Ramblings about the paranormal

HAUNTS & JAUNTS

By Rick Hinton

This past week has been a rough one! It's been emotionally packed, not only for me but also my wife Laura, culminating in a funeral service on Saturday. It's been a week of exploring our own mortality: of how we live, how we will die and if contributions we've made during our short stretch on this physical plane will make any difference. Have we been a good husband, father or son? Wife, mother or daughter? Hard observations, gathered in a texture of a fleeting and precious life, ending much too soon for anyone's satisfaction. It makes me think of that, and other things. In the paranormal realm, why do some go on after death, yet others do not, remaining behind?

It's the million dollar question! Fortunately, I have a tolerant editor who allows me to ramble about these questions. After a week of reflection and speculation on life, it all comes down to what happens after death.

Do we have any control over a paranormal situation we suddenly find ourselves in? Yes and no. Many times we find ourselves in a home or business already inhabited by previous occupants. We essentially become a victim of circumstance. Do we stay or go? It's a subjective topic. It's said that not only can locations be haunted, but in many instances it's the people who are haunted. Some, it would seem, bring "things" with them, from misadventure or prior paranormal investigations. Maybe an unhealthy interest in ghosts in general? I have a co-worker possessing a ghostly hitch-hiker. Perhaps this started from a casual ghost hunt at Waverly Hills Sanatorium, in Louisville, Ky., a few years ago? I don't know, but "something" seems to follow him and his family wherever they move. They live with it.

Old houses, new houses, it doesn't seem to matter. Sometimes it's the land itself on which these houses sit that retain remnants. What are you going to do about that? Small towns or big cities, all have passages of history that define a life experience — sometimes pleasant, sometimes not. Paranormal investigators explore, investigate and try to make some sort of sense of a situation that continues to elude. We grab momentarily a slice, a quick grasp, and then it's gone. I would suppose (and I've been doing this for a few years) that half the fun of the hunt is attempting to gain information to questions with no definitive answer. It's like a game of chess! People love a good ghost story. They want to believe. I do!

The endeavor continues on.

Rick Hinton, a Southport resident, loves researching things that go bump in the night. His articles can be read on Facebook: Rick Hinton, Southport Paranormal Examiner. Hinton conducts paranormal investigations with his team, South Central Paranormal.

GOVERNMENT WATCHDOG

BEECH GROVE CITY COUNCIL

Meeting, Aug. 7

What happened:

- Ordinances 3, 6 and 7 were approved on third and final reading.

What it means:

- Ordinance 3 was amended after a ruling on the agreement between Beech Grove and Citizens Energy Group. Councilors voted to delete rate increases until there is a new, established rate. In the meantime, rates will return to the previous amount.
- Ordinance 6 would allow for open burning, with regulations such as being 15 feet away from a residence.
- Ordinance 7 would allow for residents to own up to six domestic hens. Mayor Dennis Buckley recommended an amendment to the ordinance to remove the need for permits and applications. That amendment was voted down, 4 - 3. The ordinance passed 6 - 1.

What's next:

- Mayor Buckley stated that he will not sign Ordinance 7 into effect because he does not agree with the need for permits. The council will have the option to overturn his veto at the Sept. 6 council meeting.

In brief...

- Crossroad Engineers presented an update to the greenway project. Their first step is to survey the area and second is to do an environmental study. The asphalt trail which will wrap Beech Grove will include five trailheads with maps and other information, bridges over the creek, erosion control and more. The design work will be done by 2019 and construction can start by 2020. Representatives will continue to present updates throughout the process, including at the Aug. 10, 7 p.m. Beech Grove Redevelopment Commission meeting.
- Fire Chief Rob Cheshire asked the council to approve the purchase of seven new radios. The fire department had been approved to purchase new air packs, however the new equipment will not be available until 2018.

Instead, they want to begin the process of replacing the radios, for which they'll eventually need a total of 40. The council approved this change as it is within the budgeted amount.

- Police Chief Mark Swartz and Fire Chief Rob Cheshire presented an update on their need for new stations. Cheshire said they are looking at keeping Station 57, on Churchman Avenue, for EMS staff and building a new station that will combine both Station 57 and 56 for fire personnel. Swartz stated that he will also meet with a designer to do a feasibility study on the police station to see if it can be expanded and/or repaired.

