Greenwood adds new exercise options for kids and adults

As temperatures plunge, new indoor exercise equipment for kids and adults is being added to the Greenwood Community Center. The BEAM, an interactive projection system, was installed on the second floor of Kid City last month. The BEAM turns indoor spaces into virtual playgrounds, allowing children to choose from a game library of more than 200 options that include adventure, memory, education and sports games. This month, more than 20 fixed-resistance exercise machines will be added to The Gym to help adults, including seniors, use specific muscle groups to help with rehab needs and iron out imbalances.

Buildings that retain ... spirits that remain

HAUNTS & JAUNTS

By Rick Hinton

People carry an agenda - and personal aspirations - like a suitcase during their relatively short sojourn on earth. Then ... they move on, replaced by a new group of wandering souls with the cycle starting anew. Houses and buildings play a part in this stroll through life and do not fade; instead they remain a remnant of a past era. Buildings age as we do (although at a much slower rate), continuing to hold a fingerprint from periods of personal history and discovery; some good, some not so good. If only a building could speak, the stories they could tell. Or, perhaps they do. ...

Beech Grove ... Southport ... Franklin ... Bargersville ... Greenwood, all have their fair share of these buildings. And some – with a little nudging – can be quite chatty. Older homes and buildings in small towns continue to remain standing for the most part as years roll forward, and unless destroyed by fire or some natural catastrophe, tend to remain longer than their counterparts in larger cities where a critical eye is directed toward redevelopment.

There have long been theories that certain people – for a variety of reasons – can and will leave an "imprint" behind after their earthly departure. This usually involves the homes and buildings with which they were associated. Much like a sponge, these buildings will soak in the fiber and essence of these once mortal souls and replay them like a continuous loop of film. There appears to be no rhyme or reason ... it just happens. While there may have been good interactions with many structures, there also may have been those on the dark side. This is where it gets interesting. Some folks – known as sensitives or mediums or a slew of other names – are more receptive to these lingering spirits than others. I would suppose that's either a blessing or a curse, depending on your perspective.

Some of these talented folks can "see" the past lives of these individuals who've placed their imprint from another era. Guess what? They were people just like us, each having their own distinct personalities. They lived, loved, laughed, cried, felt pain and then passed on as we all will; and, quite possibly have influenced these structures of brick and wood they left behind. There can be consequences for present-day owners, and especially those who are a sensitive on a paranormal team. Everyone reacts differently to a given situation. Choose your battles wisely.

Buildings do develop some semblance of a personality as a result of those who have graced their interiors for a short span of life experiences. Some become imbedded and a permanent fixture. Some remain behind for only a short time. Paranormal investigators are the dealers of time passages. People come and go, yet the buildings they frequented remain behind – timeless. And quite often ... voices carry on even beyond death.

About Smiley's

Smiley's is about a cursed vending machine and an obsessed college student named Mitch. Stressed about an upcoming exam, Mitch and his study buddies take a break to cruise the countryside, leading to an unusual discovery: A mysterious soda machine stocked by a witch in the woods. After buying a "soda," Mitch finds himself falling down a dark rabbit hole that he may never return from.

TURNING DREAMS INTO REALITY

By Nancy Price

As children, we often spend time dreaming about what we'll be when we grow up. We watch our heroes on TV save more lives in an episode than one can imagine (I want to be a doctor!), win a case during a nail-biting trial (a lawyer, for sure!), or write the next Great American Novel.

After some time, we may forget about those dreams. At some point, we faint after seeing blood, discover that we freeze when speaking in public or learn that the odds of becoming a successful author is about as likely as being struck by lightning. We focus on the "realistic" careers that our parents, not wanting to support us indefinitely after college, encourage us to pursue.

A lucky few have turned their dreams into reality, like Mike James, a writer, director and resident of the Bates-Hendricks neighborhood. James won an award for Best Writing in a Short and was a nominee for Best Overall Short from the Nightmares Film Festival for his 2018 comedy-thriller, Smiley's.

"I think it first dawned on me that being a filmmaker was a job someone did when I was 9 or 10," James said. "I saw the movie, The Nightmare Before Christmas on VHS, watched past all the credits and after the credits, it showed the set and puppets and how the movie was made. It blew my mind that there was someone responsible for making the movie."

