and well, wound up solving it,” Sissom said. “My first book, The LaSalle Street Murders, is the true story of how I did it.”

In Banking with Dillinger, Sissom interviewed the family of the infamous Indianapolis native John Dillinger, who was accused of robbing 24 banks and charged but not convicted of the murder of an East Chicago, Ind. police officer during the Great Depression. It’s rumored that Dillinger’s grave in Crown Hill Cemetery in Indianapolis may not contain his body, but that of someone else. “The Dillinger family has some very hard, strong evidence to prove that’s not John in the grave,” Sissom said. “I believe they will have victory eventually in proving what they are trying to prove. It’s definitely not over.”

Sissom’s books may be checked out free of charge at local Marion County Public Library branches. For those who would like to purchase a book, Sissom can be reached at facebook.com/carol.sissom or by email at carolsissom@yahoo.com. The book, along with a personal letter, will be shipped immediately. Sissom will also sign an autograph if requested. She said she loves to hear from readers and enjoys talking to them.

Top, one of Sissom’s books, The LaSalle Street Murders, is about one of the most well-known unsolved mysteries in the state. | Bottom, Carol Sissom recently published The Clue at the Haunted Bridge of the Monon Trail about the murders of two Delphi girls. (Submitted photos)

Local restaurant managers report little change in business as Stage 5 takes effect

FEATURE

By Nancy Price

Last week, Indiana Gov. Eric Holcomb announced that the state would move to Stage 5 on Sept. 26, giving businesses, including restaurants, bars and nightclubs, the green light to open at full capacity for the first time since March.

Although most counties, including Johnson, were able to open at 100 percent, Marion remains at a 50 percent capacity. Lisa DeCamp, manager of Vito Provolone's on South Meridian Street is OK with that. "If the mayor said we could be at 100 percent we'd still have to have the tables 6 feet apart," said DeCamp. "Honestly, it's fine for us because we're going curbside (pickup) and we probably sell twice as much out the door that's making up for lack of (customers) inside. We're faring pretty well."

"As of this past Saturday, we went back to 100 percent," said Evan Dant, shift manager for Jockamo Upper Crust Pizza in Greenwood. The bar area may be a bit more challenging for guests to remember to distance socially, yet "we've done a good job of keeping people 6 feet apart as far as guidelines go," added Dant. "There are some people who still don't agree with the mask mandate," although "we stop those without a mask."

"I haven't noticed that much of a difference (since reopening at full capacity)," Dant said. "We've been lucky in that regard; we've stayed consistently busy. Pizza translates so well into carryout."

Yet, as cooler temperatures set in during fall, concerns remain over local businesses that have had the advantage the past several months to seat guest outside. "I think the winter months will prove to be more challenging for restaurants as people will not have the option to eat outside," said Renee Harlor, executive director for the Greater Beech Grove Chamber of Commerce. "There has been a lot said about the upcoming months resulting in an increase in cases. I think this may deter people from visiting businesses during those months."

Harlor encourages the Southside community to support local businesses still struggling during this time. "If you aren't going out as you once were because of COVID, consider shopping local by ordering take out, buying gift cards and shopping online," she said. "Our small business community is feeling the impact of this."

Another way to support locally owned businesses is to participate in this year's Shop Small Saturday, on Nov. 28, a day dedicated to supporting small businesses and communities across the county. "We are taking precautions and following all recommendations set forth by the health department," Harlor added.

PERSONNEL MATTERS

Shifting gears is the key to winning

By Mike Heffner

Over the years, I have often talked to my team about knowing when to shift gears. It's knowing when to downshift, then move back up through them quickly. In times like these, we are not only shifting gears, but we are shifting amidst some turbulent and unpredictable times. It's easy for a car to die if you are inexperienced in shifting, but the advice below can help you shift gears like a professional as we all navigate change.

We Must Shift Quicker - Getting things done faster and doing them well are more important than ever. Deadlines might be shorter, so decisions need to be quick and efficient. It's vital to be flexible and to prioritize the most important.

Understand Shift Happens - The most difficult thing in business is not knowing what is next. Every day seems to hit us with something new that we didn't expect. Just this morning, I walk into the office and the computers had an issue from an update over the weekend. We quickly canceled a meeting, made getting back online a priority and moved on. It's not beneficial to complain. Just shift gears and keep the car moving in the right direction.

Recognize when to Shift - We are all learning to cope with the unpredictable. Those that can't live in the gray can find themselves stuck. Set aside the ego and our need to know what is coming. Embrace the change. Take advantage of the opportunity by giving your team the ability to voice what needs to happen and allow them to make changes on the fly.