GREENWOOD COMMON COUNCIL

Meeting, Aug. 7

What happened:

- Ordinance 17-38 was postponed and Ordinance 17-39 was introduced to the council.

What it means:

- Ordinance 17-38 seeks to rezone approximately 350 acres located south of Allen Road and east of Graham and Collins Roads. The rezoning is needed for the construction of an industrial business park for regional distribution, warehousing and light manufacturing facilities. The current zoning is AG - Agricultural use, SF - Suburban Fringe use, and R-1 - Residential Single Family use, and they seek to change this to I-1-Industrial-Light.
- Ordinance 17-39 will enforce a fee for body camera footage taken by police. This fee will be deposited into the Law Enforcement Continuing Education Fund. There will be a minimum charge of $25.00 for body camera footage. Fees shall be based on an hourly rate of $50.00 per hour with a maximum fee of $150.00 dependent upon the staff time incurred in copying and formatting a particular video.

What's next:

- Ordinance 17-35 will go before the council on Sept. 6 and Ordinance 17-39 will go for its first reading at the Aug. 21 meeting.

 Fountain Square's Jen Roberts wants rock band Vesperia to create unforgettable experiences with the release of its new album, RLTVTY

By Nicole Davis

Jen Roberts, of Fountain Square, simply couldn't go without music in her life. She found a way to continue following her passion when she pieced together the band, Vesperia, in 2010. While nothing has played out as planned, it's gone better.

Vesperia released its third full-length album, RLTVTY, on July 29. They will celebrate with an album release party at the HiFi, 1043 Virginia Ave. in Fountain Square on Aug. 12. In October, the band will take its first overseas trip together to perform in the United Kingdom.

"It definitely feels like the correct progression," Jen said. "We've always been known for not sticking to a certain genre. In this album, we really show that off in a good way. It showcases a lot of different sides of all of us as musicians, all of our strengths as individuals, as well as a band. It kind of takes you on a journey, not necessarily a story, but in terms of connection, understanding and feeling like someone else understands you."

Since she can remember, all Jen wanted to do was sing. She has written music since she was 13 and eagerly participated in all of the choirs and bands she could fit into her Ben Davis High School schedule. After high school, Jen met her husband, Patrick, a Roncalli graduate who also writes songs. Together, they began to perform duet sets.

"We had some really good experiences, but I had never been in a band," Jen said. "I wanted to push myself and grow musically. The band was a way to make something happen."

Jen chose the initial members of the band at random - the first drummer was a customer at Starbucks where she and Patrick worked. The bass player was the friend of a friend. The band started rehearsing in April 2010 and played its first show, Patrick and Jen's wedding reception, on May 14, 2010 with four songs.

"It continues to be super random," Jen laughed.

Vesperia was named after the original town that Frankenstein terrorized. Come to find out, they didn't spell it correctly (Vasaria), but the idea was there: a Frankenstein-like band which creates its own sound. Vesperia writes and performs their own songs, with influences of rock, folk, punk and blues.

The band began performing at open mic events in dive bars. They earned their first "legit gig" at the Vollrath Tavern, no longer in business, in Fountain Square. From there, they booked bigger and bigger events, such as opening for Leonard Skinner and Bad Company four years ago at Klipsch Music Center, opening for Panic at the Disco at the INDYpendence Day festival three years ago and more.

The band now consists of Jen as vocals/guitar, Patrick on guitar/vocals, Corey Lusk on bass and Kyle Perkon on drums.

Jen describes this third album, "a beautiful piece of art in vinyl format," by Romanas Records, as empathetic.

"Every song that we write, whether it's super happy or really depressed, every song comes with a lot of human truth,"

Jen said. "We're very much about the human connection and experiencing that with our audience, via album or right on stage with them in front of us. The whole point is to experience it together. Our live shows, we like to make them events, give people a reason to come and for it to be a memorable experience. You want them to have a joyous or even emotional experience, feel all the feels. I feel like we achieve that, to some extent, fairly consistently."

The release party on Aug. 12 will also feature live music from bands such as the Knot Brothers, Brother O' Brother and Fame and Fiction. Vesperia will have nine guest musicians in its set.

"It's going to be madness," Jen said. "I'm so excited."

In September, the band will aim to get the album on the road as much as they can. They keep it close to home, typically Indiana, Ohio, Kentucky, Illinois and Wisconsin. Each band member works through the week, allowing them to play on the weekends. Jen works part time at Square Cat Vinyl and spends the rest of her time at home with their two children, Patrick works at Fountain Square Brewery, Kyle at Angie's List and Corey in construction.

