Explaining the difference between ghosts and spirits, and other paranormal jargon

HAUNTS & JAUNTS

By Rick Hinton

Paranormal jargon will not only put you in the know, but also help you to appear paranormal "savvy" when discussing the topic with friends and family, if that discussion ever comes about. As we inch toward the end of October, and Halloween, let's go over a few key terms:

Ghost/Spirit

Many feel these are one and the same, however, on my journey I now feel differently. I believe a ghost is a playback - a blast from the past - of someone, or something, that once existed. Think of it as a film: you can view it, but there is no interaction because, frankly, it's a movie. It's an imprint that has somehow been absorbed in a house or environment, and then for reasons unknown played back for your viewing pleasure. One example is the continued sightings of Union and Confederate soldiers on the Gettysburg battlefield. They're ghost. Spirits, however, are of a more intelligent nature - not a playback - and sightings reported in the majority of hauntings. They are in real time. They keep their once human personality aspect after passing (mischievous, foul, etc.) and generally are the ones who take great joy in messing with you. They become a member of the family whether you like it or not; unless you give them their walking papers.

Residual Haunting/Intelligent Haunting

This directly relates to the aforementioned ghosts and spirits. A residual haunting is a continuous film loop of the past containing images of a life once lived. This would involve a ghost. They usually go through the same motions over and over. Sit back and grab the popcorn. On the other hand, an intelligent haunting involves spirits that interact and make their presence known in more ways than one. They are most often upset about something you have done. Time is of no matter to them, and whether it's your family, or two families after yours, they're usually there for the long haul. And yes ... it's not unusual to have both – ghosts and spirits – in one location.

Paranormal/Parapsychology

The term Paranormal means just above or outside the normal order of things. This could also apply to shopping at Walmart during the late hours on a Saturday night. Parapsychology is a branch of science (a loose science anyway) delving into a dissection of psychic phenomena trying to arrive at absolutes. Ok. They had to come up with some term to call it....

Medium/Trance Medium

Many investigative groups use a medium. They are people professing the "gift" of the ability to communicate with spirits on various levels. They feel things and are also called sensitives. They can detect bad mojo in a location and work to get a read on the past. My wife, Laura is one of these. A trance medium is on the next level, acting as a transmitter for the voices of disembodied spirits. They also feel any pain dealt with in their past life. My wife, Laura has no desire to venture into this realm.

Orbs

Interesting circles of colored lights that appear in photographs. They are often caused by bugs, moisture or dust, so don't get too excited about them. Now, if you see them with your own eyes, that may be quite something else.

Ouija Board

Talk about some bad mojo! Don't mess with it; it's not just a child's game. You won't like the potential outcome.

Pink Ribbon Connection provides free supplies, educational events and emotional support for breast cancer survivors

By Nancy Price

A breast cancer diagnosis invokes many emotions: fear, shock and disbelief, to name a few. Then there are financial costs involved: surgery, chemo or radiation. Some women may need to take unpaid leave from work and pay for childcare while receiving treatment.

In addition, COVID has affected many families financially the past six months. There's additional worries: What if I lose my job? Will I have enough money to retire? My immune system is already compromised – what if I'm infected with COVID as well?

The stress and anxiety at that point is overwhelming, to say the least.

"This year we've helped more women than ever because there are so many families that have experienced a loss of income," said Dori Sparks-Unsworth, executive director of Pink Ribbon Connection. "Your fears are greater. Isolation is greater. Everything is heightened because of the environment that we're in."

A Southside Indianapolis-based nonprofit, Pink Ribbon Connection serves breast cancer survivors throughout the state by providing free supplies, including wigs, mastectomy bras, scarves, hats and toiletry items; one-to-one peer counseling; educational sessions and more.

"It is very expensive to survive cancer," said Jolie Patterson, office manager for Pink Ribbon Connection and a breast cancer survivor. "And we had really good insurance (when diagnosed). It is still very expensive. For two years, my maximum out of pocket was, like, $7,000 and I hit that pretty early on."

Pink Ribbon relies on private donors, sponsors and volunteers and hosts multiple fundraisers each year, from an annual fashion show and dine-to-donate events to purse bingo and a coat drive. (Gloves, hats and scarves are also collected and donated.)

underprivileged women going through treatment who have to stand on the street corner (during winter without coats) and take a bus to go get treatment," said Ashley Newsom, a Perry Township resident and breast cancer survivor. She also serves on the organization's board. "I live in this bubble with my car. I couldn't wrap my mind around that. So, one of my very favorite things that we do is that coat drive in November. Coats can be gently used."

