Southside donation sites announced for international Christmas project

Two Southside churches are donation sites for this year's Operation Christmas Child, a project of Samaritan's Purse, an international Christian relief and evangelism organization. These sites are among 5,000 U.S. drop-off locations that are collecting shoebox gifts for children overseas during Operation Christmas Child's National Collection Week, held Nov. 18-25. Since 1993, Operation Christmas Child has collected and delivered more than 168 million gift-filled shoeboxes to children in more than 160 countries and territories.

Indiana Humanities awards two Johnson County nonprofits with grants

Two Johnson County nonprofits have recently been awarded nearly $6,000 in Action Grants from Indiana Humanities. Action Grants offer up to $3,000 to support Indiana nonprofits that sponsor public humanities programs such as exhibitions, workshops, lectures and reading and discussion programs. Girls Inc. of Johnson County will conduct a yearlong series of workshops that introduce young women to the study of birds, specifically in areas of art, music, literature and science. The Johnson County Public Library will bring a bestselling teen author to discuss her latest book and host a West African dance company.

Roncalli football
wins sectional title

Athletics – The Roncalli Rebels football team defeated Lebanon 34-14 to capture the Class 4A Sectional 22 championship. The Rebels used a 21-point second quarter to take a 27-13 halftime lead and hang on from there. Sophomore quarterback Aidan Leffler (three touchdowns) and sophomore running back Michael Gallagher (two touchdowns) combined for all five Rebel scores and the Rebels rushed for a season-high 317 yards. With the win, the Rebels improved to 7-5 on the season and won their sixth-straight game. They advance to next week's regional round, where they will travel to Mount Vernon to face the Mount Vernon Marauders (10-2). The 2019 sectional title is the program's 20th and first since 2016. Roncalli is one of only 13 programs statewide to win at least 20 sectional titles. Due to the IHSAA success factor, the Rebels rushed for a season-high 317 yards. International Survivor of Suicide Loss Day

Nov. 23, 10 a.m.-noon
Franklin Branch of the Johnson County Public Library,
401 S. State St., Franklin

A light breakfast will be served starting at 9:30 a.m., with the program starting at 10 a.m. Survivors and their friends and family will have a chance to network and connect while creating a craft to take home and remember their loved one through the holidays and beyond. Suicide loss survivors and their supporters should register to attend at afsp.org/survivorday.

For questions or to donate to support this event, please reach out to Kathleen Ratcliff, coalition chair, at kathleen@upstreamprevention.org.

Support for survivors of suicide

Two Johnson County women form coalition to help those struggling with suicidal thoughts and launch event for those affected by a loss due to suicide

By Nancy Price

Suicide is the 10th leading cause of death in the United States. In 2017, 47,173 Americans died as a result of suicide.

That same year, Johnson County's suicide rate was 14.3 deaths per 100,000 individuals.

Two Southside women, Erica Garrity and Kathleen Ratcliff, are working toward reducing those statistics by forming the Suicide Prevention Coalition of Johnson County.

Erica Garrity is systems of care coordinator for Johnson County Systems of Care. "We try to come together and figure out what are the gaps in our communities, what are some things that are missing, are there things we can bring to our community that will fill those gaps? One of the things that has truly impacted our community is the suicide rate, and so the death by suicide is truly impactful, especially within our schools," Garrity said.

Indiana has the 10th highest rate of deaths by suicide in the country and is the first in suicidal thoughts among teens.

"One of our systems of care members said, 'There's this suicide prevention coalition' and we started exploring more and realized that Marion and Johnson counties are the only ones that don't have a suicide prevention coalition in the state," she said. "I think everyone agreed that is much needed within Johnson County."

Meanwhile, Ratcliff, a part of the Indiana Suicide Prevention Network Advisory Council (ISPAC), had attended an ISPAC meeting when she also realized that Johnson County was just one of two counties in the state that did not have a regional coalition. "That's unacceptable in my eyes," Ratcliff said.

Yet, she knew that forming a coalition from scratch would take a lot of time.

"I already have a lot of stakeholders in our community, within the systems of care," Garrity said. "I've got DCS at the table, Community Corrections, schools and mental health agencies; they already come for Systems of Care once a week. We've already got the people."

The new coalition in Johnson County applied for a grant to get it started and in May, the coalition received a $5,000 grant. "We used that money to host events in September during Suicide Prevention Awareness Month," Ratcliff said. "We bought screening rights to a movie that we've shown twice in the community."

The documentary Suicide: the Ripple Effect, is the true story of author, public speaker and documentary filmmaker Kevin Hines, who attempted suicide in 2000. He now travels around the world, sharing his story of hope, healing and recovery while teaching people about the art of wellness and the ability to survive pain with resilience.