Indie Invasion, an organization which started this year, chooses U.S. bands to send to the UK, partnering with a UK band. That band will return to the U.S. to perform here. Indie Invasion covers traveling expenses. Vesperia was scheduled to go in August, but it was rescheduled for October which allows them to perform more gigs.

As for the future, Jen said they all have different goals in mind to some extent.

"It is consistently to create unforgettable experiences for both us as well as our audience," she said. "For me, what's gratifying, is the connections I've been able to make, not only in my hometown. We have buddies and bands all over the place. We have these awesome opportunities to create those experiences and because of that, people want to connect with us even closer."

Kroger celebrates Franklin Twp. grand opening with charitable donations and shopping excitement

FEATURE

By Nicole Davis

Hundreds of customers lined up to get their first glimpse inside of the new Kroger in Franklin Township on Aug. 3.

After the ribbon cutting celebration, employees lined up to greet and cheer on the customers as they entered the store. The first customer to check out for the day, Bill May of Franklin Township, was sent by his family to get the gift card that was awarded to the first 200 shoppers at the door.

"I needed to stop this way anyway," he said. "It seems nice. It's going to be closer and a bit more convenient than the Marketplace on Thompson."

Kroger held a private open house on Aug. 2, where staff awarded donations to local non-profits: $1,000 to Franklin Central Band Boosters, $1,000 to Servant's Heart of Indy, $5,000 to the Fraternal Order of Police Lodge No. 86, $2,500 to RightFit, $2,500 to Keep Indianapolis Beautiful and $27,000 to Gleaners for a food pantry at Daniel Webster School 46.

It's a blessing to see these resources come in," said Bill Boone, chairman of Servant's Heart food pantry.

Ninety percent of families at School 46, serving grades K through 8, struggle with poverty. The partnership between Gleaners and Kroger will give a resource to those families by allowing the school to continue and expand its food pantry.

"We really don't have space for (the pantry), but we have such a need that we felt responsible to make it happen," said Karen Linn, principal, noting that they're building on a 30-year history of partnership with Kroger.

The new 100,000 square-foot grocery store at 8130 E. Southport Rd. is similar to the Kroger Marketplace locations, like at Emerson Avenue and County Line Road, without the apparel. The store includes ClickList, a drive-thru pharmacy, fuel center, bistro with restaurant-quality foods, a specialty cheese shop, wine and beer, organic food, bulk foods and a Starbucks.

"I'm excited to welcome a new store in our township," said Indianapolis City Councilor Brian Mowery, serving District 25. "In a time when Indianapolis is facing food deserts, we're opening new groceries, making meals more accessible in our community. When you look at Acton, there's not a grocery store easily accessible. Now they're not having to go to all the way to Emerson (Avenue). A lot of people are excited about it."

Executive with a Backbeat

Drummer Rusty Hamilton to lead Soul Street in WAMMfest Finale

FEATURE

By Marianne Coil

Rusty Hamilton, drummer and co-founder of Soul Street, always wanted to play the drums. Growing up in North Vernon, Ind., he saw a neighbor was offering to sell a drum set.

"Mom, we have to buy them," he said at various times. His mother finally gave him the set for his birthday.

Now an executive with an information technology company, playing the drums helps to relieve stress from the job.

"There is nothing better than hitting something with a stick."

His band will be the closing act at the annual WAMMfest in Greenwood on Aug. 19. Soul Street will perform from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. at the Craig Park festival celebrating wine, art, music, and microbrew. Sertoma Club sponsors the event to raise money for non-profit groups.

Soul Street has a playlist of 200 to 300 songs in the style of funk, soul, and Motown, Hamilton said. He was waiting to perform at an Indianapolis Colts Training Camp open to the public. The musicians will don their Colts colors once more to provide pre-game entertainment at Lucas Oil Stadium when the Colts take on the Pittsburgh Steelers in November.

Fans of Purdue University football can enjoy the music of Soul Street at tailgate parties this fall. For the big homecoming game against Michigan, the band will play at the Boilermaker Crossing north of Mackey Arena.

The band is making its first appearance at WAMMfest this year, Hamilton said.