A few times a year the office hosts "bras and breakfast" events, when women can enjoy a free to-go breakfast and pick up to three free mastectomy bras. The next event will be held Nov. 7, 9 a.m. to noon at 1139 Shelby St. Indianapolis, IN 46227, and is by appointment only. To schedule an appointment, call (317) 255-PINK (7465) or email info@pinkribbonconnection.org.

Emotional Support

As well as financial support, Pink Ribbon offers a peer counseling helpline to women for emotional support. "We can connect them with a seasoned survivor who's already been through what that patient is going through and that seems to make an enormous difference with emotional support, that women go, 'OK, I've got somebody I can call when I'm freaking out," said Sparks-Unsworth. "When they call, we match them with a survivor who's a similar age, similar martial status, lives in the (same) region. Many times, it's a lifelong friendship. It's been really beneficial to patients who've been newly diagnosed."

In addition to receiving monthly newsletters, educational seminars are offered on a variety of topics related to breast cancer, such as chemo, nutrition, fitness and stress. The next seminar, "Oncology Updates in the Treatment of Breast Cancer" will be presented by Dr. Ruemu Birhiray, oncology specialist and held via Zoom Oct. 29 from 5:30-7 p.m. Guests may contact the office at (317) 255-PINK (7465) or email info@pinkribbonconnection.org. The Meeting ID is: 872 883 5726, and the password is 746574.

Newsom, who has a genetic history of breast cancer on both sides of her family, highly encourages women to get yearly mammograms. She began getting mammograms at age 38 and was diagnosed with breast cancer at age 40. For women who put off mammograms because they fear pain, Newsom explained that it only hurts for a few seconds.

Sparks-Unsworth also advocates monthly self-examinations in the shower and advises that women consistently choose the first week after their period to do them, as breasts are not as tender or lumpy during this time as they may be during menstruation.

Johnson County Public Library offers virtual storytimes for kids ages 5 and under Virtual storytime - Johnson County Public Library will offer "Zoom into Storytime," virtual storytimes for kids ages 5 and under. During storytime at the library children use fun props that help them engage in early literacy activities. The library will now make those items, a scarf, a shaker egg, rhythm sticks and bubble solution available in a storytime kit. Children's Services Manager Chris Kolderup said, "Storytimes promote early literacy and help children learn skills to get ready for school and life. Not being able to offer in-person storytime has been a concern. Now that we are offering storytimes live via Zoom, we wanted the experience to come alive for children participating at home. By giving families the kits, it is a chance for families to interact and participate with the librarians onscreen and play when storytime is over!" JCPL will present 14 virtual storytimes in September. The programs are free and preregistration for "Zoom into Storytime" is required on the JCPL website, PageAfterPage.org. Storytime kits are available at the branches after registration (while supplies last).

Franklin Township sisters and their friend publish book of s'mores

FEATURE

By Nancy Price

For many of us, the fall season often stirs up memories of huddling around the campfire with friends and family while roasting hot dogs and marshmallows and listening to scary urban legend stories.

Three Southside natives have created a way to relive that nostalgia – by publishing a book of s'more recipes. Franklin Township sisters Alena VanArendonk, Laura VanArendonk Baugh and their friend Julie Bickel recently published S'moregasbord: 101 Novel S'more Recipes to Try.

"Campfires and firepits are an easy way to be together while also providing an opportunity for social distance," said Bickel. "Toast a marshmallow and back up a few feet to let someone else have a turn. It's a great way to hang out while also being safe."

"And let's face it; if there was a year for carbs, it's 2020," added VanArendonk Baugh. "Let's embrace the silver lining."

For the past few years, the authors experimented with various types of food combinations to create their own s'more recipes. "When we found a variation we really liked, we'd joke, 'This is so good, we should write a cookbook!" VanArendonk recalled. "This summer, since all our social activities had to held outdoors due to the pandemic, we decided that the time was right to share our s'mores innovations with the rest of the world."

"Some of the 'research', if you could call it that, involved brainstorming ideas and throwing out flavor combinations with friends – a bit like throwing wet spaghetti on the wall and seeing what stuck," Bickel added. "Some of the ideas didn't really pan out. We tried to make a couple of 'adult' s'mores where we added whiskey or brandy to the marshmallow. That may have been a tasty notion, but these ended up dissolving the marshmallows into puddles of goo!"

