Highlights include a climbing cube and sensory panels for toddlers, climbing wall with elevated landings, a double pipe slide, a custom-designed hillside climbing net, urban porch swings, outdoor games and fitness equipment.

FOR THE RECORD

CORRECTION

Oops...

In our cover story for last week's issue titled "Working within the system – Fountain Square woman helps migrant children connect with local foster families," The Southside Times erroneously printed two inaccuracies. The first paragraph states: We've all seen the news broadcasts and film footage of children in detention centers because their parents, who were seeking asylum in the United States, brought them into the country illegally. These children have been removed from their parents, and are often moved far away, while their parents are either detained or deported. The information does not apply to the vast majority of the children in Bethany's Transitional Foster Care Program. The overwhelming majority of children in the Transitional Foster Care Program are actual unaccompanied minors without parents, arriving at the border alone by means of a caravan or smuggler. Also, the link in the sidebar titled, "How to become a foster parent," (Bethany. org/help-a-child/ foster-care/us-foster-care) is incorrect as it directs people to domestic foster care rather than transitional foster care, which are two very different programs. The correct link is bethany.org/help-a-child/ foster-care/transitional-foster-care.

We regret the errors.

Retired Garfield Park firefighter gives back with Indianapolis Fire Buffs

By Stephanie Dolan

Formed in 1963, the Indianapolis Fire Buffs is a volunteer organization dedicated to providing rehab to firefighters and public safety officials in Marion County. Marc Parton, 50, is the vice president of the organization, and is dedicated to providing these resources to firefighters and other public safety officers as he himself used to be one of them.

"I used to be a volunteer fireman with the Wayne Township Fire Department on the west side," the Garfield Park resident said. "They went from volunteers to combination volunteer and paid to totally paid in 2001. They did away with all their volunteers. There was nothing really for us to do unless we wanted to go further out away from where we lived into small communities to volunteer."

A friend of Parton's, who was also a volunteer in the same department, said there was a volunteer unit that does rehab services for IFD.

"We made plans to go to a meeting together, and joined at the same time," Parton said. "Funny enough, half the people there were from the Wayne Township Fire Department. I knew a lot of them."

Dedicated to serving, rain or shine

The Indianapolis Fire Buffs respond to any calls that are long and enduring or extremely hot or cold.

"We respond out and provide the firefighters with Gatorade, water, coffee, hot chocolate and healthy snacks like granola and fruit bars," Parton said. "We sneak a few Snickers here and there, but it's mainly geared toward the healthier side. We also respond out to the IMPD if they're out with a barricaded subject, or if they're out with a silver or amber alert. They're going to be out there for hours, so we respond and provide them the same service as well."

"The Buffs operate four Rehab Support Units (RSU's)," Fire Buffs president Byron Jacobs said. "Three of these units are furnished by the IFD, as well as one from Wayne Township Fire Department. These units are maintained by both IFD and Wayne Township. IFD supplies the fuel for the units."

The Buffs are supported by Salvation Army Disaster Service Unit.

"They supply most of the items we use," Jacobs said. "Without the help of the Salvation Army, and IFD and Wayne Township, it would be difficult for us to provide this service."

The Buffs are made up of former firefighters, and citizens who want to make a difference.

"We are always looking for new members," Jacobs said. "An application can be downloaded from our website, and we have monthly meetings. Officers can be contacted via the website if you have questions or are interested in joining. The Buffs are supported by IFD, and IEMS, Salvation Army, as well as donations from private citizens and corporations as well as a yearly raffle."

"It means everything to me to be able to give back like this," Parton said.

An early calling

Parton said that IFD came to his third-grade classroom and did a fire safety class.