Shift with Purpose - Make your purpose a part of everything. A strong "why" helps with engagement and productivity. It's easier to get through challenges when what you are doing matters and you are making a difference. A resilient workforce has a strong sense of purpose and well-being. They are committed to what they are doing. Our employees are looking for fulfillment during a time when things are going astray.

Shifting Roles - Take note of the friction that others are experiencing as their roles change. Processes are different and what energized an employee in the past may have been altered. Many gained their energy by going face to face with people. In most cases, video is now the best it gets or a social distanced meeting behind a mask. Tasks, tools and how things get done are now new. Allow time to learn and fail as we all find our new normal.

Shift with Data - You can't always predict the future with data, but it will give you clues to what is happening. Data can help you make good decisions and possibly plan the next steps. Be careful of analysis paralysis though. Gather the data, decide and then run.

As we all shift gears, those that embrace the unpredictability - in the words of Taylor Swift, we'll have to "embrace the unpredictability of life instead of fearing it."

PEER TO PEER

A bird in the hand beats two in the bush

By Howard Hubler

As I look at the homestretch of this election all I think of is the old "KISS" method of logic; keep it simple, stupid. The key economic indicator is the Gross Domestic Product, up or down one or two points is kind of like a thermometer when you have a cold. If the economic environment is -2.5 percent, GDP, you feel like you have a fever, and nothing seems to go right. If the economic environment is +2.5 percent, you feel you're walking down a country lane on a beautiful spring day. All you smell are the sweet smells of grass and flowers.

According to Fox News, median household income rose to 6.8 percent, to $68,000 per household which is the highest ever recorded. Fox quotes the Census Bureau. Fox went on to say that poverty rates declined over 10 points; this was the lowest rates since they were first published in '59. With the help of government pandemic funds, average household cash in hand drove the poverty rate down slightly during COVID. Without it, the poverty rate would've surge to over 16 percent, according to Fox News.

The article went on to say that in three short years, Trump lifted 4 million people plus out of poverty, however in eight years Obama/Biden only lifted 787,000 people.

With this article I am generally talking to businessmen and women in central Indiana. Vice President Biden openly states he's going to raise taxes. Along with that will come a whole bunch of new regulations. This is part of the drill. If Trump remains in office, taxes will remain low and regulations will remain the lowest of modern times. Why was the economy so good? Those two reasons in a nutshell. Taxes and regulations are the driver to keep employees trying to hire people. Who are you going to vote for? To me I am first and foremost economically driven; your economic well-being pretty much drives the quality of life for you and your family. For this election, I say, "one in the hand beats two in the bush."

Nativity student wins Sertoma essay contest

Essay winner – Sariya Kitchen, a sixth-grade student at Nativity Catholic School, wrote the winning essay for Sertoma Club of East Indianapolis’ “What Freedom Means to Me” contest as a fifth grader. She was awarded $300 from Sertoma for the following award-winning essay:

S. Kitchen

‘What freedom means to me’
By Sariya Kitchen

To me, freedom is an important part of American culture. We have worked so hard toward freedom. We have equal rights; we can expect that our property will not be messed with and we can have self-defense. We can also believe what we want, decide who rules our country and have access to free education.

Equal rights are salient. As a female, I find it important that women are treated equally. When I grow up, I don’t want to be treated like property. Also, people that have pigmented skin should not be treated poorly. Thanks to equal rights, we don’t have to worry about that. People of different races are still people.

We are also treated fairly outside of equal rights. We are allowed to have a fair trial. We are also not allowed to be searched by the government unreasonably. The same goes for our property. Property cannot be taken away or searched without reason.

Freedom also means that we have self-defense in America. We have the right to own firearms. Obviously, you can’t just full out attack someone. Although, if someone tries to hurt you, you can defend yourself without getting in trouble. We shouldn’t need self-defense, but you never know.

Freedom of religion is also important. Personally, I’m Catholic but it does not define me. People should not be pushed away because of what they believe. In free countries, such as America, you won’t be excluded because of that. We also should not have to believe something because of where we are from.

Next is voting. We decide who controls us, not who stops us from doing all these things. During an election, we follow the idea of popular sovereignty. Popular sovereignty is when people of a city, state, or country decide who is in charge. We do this by counting votes. Whoever gets more wins the election. As an American citizen, I want my voice to be heard.

Another thing about being free is that everyone has access to free education. We need to go to school. Education is hard to get for some people. Having free education is also helpful financially. Some people can’t afford food, so free education is like a lifesaver.

Freedom is a wonderful thing from my point of view. We can decide what we believe, who keeps us under control, and we have equal rights. I am very fortunate to live in a free country.