Ingredients that did work, to the amazement of the authors, included Stilton cheese, jalapeno jelly, balsamic vinegar, maple syrup and raspberries. "For me, the most surprising combination was a s'more made with potato chips and chocolate-dipped bacon," said VanArendonk. "I don't even care for potato chips normally, but that recipe really brings out the sweet-salty contrast."

Paperback books are available for purchase from $17-20 at Amazon, Barnes & Noble or independent bookstores. Ebooks are also available at Amazon and temporarily in a PDF format at lauravanarendonkbaugh.com/ shop/smoregasbord. "It' a great gift, with beautiful photos and a fun theme. And it's got chocolate (and s'mores without chocolate, for my allergic friends," said VanArendonk Baugh.

What does a state legislator do?

This season brings a new addition to many yards and streets: campaign signs. State legislators, state representatives and state senators make up a lot of those signs sprouting up everywhere.

What exactly does a state legislator do? Representatives are able to propose legislation and are required to vote on the legislation that others propose. Each individual representative helps to make policy for the entire state. Representatives are elected by the people to represent their district's unique interest during statewide decisionmaking. Constituent services are also a large portion of the job. If you need help navigating complex government processes, you may contact your representative for help. Representatives can also recognize the achievements of those in their districts and the community as a whole and can propose resolutions to honor such achievements.

There were over 40 bills introduced in the 2020 General Assembly that involved education. Legislators understand issues involving healthcare and public health since more than 50 health-related bills were introduced in the 2020 session. While it can be tempting to vote for candidates based on one issue, it is important to keep in mind all of the various issues that a legislator will have to consider in the General Assembly and their experience and ability to collaborate with fellow legislators. Over 400 pieces of legislation were considered in the short session in 2020.

As we approach this election, please prepare for your vote by researching your entire ballot. (You can see who is on your ballot at IndianaVoters.com.) Research the candidates whose names you see on the campaign signs sprouting up in yards near you. Listen to what they say they stand for, research what experience and qualifications they bring to do the work.

Research candidates before making a choice

As election day nears, I hope people will take the time to research the candidates prior to making their selections. We need civil servants who have common sense, clear platform goals and the desire and ability to work with others in order to find the best solutions for the myriad of challenges our state is facing. In this divisive environment, I fear that voters will focus on the "R" or "D" after the names, rather than learning about those individuals and what they want to accomplish if elected. I live in House District 93, which has historically been Republican. This year we have two very different options for our representative. The Republican candidate has few articulated views other than those about hot button issues such as guns and abortion. His support is largely from national organizations whose focus is abortion or guns. In contrast, his opponent, Angela Elliott, has a well-established platform, a problem-solving mindset and a willingness and desire to work with constituents and fellow legislators. Please do not only consider party when you are casting your vote. Take the time to learn about the candidates and their messages. Use resources such as the candidates' campaign websites, social media, Vote 411 and Ballotpedia.

Ways to enjoy a safe and happy Halloween during COVID-19

Halloween is a fun and exciting time for kids. However, with risks of COVID-19 infection this year, many families may choose to play it safe and stay home.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) recommends the following low-risk activities to enjoy a safe and fun Halloween:

- Carving, decorating and displaying pumpkins with members of your household.
- Carving or decorating pumpkins outside, at a safe distance, with neighbors or friends.
- Decorating your house, apartment or living space.
- Doing a Halloween scavenger hunt where children are given lists of Halloweenthemed things to look for while they walk outdoors from house to house admiring Halloween decorations at a distance.
- Participating in a virtual Halloween costume contest.
- Hosting a Halloween movie night with household members.

 Hosting a scavenger hunt-style trick-ortreat search with your household members in or around your home rather than going house to house.

For moderate-risk activities:

- Participating in one-way trick-or-treating where individually wrapped goodie bags are lined up for families to grab and go while continuing to social distance (such as at the end of a driveway or at the edge of a yard)
- If you are preparing goodie bags, wash your hands with soap and water for at least 20 second before and after preparing the bags.
- Having a small group, outdoor, open-air costume parade where people are distanced more than 6 feet apart.
- Attending a costume party held outdoors where protective masks are used and people can remain more than 6 feet apart.
 - A costume mask (such as for Halloween) is not a substitute for a cloth mask. A costume mask should not be used unless it is made of two or more layers of breathable fabric that covers the mouth and nose and doesn't leave gaps around the face.

Top 10 differences between my COIVD experience and President Trump's

By Torry Stiles

- 10. Immediate worldwide coverage of Trump's symptoms, prognosis and treatment plan. For me: what's a treatment plan?
- "The president is facing a two-week quarantine period." "Well, Torry, if nothing serious happens you go back to work on Monday."
- 8. Apparently, I'm more essential than the president of the United States.
- Masked Secret Service men drive him around in the limo. I was barred from riding a bus.