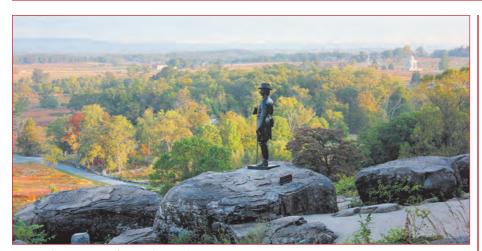

"Later, when I was 11, I got hit by a car in my neighborhood and broke my back and had some other injuries. IFD responded and took care of me. When I came of age, and was 15 or 16, I really wanted to be involved in the fire department."

At that time, Wayne Township offered a cadet program.

"When I was 16, my parents signed off, and I joined the cadet program," Parton said. "When I turned 18, I applied to the department and they accepted me as a full member. I ultimately became a lieutenant, but I had to eventually take a medical retirement because of I was diagnosed with muscular dystrophy. Once I was deemed unable to work, I needed something to keep my mind busy more or less. That's about when my friend told me about Indy Fire Buffs."

That diagnosis came in 2006, and Parton is still going strong with the Fire Buffs.

Smells of the Battle of Gettysburg:

death, blood, despair and agony

HAUNTS & JAUNTS

By Rick Hinton

One imagines vacation as a time of relaxation, taking it easy and sleeping in. Our Gettysburg vacations seem to be a different animal. The alarm clock goes off at 5 a.m., coffee is gathered (perhaps a cigar) and it's off to Little Round Top. We plant ourselves on the upper veranda of the 12th & 44th New York Infantry monument and take in sunrise over the valley below, watching the sun fill in the shadows, early morning joggers making their way up the incline and on high alert for spectral soldiers from another day and age. This has become Al Hunter's routine for over 20 years and now has become ours.

Gettysburg sits in a palette of rolling hills and meadows dotted with stark white monuments, multitudes of cannons waiting for an enemy long gone, and staggered post and rail fences that line the roads and drives. A sense of reverence hangs thickly over the grounds regardless of vehicle traffic, McDonald's, tourist offerings and stoplights. It's a time stamp whose past is still very much aligned with the present. Mid-week is a good time to visit the battlefield before the weekend influx of tourists and countless tour buses. We pretty much had the place to ourselves and took advantage of that luxury. However, one visit (as we discovered in 2017, and Al coming to realize after two decades of visits) won't cut it. There are never enough hours in the day, or days in the week, to take it all in; or try to come to grips on just what happened there 156 years ago.

I have come to rely on Al's insight and historical perspectives on the battle at Gettysburg that July of 1863. He introduced Laura and me to the event in 2017 ... a glimpse of history unfolding under his tutelage, revealing the sense of urgency (and uncertainty) of battle, those in charge of leading the troops, the horrible aftermath and secrets and stories carried over to this day. Prior to our first trip, and after, I read extensively on the battle, yet, standing on the very grounds of where it had occurred, realized I'd never really gotten it. I believe you physically have to be there to get it! Al and Rhonda Hunter, along with the accompanying Scooby Gang, traversed hill, valley, park roads, monuments and isolated points along the three-day battle in search of a sense of revelation that we could call our own. And as usual, Al had a few surprises up his sleeve. ...

Laura and I did not come hunting ghosts, but to hunt history. The general feeling among all of the Scooby Gang was, that if "they" did make an appearance, we would welcome them into the club. We did, however, keep our eyes open to the possibility because Gettysburg is a town of "stories." Laura - sensitive and often uncomfortable with her abilities - had her moments during our first visit. On Cemetery Ridge - on the third (and last) day of battle, culminating with the infamous Pickett's Charge - Laura walked into a "fog" of body odor. She could back out of it and subsequently return into the cloud at will. In addition to this odor she claimed she smelled death, blood, despair, agony. Three days of battle ... no bathing ... 90-degree heat ... sudden and agonizing death? This was the subtle ending of our first visit.

The second visit to Gettysburg was a different experience....