Kacey's Pizza Shop is one of those rare, old-fashioned mom and pop diners displaying Coca-Cola memorabilia, old photos and articles about the town of Whiteland, a jukebox and even a meeting place for locals to cruise in with their collector cars on Sundays. Specialty pizzas include The Deli, with four meat toppings, onions and mozzarella; Veggie; Hawaiian BBQ Chicken; The Works; and The Superworks, which pretty much includes every topping the pizzeria offers. There's plenty of comfort pasta options like baked spaghetti; buttered spaghetti noodles; and spaghetti "by

Over the Garden Wall

A transitional narrative perfect to usher in our transition into autumn

MOVIE REVIEW

By Bradley Lane

The dominant understanding of animation is that the medium exists in two distinct forms based on the work's target audience. Children's entertainment is made by the likes of Cartoon Network and Disney, while adult animation mostly exists on network television, with a hard line between the two types (think Looney Tunes vs something like South Park). However, the last 10 years or so of animation has ushered in a new style of animation aimed not at a single demographic, but rather designed to be enjoyed equally by both young and old viewers alike. Certainly, plenty of children's films include jokes aimed at adults, however the type of animated work I am referencing here is created from the ground up with both children and adults in mind; enter Cartoon Network's 2014 miniseries Over the Garden Wall.

Set in a mysterious land only ever identified as the Unknown, half-brothers Wirt and Greg begin the series lost, with no memory of how they got there in the first place. Their time in the Unknown is spent meeting and helping locals all while trying to get back home. However, their journey home becomes threatened when they learn a mysterious force referred to as the Beast is reported to be stalking them, intent on trapping their souls in the Unknown.

While the main characters of the show are well written and relatable, the real star of Over the Garden Wall is the well-developed and thoughtful world the characters inhabit. Each location Wirt and Greg visit implies so much more information than it should be able to fit into each 12-minute episode through its intricate visuals and excellent writing. This creates a sense of longing that begs the viewer to stay in the folksy red, yellow and brown world of the Unknown for as long as possible, despite the show's writers having the foresight and restraint to understand when to end Wirt and Greg's journey as to maintain a satisfactory and holistic story.

On a surface level reading, younger audiences will find great lessons to take away from the show, like the importance of balancing self-confidence with the ability to ask for help from others. But a more nuanced interpretation from older viewers will be able to draw out messages about death, identity and most clearly, the loss of innocence in the transition from childhood to young adulthood.

Dense with references and allusions to great literary works by the likes of Shakespeare, Kierkegaard and Alighieri, Over the Garden Wall is so much more than just a cartoon. It is a universally enjoyable piece of fiction designed to enrich each and every person who takes the time to engage critically with its story. A viewing of the miniseries is an annual fall time tradition in my household and with its recent addition to HBO Max, I would invite you to do the same.

Weekly Devotion

Thus did Noah; according to all that God commanded him, so did he.

GENESIS 6:22

I read and hear about today's heroes. Among them are rock stars, movie stars, political stars, health care workers, etc. There are many whom the general public consider to be courageous and admirable. With some of that I can agree and with some I highly disagree. To me a hero is a person who stands up and does the right thing regardless of what anyone else does. A hero is the person who walks into a burning building to rescue a small child or a soldier who puts his life on the line for the sake of the safety of his comrades in arms. A hero is someone who, in spite of social or political or religious trends, gets the job done for the God he or she serves. Such a person was Noah. He stood mostly alone in the face of ridicule and mockery and evil men and women all around him. He built the ark.

As far as I know it had never rained in the earth before. The earth had never experienced a flood, so boats were not needed for survival's sake. Everything that Noah was saying about a flood was received with disbelief and laughter. His work was thought to be that of an eccentric old man. But he built the ark anyway.

It just could be that those in his own family wondered about his sanity as well. But he built the ark anyway and not just an ark, he built THE ARK that God told him to build. Destruction and death are coming, and he wanted to save himself and his family so, he built the ark. He was determined because he was sure it was the will of God and he was used to living in the will of God. For 120 years, he built the ark until the day that it was finished and then, he and his sons and his wife and their wives climbed aboard the ark along with all of the animals that God had sent to him and God closed the door behind him and then and it began to rain. Once the door was closed there was no opening it to allow anyone else in. God closed the door.

Today we build God's church. Today the door (Christ) is open to new members. One day God will close the door and that will be that. Those already aboard the great ship of Zion will be saved and those not aboard will be lost. To me, Noah is a hero and so are the ever so many who, like him, continue to build what many don't think is necessary. God bless them in that work. Most pastors are heroes.

God bless and go and have a great day.