About 10 years later, James was attending Franklin College when along with he, his classmate and friend from Whiteland, Wilson Mack, began hearing of local urban legends. The long-abandoned home occupied by a reclusive witch, practicing cults in the woods and a road built over gravesites. with ghosts still roaming the area. Oh, and a creepy soda machine – stocked by the witch – that delivers haunting surprises.

The soda machine is actually inspired by reality ... for the most part.

A pop machine once housed on East Greensburg Road in Franklin that was stocked by a local convenience store owner used to serve college students in need of a caffeine or sugar jolt while studying for an exam. Students pressed a button on the machine labeled "pot luck." The flavor of the can tumbling out was anyone's guess. Cream soda? Root beer? Or a generic red or cola?

"We like blending comedy and having viewers wonder, 'Am I supposed to laugh or am I supposed to be scared?"

- Wilson Mack

"All these people heard was that it was the best soda in the world," said Mack, the film's coproducer, also playing the role of a character named Mitch.

Sometimes, something completely unexpected shot out. "When I got it, it came out with pencils,"

James said. "I talked to other people about the pencils, and another person said, 'I got erasers!' Just to mess with them, the owner put random items in."

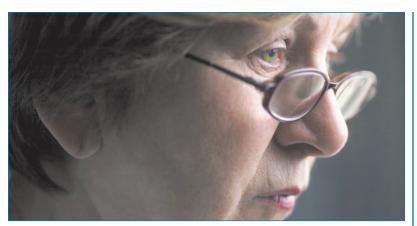

James began to weave a story that never quite left him, even after graduating and leaving Indiana.

"When Mike moved out to L.A., the idea was still stuck in his mind," Mack said. "He thought, 'Maybe I'll make a documentary.' He came back to Indiana and the pop machine was out of order. There's something quirky about this machine, it's out of order, dejected. Maybe this is a fun zany (story).

"We like blending comedy (in a film) and having viewers wonder, 'Am I supposed to laugh or am I supposed to be scared?' We both grew up in the boonies in Indiana with urban legend ideas of a witch house, the person who wants to be left alone."

The movie, which filmed in 2017 and lasts 17 minutes, took about a week to film. "Once we found the location (Franklin), it was a boiling strew of rural legends right up until we shot the film," James said. "Smiley's lived with me than any other ideas that I had. It was a golden goose for me; once I decided to go for it, I went all out."

Smiley's is available for viewing on Amazon Prime. "If people dig (Smiley's), if they want to help the Indy film community, the best way to help us is by reviewing it on Amazon."

Early stage dementia

How you can help

By CarDon & Associates

Yes, we all know receiving a diagnosis of dementia can be scary for the patient and for a loved one. But there is hope! During the early stages of dementia, there are steps and precautions you can take to ease the effects. Let's discuss the key factors that will play an important role in moving forward.

1) Do your research and get the facts.

It's easy to get informed. One of the most frightening things about a dementia diagnosis is fear of the unknown. Plus, gathering all the information about the different types of dementia and what to expect in different stages can seem daunting. Check with your loved one's doctor for references they would recommend. Remember, a lot of information also is available online. It's a great tool. Just make sure you are using a legitimate source, like the Alzheimer's Association (alz.org), which has a lot of informational resources. The National Institutes of Health (nia.nih.gov/ health/alzheimers) also publishes fact sheets and free booklets with information about Alzheimer's disease and other dementias.

2) Support is key.

In the early stages of dementia, the symptoms may not be that apparent except to those closest to your loved one. A person with early stage dementia can continue to function independently. So, one of the most important things you can do at this stage is to provide love and support. This is key. Talk to them, let them share their fears and concern. Let them vent and assure them you'll be there for them. Always.

Little tools can go a long way as well. Create reminders to help with memory. Sticky notes, labels and calendar planners are valuable tools for independence.

3) Plan, plan, plan.

Mental decline will occur with dementia, but it won't happen immediately. This is the time to make sure you search for resources and providers close to home that specialize in dementia. You'll want this all figured out before the person with early stage dementia needs it. And be sure to listen. Find out what they want to get out of their care, so you know what to do when they need to start their treatment. Your local area agency on aging can point you in the right direction. Explore resources in your area through the Eldercare Locator (eldercare.gov). And be sure to ask around! If friends have cared for a loved one with dementia, ask them what resources and care providers they used, and if they would recommend them.