Advice about posting on social media if you're buying or selling a home

FEATURE

By Dawn Whalen, Whalen Realty Group

Be aware of public settings and posts when you're in the process of buying or selling a property. On more than one occasion, a seller's or prospective buyer's post has terminated a sale or put it into limbo before closing. Below are a few stories our agency has seen firsthand.

Social media research

With access to so much information online, it's common for buyers and sellers to research each other while going through the homebuying process. For these reasons, we highly discourage buyers from posting statements about how much they may love a property because it could negatively impact negotiations.

Don't let kids share pictures of the house

We had a buyer back out of a sale because the seller's children posted themselves throwing furniture out of windows onto the roof, then showed pictures of a giant stain on the carpet that was covered with furniture during the showings.

Be careful when friends try to negotiate directly

We had a client who shared their home's listing on their Facebook page and a friend ended up buying it. It may seem easy to negotiate with a friend, but an agent can serve as a buffer, so no one feels awkward asking for more money, changes and updates.

Keep photos to yourself

We had a client whose home was being shown hours after it was listed, and the potential buyer posted pictures on social media. The potential buyer was friends with the seller's boss and the seller hadn't yet told their boss they were planning to move out of state, and it caused the seller to disclose information to their boss before they intended.

The best piece of advice is to keep posts about the homebuying or selling process vague or don't post about it at all until after closing. Make your first post about buying or selling a home about the closing when it's a done deal.

Bollywood Beats artists enthrall attendees at India Day Celebrations

By Balbir Singh

Bollywood Beats of Beech Grove recently participated in India Independence Day celebrations, jointly hosted by India Association of Indianapolis and Indianapolis Hyderabad Sister City at Monument Circle in downtown Indianapolis. Indianapolis Mayor Joe Hogsett was the chief guest and also participated in the India Parade. Mayor Hogsett not only participated in the India Parade, but he also interacted with the Indian-American community members and provided an opportunity for photos with them. Speaking on the occasion, IAI president Ramu Chinthala said, "India is now one country and one constitution. Bharat Maata ki Jai."

Mayor Joe Hogsett wished "Happy India Day." "I love celebrating this day," he said. "I love the parade, I love the energy. We come together today to celebrate who we are and what we are. We are one city. Indianapolis welcomes everyone. It is a city that is more international, more open ... more cosmopolitan and that is why you are here. We want to enjoy the city that celebrates all cultures ... It is so wonderful at this parade on this day. It is so appropriate for them that we invest today to provide a better future. We come together."

Cultural performances, Indian cuisine and live music enriched the celebrations.

A recent fitness trend perfect for seniors

By Nancy Price

According to family doctor.org, seniors age 65 and older should get at least two-and-a-half hours of moderate aerobic exercise every week, which is 30 minutes most days of the week. If you're not a fan of the gym or bored with walking, why not try pickleball?

Pickleball is a paddle sport, combining elements of tennis, badminton and ping-pong. An indoor or outdoor game, pickleball was created for all ages and skill levels. The rules are simple, and the game is easy for beginners to learn, but can develop into a quick, fast-paced, competitive game for experienced players. Interested? Read more in the feature below.

Pickleball: a fun and affordable option for people of all ages

FEATURE

By Angela Morefield

The city of Greenwood has introduced the community to pickleball, currently one of the fastest growing sports in the USA.

What is pickleball, you might ask?

Ron West and his wife, Gina, have been playing pickleball for 18 months. Pickleball was originally invented in the mid-1960s as a children's backyard game. Pickleball is similar to tennis; both sports use a net and participants play on a hard surface: asphalt, concrete or a wooden gym floor. In pickleball a paddle is used with a combined dimension of 24 inches, so the paddle can be 16 inches long and 8 inches wide or a maximum of 17 inches long and 7 inches wide. The ball is hard and plastic, with anywhere from 24 to 40 holes in it. It's much like a whiffle ball, and a little bigger than a baseball.