- His food was better and far less likely to have been delivered by somebody with orders to leave it on the porch and take a picture of it.
- 5. My case of the 'rona had absolutely no effect on the stock market.
- 4. Mike Pence wasn't standing outside my door waiting for updates.
- 3. Immediate treatment, antibiotics and oxygen at Walter Reed for him while I got a single nurse at the clinic telling me to go home, shut the door and take some aspirin if needed.
- 2. 24-hour speculation of where Trump got his versus a five-minute phone survey asking me if I knew who gave me mine.
- 1. The entire Democratic party wasn't wishing I got worse.

Aspire Economic Development + Chamber Alliance moves to new Greenwood location

FEATURE

By Nancy Price

Aspire Economic Development + Chamber Alliance has a new place to call home.

The new office at 1499 Windhorst Way, Ste. 160, Greenwood, IN 46143, is housed in a grey two-story office building in the South Park business center near exit 99 and I-65. The location includes a training room, small conference room, café and private coaching office. In addition, the meeting space is equipped with digital and audio technology for both inperson and virtual attendees, according to Aspire Economic Development + Chamber Alliance President and CEO Christian Maslowski.

"Aspire Economic Development + Chamber Alliance was formed at the beginning of this year to create a stronger, more strategically aligned engine to drive economic growth and business success in Johnson County and southern Indy," he said. "We needed a new space to accommodate our staff talent and resources. And, in spite of the pandemic, we believe in-person meeting space will remain a long-term need, especially as more companies reduce the size of their own offices. The new space is designed to safety accommodate companies needing a professional space to meet."

"The new office maximizes returns for member investors because they have complimentary access to these spaces during regular business hours," Maslowski continued. "Companies can host their training sessions, workshops, interviews, team meetings, strategic planning sessions and more."

Aspire Economic Development + Chamber Alliance will be open from Monday through Thursday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Friday from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

To make a reservation, call (317) 537-0037 or email info@Aspire-JohnsonCounty.com.

"We welcome companies to visit the office during business hours to explore the space and meet the team,"

Maslowski said.

Pulse Prophetic piece of Japanese horror remains as impactful as ever

MOVIE REVIEW

By Bradley Lane

Having been a film fan on the internet, I was aware there was a Japanese horror craze in the early to mid-2000s both in Japan and abroad, but I had yet to dive into the j-horror scene for myself. Many of these films did so well in fact, I was familiar with their American remakes before I had ever learned they were based on Japanese films at all, like 2002's The Ring or 2004's The Grudge. However, this year with an ambitiously lengthy horror watchlist and October upon us, I decided to start my jhorror education with a foundational work of the movement, 2001's Pulse directed by Kiyoshi Kurosawa. What I discovered was a film that not only stood the test of time but spoke past the time in which it was created in an effort to warn us about preciously the moment we find ourselves in now.

The film begins with a group of friends being blindsided by the tragic suicide of one of their own, an event that leaves them all shocked and confused. This only gets worse as they discover a mysterious ghostly image of their friend on a disc he was working on before his death. Simultaneously, an economics student begins to have his new internet connectivity haunted by similarly ghostly entities. Separately they seek to investigate and make sense of the digital horrors sent to haunt them.

What stands out most when watching Pulse is just how similar it is to modern horror in America. The scenes with violent imagery and ghosts are certainly scary, but the real horror of the film comes from real world fears of isolation and loneliness. The film posits that technology and modern life only serve to further disconnect people rather than to function as designed and bring people together. The film states explicitly that the ghosts in the story do not seek to kill their targets, but rather that, "they'll try to make people immortal, by quietly trapping them in their own loneliness.

This fear of the modern world being designed to draw people further apart has been explored cinematically by masters like Ozu and Antonioni, but not until Pulse was the messaging focused tightly and clearly enough to be so immediately terrifying. Ari Aster's 2019 film Midsommar utilizes a similar effect by demonstrating how the main character becomes alienated by the modern world to the point she excuses eugenics, suicide pacts and ritualistic murder just to feel as though she belongs to a supporting community. This serves as a perfect continuation to the horrific themes offered by Pulse in a time where it only is becoming more and more poignant.

The ghosts in Pulse are certainly unnerving, but like all great horror films, the real horror exists in the real world outside of the film, in the inescapable mundane horror of a world slowly pulling each of us further away from one another. Pulse is available to stream for free on Tubi.