Ratcliff and Garrity manned a booth promoting the Suicide Prevention Coalition of Johnson County. Guests would share their own personal stories of losing someone to suicide or discussing suicidal ideations and sharing their appreciation for bringing the issue to light. "I remember one gentleman in his late '60s, he said, 'thank you. I have a daughter who struggled with (suicidal ideation) her whole life. Parents need to hear this. The community needs to hear this,'" Garrity said.

"When we talk about a survivor of suicide loss, for every suicide, there's about six individuals who have had a major disruption in their life," Ratcliff said. "We think of them as core loss survivors."

The coalition will be hosting an event Nov. 23 at the Franklin Branch of the Johnson County Public Library. The International Survivor of Suicide Loss Day is held at locations around the world, and this is the first year that Johnson County will participate.

In 1999, U.S. Senator Harry Reid, who lost his father to suicide, introduced a resolution to the United States Senate, which led to the creation of International Survivors of Suicide Loss Day, which is always held the Saturday before Thanksgiving.

Will the nighttime hours bring comfort or uncertainty? (Photo by Rick Hinton)

Blanketed by dark hours

HAUNTS & JAUNTS

By Rick Hinton

Darkness falls. The armor we've worn throughout the day becomes a little weaker as daylight whispers into nighttime hours. This armor is a shield against anything foreign that may come across our path as we tend to day-to-day affairs – fully confident we will rise above any obstacle before us. We are most comfortable with the familiar, wanting it to stay that way. But it will not. The day will end – as it always does – and darkness blankets us into another realm, where the certain can easily become the uncertain.

No, this is not about any apocalypse or flesh-eating zombies, but rather the sense of uncertainty and vulnerability that comes at night. The mind dwells upon the possibilities ... what will these hours bring? What could possibly happen? Is it increased crime, a lack of security, a sense that tells you that all is not right in your world, or a loosening of morals with strange powers at work? We tend to wonder about these things. ...

Many feel another realm of power takes over as daylight transitions into the shadows of the night. It is, after all, not unfamiliar ground; we live it every day. Being alive for any length of time guarantees a daily evolution that is as assured as the clock ticking down the hours of our lives. It's a safety blanket, assuring that life is running a normal course. The American Indian (back in the day) felt that day to night was a transformation of forces; a consensual changing of the guard, so to speak. We become the masters of the daylight hours as life takes on a normalcy, not only comforting, but also commonplace. The familiar is what keeps us grounded; always has, always will. Yet, the night – and darkness – becomes the abode of completely something else!

While the daylight does not restrict paranormal occurrences (there are truckloads of daytime sightings), it would seem that night, and the gathering darkness, gives these paranormal happenings a sense of significance and foreboding. Doors are opened, while others of rationality and normalcy are slammed shut.

The darkness has become a large part of my own personal paranormal evolution. Sometimes I feel as though I am living in it, yet it grows on you. I'm comfortable about it now but wasn't always. And, the years have been kind as I've tried to make sense of a world that can suddenly change when darkness takes hold; one that seems normal in the daylight but can flip at a moment's notice as it grows dark. As a paranormal investigator – one who tries to make sense of shadows and feelings – I feel I have arrived into a different world when darkness makes the shadows more pronounced. It's humbling.

Rick Hinton, a Southport resident, loves researching things that go bump in the night. His articles can be read on Facebook: Rick Hinton, Southport Paranormal Examiner. Hinton conducts paranormal investigations with his team, South Central Paranormal.

Indiana Members Credit Union donates $1,500 to Greenwood Community Schools

Donation – Indiana Members Credit Union (IMCU) recently presented a check for $1,500 to Greenwood Community Schools as part of an ongoing school spirit debit card program and sponsorship. Mimi Bateman, IMCU's Assistant Vice President Greenwood Branch Manager, presented the check to Rob Irwin, Greenwood Community High School Athletic Director, at a recent boys varsity football game. The partnership allows Greenwood fans the opportunity to show their school spirit and support the athletic program by signing up for a Greenwood Woodmen themed debit card. Every time the card is used as a signature-based transaction, Greenwood athletics benefits. The more cards that are in use, the larger the contribution. This is the first year of the IMCU giveback program. The card is available for issue to members at the IMCU Greenwood Branch, 1115 N. Madison Ave., as well as IMCU's other 26 central Indiana locations. The IMCU Greenwood Woodmen debit card is free to members with IMCU's free checking account and can be issued immediately through IMCU's Instant Issue program, which allows members to receive their debit card on the spot. For more information, visit an IMCU Greenwood branch or imcu.com for details.