The pickleball court is 44 feet long and 20 feet wide, with a center line between the right and left courts on each side of the net. There is a space called the "non volley zone," which is an area of 7 feet on either side of the net. One player's side can only score points when serving and most games are played until one of the teams reaches 11 points. In order to win, you need to win by two points.

When playing pickleball, both men and women can be competitive due to the smaller court size, the ball construction and the non-volley zone. "Don't be misled by the smaller court size; you can get a very good workout depending on the effort you exert and your competition," West said. Most pickleball players play in doubles, with a combination of four players, and can be all women, all men or mixed. Playing doubles can be a social activity, in which players get to know each other and develop friendships.

"I play at Greenwood Community Center indoors and Craig Park out of doors," West said. "The city of Greenwood is committed to making Greenwood a major pickleball venue and the park department staff do an amazing job. The people who play at these facilities are great and accommodating to new and beginner players."

Pickleball is fun and affordable, making it an option for people of all ages. The game is also quick, making it a convenient way to get in some exercise. "I have lost over 20 pounds and have more energy," West said. "When I am playing pickleball I feel like I am 20 years old again, however, I must admit that the next day everything on me aches."

For information about pickleball classes, please call the Greenwood Community Center at (317) 881-4545 or go to greenwood. in.gov/division/blocks.php?structureid=23.

Managing medications and staying healthy

By CarDon & Associates

Aspirin, eye drops for glaucoma, antibiotic capsules and vitamin pills. What do they call have in common? Actually, they're all drugs. Chances are if you're over the age of 65 you're taking one or more medications. Seniors take more prescription and over-the-counter medications than any other age group. So, let's make sure we're taking our medications and prescriptions properly and safely!

The Facts:

A medicine or "drug" is any substance used to treat a disease or improve health. Medications can be prescribed by a doctor and filled by a pharmacist. Or you can buy over-the-counter medications without a prescription. Sometimes, if your parent or loved one has several illnesses, medication management often seems like a full-time job.

Yes, there can be side effects. And they can often be serious. While medications keep older people healthy, if they aren't taken correctly or are combined with other prescription or nonprescription medicines or alcohol, a person could be in real danger.

The Doctor's Role:

At least once a year, schedule an appointment with your loved one's primary care physician. Be sure to bring along a bag filled with all the medications your parent takes. While you're at the office, here are a few things to keep in mind.

- Review the instructions for taking the prescriptions
- Ask if a generic equivalent of the drug is available
- Ask if it's OM for them to drink alcohol while on the medication

- Write down all the information
- Don't hesitate to call the doctor with questions

The Pharmacist's Role:

The pharmacist is your friend! They can help you and your loved one learn how to take prescribed medications, understand how they will improve his or her health and recognize possible side effects! Things to keep in mind:

- Get all of your loved one's prescriptions filled at the same pharmacy
- The pharmacist can answer questions about food and drug interactions
- · Ask about possible side effects
- Ask when and how prescriptions should be taken
- Take advantage of the pharmacy's online refill option and email alerts

LEFTOVER OR OUTDATED MEDICATIONS? Take the right steps to dispose of them safely. Don't flush unused prescription drugs down the toilet or sink unless the label on the medicine says you should. You can also contact your city or county government to find out if your community has a program for collecting and disposing unused medications. If there's no program like that, visit the Food & Drug Administration website for tips.

MAKE THE MOST OF YOUR MEDICINES! It's time to develop a game plan for taking medications every day. Have an extra egg carton? Use it to organize a day's worth of medications. You can also purchase pill organizers while you're at the pharmacy. Love watching TV? Schedule your parent's medications around their favorite show or at mealtime.

WE'RE HERE TO HELP. Remember, you're not alone. CarDon experts are here to help you with any medication and prescription question you have. Visit Cardon. us today!