CarDon can also help. Give us a call or fill out some information below, and we'll get in touch. We'll help you decide which CarDon community is the perfect fit for you or your loved one. Call 844-4-CarDon or visit cardon.us/our-communities to see our various locations.

RAY'S HOLIDAY RECYCLING TIPS:

You can recycle magazines, cardboard boxes, catalogs, and even eggnog cartons using curbside recycling or at a local drop-off site.

Helpful hints.

- Place ALL materials loose in the bin do NOT bag
- Bundle/break down cardboard boxes
- Wrapping paper, gift bags, and party supplies should NOT be placed in the recycling bin
- For Christmas trees, remember to cut the tree into 4' sections and remove ALL ornaments
- check your local government website for tree recycling information

Garfield Park hosts inaugural event to promote resident artists

FEATURE

By Nancy Price

Two arts organizations in Garfield Park are connecting this Friday to host an exhibit featuring local artists.

"A few local neighbors, including Mint Evans and Tina Mahern, came up with the idea to host a local exhibit of Garfield artists' work and approached both Garfield Park Arts Center (GPAC) and the Tube Factory about their idea," said Garfield Park Arts Center Manager Kavita Mahoney. "With the number of artists who live and create in the Garfield Park neighborhood, both organizations were excited to support this project."

The exhibition, called Localized, features artwork in a variety of mediums by local artists that reside in Garfield Park.

"The purpose of the show is to highlight the artists who live and work in Garfield Park and demonstrate how much creativity exists in this neighborhood," Mahoney said. "The show will be held annually in December, and we hope to continue to grow each year."

Artwork will be displayed in both GPAC and Big Car's Tube Factory. "In addition to pieces that celebrate life in Garfield Park, artwork on display will also reflect each artist's unique style," she added. "Visitors can expect to see a variety of mediums including painting, photography, ceramics, sculpture, mixed-media and more."

In addition, live music at GPAC will be performed by area musician and resident Brandon Wadley. "His music is an innovative, earthy indie rock style," Mahoney said.

As well, several longtime Garfield Park residents, neighbors and professionals, will be telling stories, including personal narratives and local history, at both GPAC and the Tube Factory.

Refreshments will also be available. Garfield Brewery will host a wine/beer bar at GPAC, and the Tube Factory will offer munchies from local food trucks.

For those who cannot attend this Friday's event, the exhibit at GPAC will run from Dec. 6-28. Hours of operation are Tuesday-Saturday from 10 a.m.-5 p.m. (plus special events). As well, Tube Factory's exhibit will run from Dec. 6-20. Hours of operation are Monday-Friday from 9 a.m.-6 p.m. and Saturday from 11 a.m.-3 p.m.

For more information, go to gpacarts.org and tubefactory.org.

Lives remembered in 2019

Many of us know someone who passed away in 2019. What do you remember about him or her? Was this person well-known for giving back to their community? Were they responsible for positive changes on the Southside? How did they go above and beyond? Did they help those who were homeless or hungry?

Maybe they helped start a nonprofit or made a difference in the lives of kids, veterans, domestic abuse victims or newly-released prisoners to get a fresh start in life.

At the end of the year, we want to remember and honor those who made a difference in our "Lives Remembered" section. Each year, we feature several individuals who resided in Beech Grove, Center Grove, Garfield Park, Fountain Square, Greenwood, Southport, Perry or Franklin Townships. We'd like to talk with friends, family, co-workers or other peers about the impact this person made in their community. Let us know who you remember, how this person positively affected the lives of others and why he or she will be greatly missed. Please call Nancy at (317) 698-1661 or email nancy@icontimes.com with your contact information by next Friday, Dec. 13.