AN OPTION

Lincoln Square Pancake House

Customers looking for the kind of restaurant that serves a wide variety of breakfast items, coffee from large mugs and cheerfulness from the staff may want to check out Lincoln Square Pancake House. The restaurant offers breakfast tacos, chicken and blueberry waffles, various crepes, banana bread French toast, blueberry stuffed pancakes, biscuits and gravy omelets, skillet and more until 3 p.m. As well, Lincoln Square has burgers, salads and sandwiches for those preferring the lunch menu. George Katris, an immigrant from Greece, started Lincoln Square Pancake House in Kokomo, IN in 1989. Katris grew up in a Greek village of 50-60 residents and dreamed of success at a young age. He left his village at the age of just 13 and found work in Athens. Five years later, he boarded a boat to Canada, arriving in Toronto and worked as a dishwasher for $18 a week. After meeting his wife in Greece, he brought her back to Canada. They moved to the U.S. after the birth of their son, eventually moving to Kokomo, IN, where Katris opened his first restaurant, working from 7 a.m. until 3:30 the next morning. Katris expanded the business, opening his first Indianapolis location at 21st Street and Shadeland Avenue. There are now 11 restaurants throughout Indiana.

French toast with fresh strawberries, bananas and blueberries. Customers may also add Nutella for their order. (Submitted photo)

Jojo Rabbit Your imaginary best friend, Adolf Hitler

MOVIE REVIEW

By Bradley Lane

Writer-director Taika Waititi started turning heads in 2014 with his vampire horror satire, What We Do in the Shadows. However, for most he became a household name with his marvel film debut, Thor: Ragnarok. The latter film served as a soft reboot of Thor's character in the Marvel Cinematic Universe and was well received by both fans of the series and critics alike. Coasting off the success of Thor, Waititi finally has the ability to make the movie he wants to make, Jojo Rabbit.

Set at the twilight of World War II, Jojo Rabbit follows the ideological journey of the 10-year-old Jojo. Having been raised in Germany during wartime, he has been indoctrinated in the Hitler Youth from a young age. He idolizes Nazis and Nazi iconography so much that the impressionable Jojo's voice of comfort and own imaginary friend is none other than a fictionalized Hitler, played by the, partly Jewish, Waititi himself.

Positioning itself as an "anti-hate" satire of German fascism, I was excited going into this movie. After all, fascism is an ideology full of contradictions and logical holes uniquely positioned to be exploited by comedy. And if there is one thing that fascists detest more than anything, it's the refusal to take them seriously, to mock and to belittle them until their hate can no longer be heard, a la the musical numbers in Bob Fosse's Cabaret.

Unfortunately, Waititi's vision for Jojo Rabbit plays its cards very, very safe. The jokes at Nazi expense are one-dimensional and typically incredibly, almost frustratingly surface level. The actual bulk of the story is spent on developing a relationship between two characters that lacks subtlety, depth, or even entertainment value.

It isn't all bad; Waititi's Hitler is mostly funny. Acting not as Hitler the historical figure, but rather as Hitler Jojo's friend and confidant. An adult Hitler parroting ridiculous notions about the world that only a child could believe is almost Waititi's only joke, that is albeit a pretty funny one. Additionally, Sam Rockwell's turn as a not-so-serious Hitler youth camp counselor is also a welcome addition that handles his character's struggle with a tact and wit the rest of the film fails to offer.

The whole film just feels like a wasted opportunity to make a much better film. Almost every character feels underdeveloped or entirely unnecessary. The drama feels contrived and ultimately fails to communicate anything meaningful about the deadly serious matter at which it is trying to poke fun.

Despite a winning concept and great cast, Jojo Rabbit is almost instantly forgettable after first viewing.

Bradley is a Beech Grove High School alumnus and has been enamored by film for as long as he can remember. His is currently in his fourth, and final year at IUPUI, majoring in Media and Public Affairs with a minor in Film. Bradley can be contacted at blane2214@gmail.com.

Clues that you or your loved one may have Alzheimer's and where to locate help

November is Alzheimer's Awareness Month. There are 50 million people currently living with a form of dementia. Alzheimer's is the most common cause of dementia, accounting for 60 to 80 percent of dementia cases.

Cognitive changes often affect a person's ability to perform everyday tasks such as dressing, personal hygiene, eating and managing personal finances, as well as communication and interactions with loved ones.

Alzheimer's is the sixth leading cause of death in the U.S. On average, a person with the disease lives four to eight years after diagnosis but can live as long as 20 years.

Although the greatest known risk factor for developing Alzheimer's is increasing age, it is not just a disease of old age. About 200,000 Americans under 65 have younger-onset Alzheimer's disease.

Signs that a person may be suffering from Alzheimer's include the following:

- Difficulty performing familiar tasks/locating familiar places like a bedroom or bathroom
- Changes in personality. The personalities of people with dementia can change dramatically. They may become extremely confused, suspicious, fearful or dependent on a family member.
- A desire to "go home," even when already at home.