CarDon & Associates' Rachel Burianek recognized at national event

By Sam Watermeier

Rachel Burianek, a Certified Nursing Assistant (CNA) at Aspen Trace Senior

Living in Greenwood, is this year's recipient of the Assisted Living Caregiver of the Year Award. Rachel received this prestigious recognition during the 25th Annual "Key to Quality" Awards Banquet recently held in Little Rock, AR.

Aspen Trace administration provided remarkable justification for Rachel to receive this award in their nomination narrative: "Rachel is a leader on the floor and an example for the other aides to follow. She is known around the assisted living for her positivity, thoroughness, patience with care and empathy for the residents. Rachel has proven over and over again that she is not only one of the best CNAs in Indiana, but in the country."

The Assisted Living Caregiver of the Year Award is given to a CNA or direct caregiver in an assisted living care setting that must possess all the qualities represented by the other distinguished award categories, as this is considered the top honor in residential care recognition.

Rachel was one of 23 CNAs and other long-term care professionals recognized during the "Key to Quality" Awards Banquet. This seminal event is the proverbial icing on the cake of NAHCA's annual conference known as CNA Fest.

CNA Fest brings together CNAs from across the country. This year, the conference exceeded 250 registrants from 29 different states. This two-day event combines education, networking and recognition for the noble humanitarians that serve our nation's frail and elder citizens.

When you're in the mood for a treat, try the benefits of dark chocolate

By ComForCare Home Care - South Indy

With the holiday season upon is, it would be so tempting to check our kid's Halloween stash and ask them to share. But wait! Is consuming all of those gooey, rich treats really the best for us? No, it is not. So, what's a person to do? Lean toward an alternative for satisfying your sweet tooth and find candy that is made with dark chocolate.

Recent evidence suggests that consuming dark chocolate in moderation may have health benefits!

- 1. Lowers blood pressure
- 2. Promotes heart health
- 3. Helps cholesterol levels
- 4. Improves brain function
- 5. Boosts mood
- 6. Reduces stress
- 7. Fosters romance
- 8. Improves blood sugar metabolism
- 9. Leads to better skin
- 10. Can help control weight

Due to the high levels of fat and added sugar, you should consume dark chocolate in moderation, no more than one ounce per day. One ounce is about half of a typical-size candy bar.

There are very many recognizable brandname chocolate companies that make the dark chocolate, so there are many options to chose from.

Tips for indulging in chocolate

- Eat chocolate slowly and mindfully.
- Make chocolate a small part of a healthy diet.
- Eat dark chocolate with at least 60 percent cacao.
- Avoid milk chocolate, white chocolate and filled chocolates.
- · Make hot chocolate using unsweetened cocoa, non-fat milk and little sugar.

And if your find yourself in a difficult position, without any self-control, get yourself an accountability buddy. Whether it be your spouse, sibling, neighbor or grandkid, have them keep you accountable for the type of chocolate you take in. Make a date to enjoy that dark chocolate, together. And when done, have someone else wrap up your leftover treat – to be set aside for the next time.

Activities, maintenance care and seminars available to Brookhaven residents

By the staff of Brookhaven at County Line Road

A great deal of effort goes into identifying the needs and desires of senior citizens

- especially in regard to senior living. Herman & Kittle Properties conducted ample research on the matter and Brookhaven at County Line Road has put that research into action. Brookhaven offers two types of programs: Section 42 Affordable Housing Program and Market Rate for those who do not qualify under Section 42 tax credit guidelines. Their facilities provide one- and two-bedroom apartments equipped with a refrigerator, stove, dishwasher, garbage disposal, washer/dryer connections, ceiling fans and spacious closets with laundry amenities available on site.

A major concern of many people looking for senior housing opportunities is what kind of activities are available. Brookhaven's resident activities director regularly schedules events and outings that include weekly bus transportation to the grocery store. They also have a variety of specialty rooms on site catering to various individual tastes community and media rooms, a library with computers, a non-denominational chapel, exercise and billiard rooms and even a beauty salon. Activities include pitch-in dinners, game nights, coffee and donuts, casino trips and more!