Strange Brew has the feeling of hanging out in a friend's living room. In addition to comfortable chairs and couches, patrons at the locally-owned eclectic coffee shop can relax with a coloring book, play a puzzle or read a book while sipping on a latte and nibbling on a warm muffin. Owned by a husband-and-wife team, Daniel and Toni Carr, Strange Brew has been in business since 2004. "We're very well-know for our Chai, which we brew from scratch," Toni said. "The Pumpkin Sweet Roll is our most popular seasonal drink, with real pumpkin and brown sugar cinnamon syrup combined with espresso, steamed milk and topped with whipped cream. We try to stay as local as possible and keep our money in Indiana. Our coffee is locally roasted every week, making it as fresh as possible." Patrons may purchase bags of coffee and choose from flavors such as Holiday Grog, Zombie Defense, Almond Joe, German chocolate cake and decaf hazelnut. The owners enjoy giving back to their local community. "We

They have an amazing selection of burgers, but I am partial to their breakfast burger. The bacon, egg and cheese covering the burger is absolutely phenomenal!

Queen and Slim A fun and entertaining experience

MOVIE REVIEW

By Bradley Lane

Queen and Slim was written and directed by black women, Lena Waithe and Melina Matsoukas. The latter had never directed a feature film before Oueen and Slim but has decades of experience directing music videos, culminating in Beyoncé's 2016 visual album, Lemonade. I emphasize their racial and gender identity because it is a key part of expression in Queen and Slim; this is because the lens through which the story is told is heavily influenced by their own experiences as black women in America.

The story of the film centers around Jodie Foster Smith and Daniel Kaluuva's characters after their first date is interrupted by an incident with a disheveled police officer. This sets into motion a series of events that forces them to run away together, leaving their entire lives behind. Beginning in a sense of dread the film eventually gives way to a sense of liberation from the roles they were at one time forced into by the society in which they lived.

The film exists within the tropes of the runaway romance, while asserting a different perspective into the genre. In fact, Queen and Slim is often overtly referential to classics of the genre, notably Bonnie and Clyde (1967) and Thelma and Louise (1991). It feels as though the filmmakers had great reverence for these films but failed to identify with the characters historically explored in these types of films. In response, they are asserting themselves within the genre in order to utilize the runaway romance tropes to express their own relationships with black identity.

Queen and Slim serves not only as a fun and entertaining moviegoing experience, but also as proof of the value of diversification within the film industry. The more types of people who are able to make and produce films, the more stories we, as the audience, get to experience. Filmmakers control the writing and framing of the narrative, so cinema is a uniquely advantaged art form for expressing individual experience. Experiencing a different culture is visceral and more emotionally effective than just learning about it, which makes cinema especially empathetic, and if there is anything American discourse needs now more than ever, it is empathy toward other cultures.

Oueen and Slim is a clear affirmation of black individualism and is an exceptionally made film, even if it is a bit derivative of the genre it pays homage to.

Bradley is a Beech Grove High School alumnus and has been enamored by film for as long as he can remember. He is currently in his third year studying at IUPUI, majoring in Media and Public Affairs with a minor in Film. Bradley can be contacted at blane2214@gmail.com.

Lutheran High School football performs undefeated season, advances to state

By Nancy Price

Lutheran High School's varsity football team played an undefeated season, leading to their advancement to the State Championship last Friday night.

The Lutheran Saints began their season Aug. 23 against Beech Grove (27-22), followed by Aug. 30 against Carter Ritter (35-14), Sept. 6 against Triton Central (28-14), Sept. 20 against Cascade (46-28), Sept. 27 against Scecina Memorial (42-21), Oct. 4 against Monrovia (49-7), Oct. 11 against Speedway (42-13), Oct. 18 against Traders Point Christian (63-27), Oct. 25 against Sheridan (62-14), Nov. 2 against Covenant Christian (28-15), Nov. 8 against Park Tudor (49-6), Nov. 15 against North Vermillion (56-21) and Nov. 22 against West Washington (49-0).

Lutheran was narrowly defeated by Lafayette Central Catholic School in the 2019-20 IHSAA Football State Tournament presented by the Indianapolis Colts – Class 1A State Championship at Lucas Oil stadium. The Lutheran Saints lost by one point, 29-28.

Lutheran Football Head Coach Dave Pasch attributed the team's success to experience and comradery. (Delete the last sentence) Then add the following sentence: He also said that competing in the state championship was "exciting."