There is no cure for Alzheimer's but treatments for symptoms are available and research continues. Treatments can temporarily slow the worsening of dementia symptoms and improve the quality of life for those with the disease and their caregivers. Learn more at alz.org.

To locate your local Alzheimer's Association, call their 24/7 Helpline at (800) 272-3900 or go to alz.org/local-resources/find_your_local_chapter.

STARS & STRIKES ON THE SOUTHSIDE

The Southside Times is all about people and our community. What do you like in your neighborhood? What don't you like? Who has done something nice, no matter how small, and should be recognized? Email your "Stars and Strikes" to news@ss-times.com. The family of Jim Coffman, a Perry Township resident contributed to this week's Stars and Strikes.

★ Star: to Jim Coffman for being elected Beech Grove Clerk-Treasurer. You've spent eight years trying to better Beech Grove. Congratulations! From mom, dad and the whole family.

⚡ Strike: to bitter cold winter temperatures in the fall.

★ Star: to Roncalli High School's presentation of "Singin' in the Rain" this weekend.

★ Star: to next Wednesday's Family Night, when the Beech Grove Comprehensive Drug Free Coalition (CDFC) will have a presentation on Youth Substance Misuse and Overdose Prevention (YSMOP).

★ Star: to Katie Douglas's appearance at Perry Meridian High School on Nov. 26. The 1997 graduate of PMHS was an Indiana All-Star, named Big Ten Player of the Year while playing for Purdue University during the National Championship and went on to four WNBA finals, winning the 2012 title with Indiana Fever.

TOP 10 THINGS LEARNED FROM THE FIRST SNOW OF THE SEASON

By Torry Stiles

10. I am part of the 97 percent of the population who couldn't find a pair of gloves.
9. You can pop over to the local Dairy Queen and watch the manager cry.
8. The lower you are on the company totem pole the earlier you have to be at work.
7. No matter how much it snows it never snows as much as it used to snow when you were growing up.
6. Way too many people in my neighborhood spent too much time trying to decide which credit card they were willing to sacrifice as an ice scraper.
5. The office bigwigs decided it was too dangerous to drive the brand-new all-wheel drive SUVs in to work so they stayed home and called for the Uber Eats driver to deliver lunch in his 1997 Saturn with the one windshield wiper and four bald radials.
4. There will always be that one guy in shorts.
3. If your dog convinces you he doesn't need to go for a walk you better have the carpet cleaner ready.
2. The higher you are on the company totem pole the longer you can stand at the window at work commenting on the snow.
1. The folks at the Waffle House get pretty nasty when you try to steal their salt shakers to take home for your sidewalk.

MAKING SENSE OF INVESTING

How to get the next-to-last word: learning the meaning of penultimate

GRAMMAR GUY

By Curtis Honeycutt

If a potato can become vodka, then you can become a bona-fide word nerd. The tools and tips I give you are meant to be used for good; please don't gloat your grammar greatness over anyone, rather use it to lift everyone up. I'm about to share a word with you that will make everyone at the white-tie optional gala assume you're the king or queen of some distant, exotic land. Use this word and upper-crusters will begin consulting with you before they order their newest monocle. They'll picture you eating peeled champagne grapes while you brush the golden mane of your award-winning miniature pony named Lord Anponio.

I'm talking about the word "penultimate." Although this sounds like a million-dollar word, it simply means "next-to-last" or "second to last." It's as simple as that. So, if you ate the “penultimate Oreo,” that would mean you ate the next-to-last Oreo in the package. If you are reading the 19th chapter in a 20-chapter book, you are reading the book’s penultimate chapter. If you use the penultimate square of toilet paper, it’s time to install a new roll so the next person isn’t stuck with one lonely square.

Allow me to put on my horn-rimmed grammar nerd glasses for a second. The term “penult” is a noun that means the next-to-last syllable in a word. The penult in the word “automobile” is “mo.” Now you know that!

Certainly, I'm not going to up the ante and share an even nerdier-yet-related word, am I?

Yes, I am: antepenultimate. Antepenultimate refers to the third to last item in a series, or the next-to-next-to-last thing. Going back to our 20-chapter book: If chapter 19 is the penultimate chapter, that means chapter 18 is the antepenultimate chapter. If we break down the Latin meanings for each part of the word, we'd get "before" (ante) "almost" (pen) and "last" (ultimate). Antepenultimate is the thing that comes before the almost last thing.

Drop any of these words into casual conversation and your friends will offer you the finest bottle out of their wine cellars. Horse & Hound magazine (my favorite magazine about both dogs and horses) will call to request an in-depth interview about your dressage training techniques. Yes, my friends: if the humble potato can become vodka, then you too can achieve the high status of grammar guru. I believe in you. It's time to go out there and dominate the English language.