Another important aspect of senior living is maintenance. Brookhaven's staff is responsible for repairs and servicing and also ensures that sidewalks and driveways are cleared in the winter months. In the spring, summer and fall, staff members maintain the lawn and flowers. A walking trail surrounding a pond on the premises offers residents exercise or a chance to walk the dog - since Brookhaven is pet friendly.

Additionally, Brookhaven works to keep seniors healthy and savvy by offering various seminars such as tax preparation, investments, insurance in-home health care, health and wellness and blood pressure checks. Walgreens delivers prescriptions to eliminate the hassle.

For more information, visit the office or call (317) 887-2822. At the time of application, a $35 fee and a $100 hold fee will secure your apartment home. The hold fee is applied to the first month's rent and there are various options for security deposits based on credit scores.

Four types of funeral ceremonies

By Paul St.Pierre, CFSP, President Wilson St.Pierre Funeral Service & Crematory

Planning a funeral involves many personal decisions concerning how you or your loved one wish to be laid to rest. We often hear questions from the Indianapolis, Greenwood and Pendleton families we serve about the major differences between the funeral options we offer and what will fit best for their wishes, traditions, preferences and budget. The team at Wilson St. Pierre Funeral Service & Crematory is always ready with the answers to those questions, and we can walk you through each decision. So, what are some of the most common questions we hear when it comes time to plan a service? Here are a few:

What is a graveside service?

A graveside service is a service held at the site of burial. It is typically a brief service where family and friends can say their final goodbyes. In most cases, the casket or urn is present. Friends and family gather at the site, a eulogy is delivered and the service is concluded with a committal and a prayer said over the grave. The term committal refers to the body of the deceased being entrusted to the ground. Graveside services are most often held following a funeral service.

What is a funeral service?

At a funeral service the body is present, and the service is typically held soon after death occurs. Generally, the funeral service is held in a church setting or funeral home, but services may also be held in the home or a place that holds special meaning. During the service, clergy, family and friends may choose to speak about the deceased and the life that was lived. Commemorating the loved one is also an important part of the funeral service. Memory tables, photo boards, tribute videos, special music and personal clothing can be used to communicate the unique personality of the loved one in a dignified way.

What is a memorial service?

A memorial service is a service where there are no casketed remains, but in some cases, an urn may be present. Memorial services are usually held in the funeral home or church but can also be arranged at any location the family chooses. Because the body of the loved one is not present, a memorial service does not need to be held within several days of the death and can be delayed to meet the needs of the family. Like a funeral service, a memorial service presents many opportunities to commemorate the loved one through the use of personalization options, flowers, or vehicles.

What is scattering?

Scattering refers to a meaningful act of disposing the cremated remains in such a way that it can represent a permanent oneness with an important place. Scattering in a river, lake, at sea, over mountains, farms and even golf courses are not uncommon - provided a permit can be secured and that local and state laws are followed. Wilson St. Pierre Funeral Service & Crematory can help you coordinate the scattering and advise you of any local ordinances prohibiting scattering. Many cemeteries offer "scattering gardens" with the added benefit of memorialization. A scattering urn is especially designed to hold the cremated remains until the scattering ceremony, or it can be used as a memento or keepsake afterwards. Be sure to consult your clergy as some religions will permit cremation but not allow scattering.

Whether you are planning for an immediate need now or preplanning for the future, know that we are always here to answer your questions. If you do not find your answers here or on our website, you can always reach out to us for the help and answers you need.

October is National Pet CBD Month

Most of us have already heard that CBD products can help people with symptoms of pain, anxiety, depression and lowering blood pressure. Did you know CBD can also help pets with these same issues?

"A farmer came in one day and said he and his dog were old and the dog had arthritis so bad he couldn't walk," said Ron Drake, co-owner of CBD Health of Indiana. "I sold the product for his dog. The man came back (later) and said his dog could jump back into the pickup truck. "The man had tears in his eyes. He gave me a hug and said, 'I didn't know if this was for real or not."