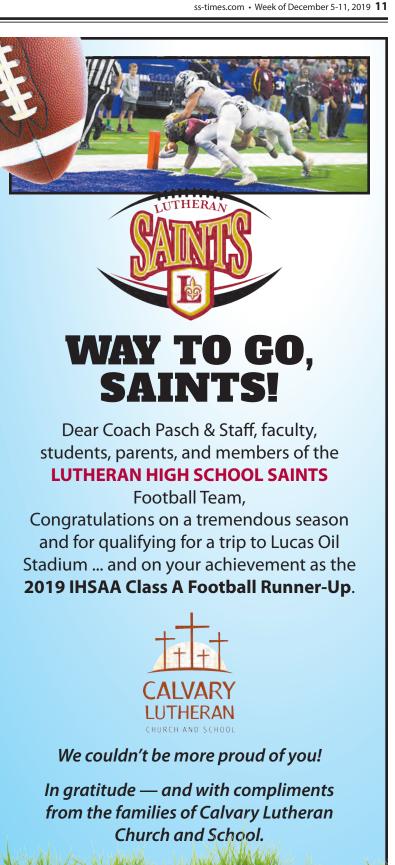

"I think anytime you're close, you have a special drive collectively as a group to reach the next level," he said. "It's not an experience everyone gets, it's going to be a day that they'll cherish the rest of their lives."

PERSONNEL MATTERS

What questions are you asking this year?

By Mike Heffner

Every year, our team has a planning meeting for the upcoming year. We meet to discuss our strategy, marketing, budgets, training and sales. In our 2019 meeting, we also took time to really look at our culture and what we wanted it to look like. The last time we reviewed those items was back in 2010. This last year, we did all the typical things listed but we also wrestled with our vision and values. We narrowed our values down to six and we brushed up our vision statement. Throughout the year, we made it a point to focus on our values and talk about them together. Our leaders lead with these values in mind and we often had to defend them. We also had our best year ever. I attribute this to our team and their desire to live out our values every day. Based on what we learned, below are a few things I recommend you ask yourself and your leadership team as you plan for 2020.

- 1. Are the goals and strategy more important to you than culture? Do you spend time every week talking about your values? Do new members added to your team know what your values are, or do they just know the key metrics and goals?
- 2. Does your leadership team stand for the core values they agreed upon? Does your team make decisions every day that line up with your values? When there are difficult situations that come up, do you look at your values for clarity?
- 3. Do your employees reinforce the values on their own? Do people call out others and are they willing to challenge them based on the values? Can your team tell you what the values are and what they mean?
- 4. How does your team behave when no one is watching? Could anyone visit your office and see/feel your values and culture being lived out? Would you say that everyone is on the bus?
- 5. Is your culture contagious? Do people want to work at your office because of the values, purpose and type of work that is being done? Can your customers feel the difference in your culture versus other vendors they work with?

If you cannot clearly answer these questions, I would challenge you to look at your culture and values as you plan for 2020. Our team worked hard this past year to answer many of these questions. We spent time every week developing our culture. I can tell you the growth we have had this year is because we can answer more of these questions than we could have in the past. When your team is purposeful, and they are all rowing the boat in the same direction, it creates positive energy and a great place to work.

Do you take your tea fragmented or fermented?

GRAMMAR GUY

By Curtis Honeycutt

What is kombucha, anyway? I know you were already thinking about it. Kombucha sounds like either someone sneezing or the thing someone says after someone sneezes. Kombucha is like the kale of liquids. Does anyone really enjoy it? If you take a swig of this fermented swill, you'll get a mouthful of vinegary, yeasty tea fungus. Sign me up.

I guess I don't like my teas fermented in the same way I don't like my sentences fragmented. Or do I?

The grammar gods strongly advise against writing sentences in fragments. "Sentence fragments" is industry-speak for "incomplete sentences." A complete sentence includes a verb, makes sense on its own and communicates a complete idea. After all, writing is all about communication.

Here's an example of a sentence fragment: "Because he lives near the ocean." If the sentence read, "He lives near the ocean," we'd be in good shape. However, adding "Because" to the beginning makes this fragment a dependent clause. We need the "why" to follow the "because." Let's finish that sentence: Because he lives near the ocean, he collects shells that look like Abraham Lincoln. That's completely strange; it's also a complete sentence.

Using complete sentences shows that you have a grasp on proper writing rules. Poet Robert Graves said, "Every English poet should master the rules of grammar before he attempts to bend or break them." I agree with this sentiment. Once we comprehend the "proper" way to write, we can break the rules if it helps us better or more accurately express our ideas.