One of the easiest ways to provide pets with the beneficial properties of CBD is with oil tinctures or treats made with CBD oil. Tinctures can be easily added to food or homemade treat recipes or given orally. Soft chews and crunchy treats are easy, portable and convenient.

Before giving a CBD product to your pet, make sure that products are lab tested to be THC-free and use only pet-friendly ingredients. Weight and overall quality of life are factors that will determine the proper CBD serving for dogs and cats. Results can vary from pet to pet. Try giving your pet a small amount each day and monitor its reaction over the course of a few weeks. Gradually increase the serving if needed. #National-PetCBDMonth.

Why fleas may infect your pet this fall

DR. JEFF'S MEWSINGS

By Dr. Jeff Ambrous

We are now heading into the fall with its cooler weather. You might think that you can now stop worrying about fleas. This could not be farther from the truth.

Spring and fall are actually prime time seasons for fleas to thrive. They love the moderate temperatures and moisture/rainfall that these times of year commonly provide.

Fleas are extremely common here in central Indiana. They cause a number of problems for you and your pet. Tapeworms are transmitted by fleas that have been infected with the larva of this parasite. Flea allergy dermatitis is also a common concern with pet owners. Signs include scratching, red skin and hair loss.

Later in the fall, as temperatures continue to cool, fleas will begin to seek out the warmth and comfort of your pet and your house. They will actually be able to live and multiply throughout the winter months in the coziness of your home if given the chance. This is why it is so important to continue with a good flea prevention program until the cold weather has truly set in. Even then, you should not stop using flea products if there are any fleas in your home.

Each home and pet situation can require a slightly different flea preventative approach. Please contact our office for recommendations.

We hope that you and your pets have a happy and flea-free autumn.

Dr. Jeff Ambrous practices at South 31 Veterinary Clinic and can be reached at (317) 788-0893.

Several years later, they opened the first Rise 'n Roll bakery in Middlebury, IN. All missing, sheeting and prepping was done by hand. In December 2016, Rise 'n Roll opened in Greenwood. Vince Gilligan's Breaking Bad is one of the most critically-acclaimed television shows of all time. It is frequently mentioned as one of the greatest television shows, not only because of its high mark of quality throughout the series, but the way the series came to an end. Critics praised the show's conclusion for bringing each character a satisfying, yet surprising end point. The series finale boasts a 9.9/10 user score on IMDb with over 77,000 reviews. Considering this, adding more to that story seems like a big risk. Despite this, Vince Gilligan and his team moved forward, in secret, with production of a feature-length Breaking Bad movie. Unveiled a mere two months ago, El Camino: A Breaking Bad Movie is here and available for free with a Netflix subscription.

Vince Gilligan, show creator, writer and occasional director, returned to write and direct the story's epilogue. Picking up directly where the series ended, it does reward fans of the series with great return character moments but is still comprehensible if you haven't seen the whole series. What results is a tense, entertaining and emotional journey with Jesse Pinkman that, despite its entertainment value, fails to meet the impossibly high bar that the original series set for it.

El Camino, in some ways, plays like a greatest hits reel of the show's best moments. Tense character-driven confrontations, thoughtful and heartfelt writing and the show's signature exaggeration of the mundane give new context in the dire, seemingly impossible circumstances faced by our protagonist. However, the decision to center Jesse as a protagonist creates a decidedly different tone from the original series. Where dread and fear lurked in Walter White's exploits, Jesse's story is all about hope, perseverance and redemption. These subtle moments are communicated in vivid detail through Gilligan's trademark excellent writing.

Unfortunately, one of the strengths of the original series was establishing long-running, and growingly consequential, stakes all stacked on top of one another until they all come crashing down. The entire second season is a buildup to a single event. Being a movie constrained into a two-hour runtime, El Camino does not have that luxury, and as a result feels less consequential and ultimately more forgettable than the original series.

Of course, El Camino didn't live up to Breaking Bad's finale, but hopefully no one really expected that. It delivers a fun, emotional and tight self-contained story that pays tribute to Breaking Bad but feels stuck in its shadow.

To avoid repetition, don't say the same thing twice

GRAMMAR GUY

By Curtis Honeycutt

If you drive an hour from my house, you can get to an Indiana city named Gas City. If you drive into town, you'll reach the city of Gas City City Hall. Did they have to do this to themselves? I like to think that the person who decided on this name did it in an attempt to be saucy. Yet, today you can visit the City of Gas City City Hall. While this is incredibly repetitive, it's not an example of tautology.

Tautology is a form of repetition where the same thing is said twice using different words. In the city of Gas City City Hall, you're saying the same thing three times using the same words. We get the word "tautology" from the Greek noun "tautologos," meaning "repeating what is said." The Gas City example is an instance of tautophony, which is the repetition of the same sound.

Here's a sarcastic use of tautology by one of my heroes, Mark Twain: "Suppose you were an idiot and suppose you were a member of Congress. But I repeat myself." In an age of limited bandwidth and diminished attention spans, brevity is not only the soul of wit, as Shakespeare wrote in "Hamlet," but brevity is the soul of effective communication.

Can you repeat that again? That's a prime example of tautology. How about this one: "It's déjà vu all over again." This is one of my favorite Yogi-isms, which is the official term for off-the-wall quotes from legendary baseball hall-of-famer Yogi Berra. It's also redundant and unnecessary. I did it right there; I didn't need to say redundant AND unnecessary; only one of the words is sufficient.

I suppose if you're writing poetry, you have an implicit right to exercise tautology to your heart's content. In areas where you have space to hammer home your meaning, feel free to employ tautology. I think that — in general — we have the poetic capacity of a haiku; every syllable and breath counts.

Maybe I'm beating a dead horse (a.k.a. committing idiomatic tautology) by writing an entire article on tautology. Perhaps I could have simply said, "Be brief and then be done." However, I felt it necessary to explore the proverbial halls of the city of Tautology City City Hall.

IN OUR SCHOOLS

Nativity students celebrate National Anthem Day

History - For the 16th consecutive year, the entire student body of Nativity Catholic School has come to-gether to celebrate the birthday of our National Anthem. In a brief ceremony Sept. 13, which opened with a prayer, the posting of the colors and then the Pledge of Allegiance, students heard the story of the creation of the words to "The Star-Spangled Banner" during the War of 1812. They learned how it was quickly set to a familiar British tune, and finally became our National Anthem over 100 years later in March 1931. The birthday celebration ended with the entire student body singing the National Anthem and hearing a lone bugle play "Taps." According to Mrs. Margie Hamm, music educator, this is one of her favorite events of the year. The whole school comes together to celebrate our flag and our freedom with our song! Happy 207th birthday to "The Star-Spangled Banner!"

Franklin Central Marching Flashes perform Cirque de Catrinas

Marching band – This year's marching band show is called Cirque de Catrinas and is a celebration of the circus de-picted in the style of the holiday, Dia de los Muertos, where offerings, songs, dance and humor are all parts of celebrating those who truly lived. Our show includes a circus-style big top for our props, vibrant colors and features several genres of music. We have 158 marching band students participating this year – a record number! Our marching band performs at the halftime show of each home football game as well as competing in weekly competitions. In September, the Marching Flashes competed in four different invitationals. On Sept. 21, our Marching Flashes won Best Per-cussion at the Avon Invitational. October brings the Bands of America Regionals and then Super-Regionals, as well as the ISSMA Regionals. We'll compete at ISSMA Semi-State on Nov. 2, and we hope to earn a spot at ISSMA State Finals at Lucas Oil Stadium on Nov. 9.