We speak in fragments. Constantly. We use them either to express a casual style, to create rhythm in your writing or to emphasize a point. I agree with Bob Graves, though you've got to know the rules before you break them. Seriously.

While grammar purists will probably beg to differ, I will throw them this bone: avoid using sentence fragments in formal writing. If you're writing your law dissertation, stay away from sentence fragments. However, when you are writing in a conversational, informal forum, feel free to play with the rules.

Just like some people like their tea slightly fermented, some people like their sentences lightly fragmented. It adds an interesting flavor to an otherwise conventional cup of language libation. While I don't prefer kombucha, I don't have a problem with those who fancy effervescent fungus tea.

How to ensure your child receives a letter from Santa

Letter from Santa – Santa Claus is imaginary? Not as far as your child is concerned – and the postal service can help you prove he's real when your child gets a personalized letter from the big guy - complete with a North Pole postmark. Follow these steps to ensure your children get a response letter from Santa: 1. Have your child write a letter to Santa and place it in an envelope addressed to: Santa Claus, North Pole. 2. Later, when alone, open the envelope and write a personalized response. To save paper, write the response on the back of the original letter. 3. Insert the response letter into an envelope and address it to the child. 4. Add the return address: SANTA, NORTH POLE to the envelope. 5. Affix a First-Class Mail® stamp, such as a new Winter Berries Forever® stamp to the envelope. 6. Place the complete envelope into a larger envelope - preferably a Priority Mail Flat Rate® envelope – with appropriate postage and address it to: North Pole Postmark Postmaster, 4141 Postmark Drive, Anchorage, AK 99530-9998. Greetings from the North Pole Post Office must be received by the Anchorage, AK, postmaster no later than Dec. 13. Santa's helpers at the Postal Service will take care of the rest.

Indy Library adjusts circulation limits on e-books

Library news - Users who access The Indianapolis Public Library's online collection of e-books and e-audiobooks will see reductions in the number of such materials that can be checked out or placed on hold at one time. This is in response to recent changes by major publishing companies that limit the library's ability to purchase and license new electronic materials. The limits represent an initial strategy for dealing with new models from publishers that require libraries to re-purchase individual copies of e-materials whose licenses expire after a short period of time, as opposed to the purchase of a single physical book that the Library can keep and circulate in perpetuity. The library encourages patrons to return e-materials earlier by clicking on the "Return" button when they are finished, choose shorter loan periods and cancel holds they no longer want. ### Weekly Devotion

5:1 And it came to pass, when all the kings of the Amorites, which were on the side of Jordan westward, and all the kings of the Canaanites, which were by the sea, heard that the Lord had dried up the waters of Jordan from before the children of Israel. until we were passed over, that their heart melted, neither was there spirit in them any more, because of the children of Israel.

JOSHUA 5:1

Things have certainly changed since the time of Joshua. The Amorites and the Canaanites feared Israel because God had dried up the Jordan River, allowing them to cross over and begin the re-occupation of the land that they had left over 400 years ago. There fear was based in the reality that if God was for them there was no way to defeat them. Now, today, it is just the opposite of that. Who fears God's people? Basically, no one. Why is this? It is because those that claim to be God's people have become so attached to the world and its governments that they no longer lean on the Lord for those things they need or those kingdoms that must be conquered.

God's people have always been a conquering people. They have marched against superior forces against all odds of victory and yet have won one battle after another. Today, no less than other days, there are battles to fight and victories to be won. We cannot win them on our own; we must have God in the lead and His Son as our captain. No less than any other day, we are Christian soldiers. We rise up every day to do battle with the evil empires of the world. We fight not against flesh and blood but against spiritual powers that oppose Christ in every way and on every hand. Anyone who dares to stand up for Him in this current world is branded > by our present society as homophobic or paranoid and is silenced with threats of sanctions. The church has caved as well as those businesses that were begun by Christians who made a covenant with God that He would help them to succeed if they would serve Him faithfully.

That is a covenant that needs to be kept. May God give courage to His people today not to cave to the pressures of this world but to continue to stand up for God and His holiness.

God bless and go and have a great day.