The distinctive sound of Soul Street comes from its horn section. At the Colts camp at Warren Central High School, the outdoor audience heard iconic horn riffs from Top 40 hits like "Vehicle," by the Ides of March (1970). A persuasive vocalist delivered the opening lyric, "Hey well I'm a friendly stranger in a black sedan..."

According to soulstreetmusic.com, songs from Prince and Bruno Mars are on the playlist, along with Fenk Shui and its "Here Come the Mummies."

Acquiring the brassy sound of groups like Chicago meant that Hamilton and his co-founder Cory Pitre had to choose between artistic satisfaction and per-person profit. They grew the band against the advice of experienced musicians who warned about adding too many players.

Nightclubs have a limited budget, so the earnings are modest when the fee is divided among more people. But Soul Street is happy with its sound, Hamilton said, noting that as time passes, the band will seek more wedding gigs and corporate shows to increase revenue.

Hamilton's journey in life got a kick start from teachers at Jennings County High School. He played football for three years, and as a senior, he had to choose between commitments to the team and to the marching band. He chose the band out of love for music, but he credits his football coach with delivering a gentle rebuke that sticks with him even now.

Hamilton said he was making excuses for why he wasn't achieving all that he could. In so many words, the football coach told him, "You are 100-percent responsible for your success and you know the person to go to."

After high school, Hamilton spent two years at Indiana University Southeast studying Computer Science with a focus on information systems. He found his first job as an estimator with a construction company in North Vernon, and he began to appreciate the ways in which software systems could enable construction scheduling and cost management.

He joined Catalyst, Inc., (trade name Catalyst USA) in Indianapolis in 1997. He eventually worked his way into sales and became company president in 2015. The firm provides software development, training, and implementation in the industries of construction and engineering, manufacturing, public sector, and power and utilities.

A major effort is a contract with the Pennsylvania Dept. of Transportation to assist in project management. Also, Catalyst has worked on lock-and-dam construction with the Army Corps of Engineers, he said. The corporate Website discloses a case study in which Catalyst helped the Chicago Public Schools to reduce waste and inefficiencies in capital improvements.

Throughout his career, Hamilton has always played in bands, which is how he met Pitre, a guitarist. They founded Soul Street about seven years ago. Despite his responsibilities, Hamilton and the band are able to perform three to four times a month. No one wants to call in a substitute because the members want to be together, he said.

Hamilton calls playing with the band "my joy." Riding his motorcycle and playing golf are hobbies, but appearing with the band is his "favorite thing in the world to do."

An ear for nostalgia

Southside's Carmen Carroll carries on a family tradition of making elephant ears at fairs across the nation

FEATURE

By Nicole Davis

A homemade dough, fried in peanut oil with plenty of cinnamon sugar on top - it's a recipe the Carroll family has used for decades, selling the old-fashioned elephant ears at fairs in multiple states.

A resident of the Garfield Park/Fountain Square area, Carmen Carroll now carries on the business that her father, Art Carroll, started long before she could remember.

Art, who was an auctioneer and at one time owned the Tugboat Cafe restaurant in Fountain Square, initially became a vendor at local fairs by selling football hotdogs from a van. When he switched to elephant ears, he started with a 'stick joint' made of wood with a canvas on top. Then he progressed to serving the dessert out of a trailer.

Carmen was 16 when she began working alongside her father. They would travel all the way to Florida and back.

"Then, the elephant ears were 50 cents," she said. "I remember every time it moved, from $1, $1.50, $2 and now they're $5. My dad sold 'em with a money back guarantee - after one bite, if you don't like it then you get your money back. He'd say, 'but you only get one bite.'"

The price may have changed, but not much else, and Carmen plans to keep it that way. When her father passed away 11 years ago, she purchased the trailer from her family. Her brother has another trailer in which he also serves the elephant ears.

The artwork on her trailer is the same as it was 40 years ago, maintaining that nostalgia, but Carmen has had it repainted and/or wrapped so that the colors don't look worn out. There is a display case that Art had filled with award-winning ribbons and photographs of his six children.

"I try to keep the product the same as my dad had it, and the trailer, because I figure he did good, and I don't want to change anything," she said. "I feel like if I couldn't do it just like my dad, then it's time for me to get out."

Locally, Carmen sets up the trailer at the Marion County Fair each year, selling elephant ears and lemonade. At the Indiana State Fair, happening now through Aug. 20, she said she feels like there are too many elephant ear vendors, so she sets up a tent where she sells wooden roses, rubber ducks, halos, baskets and handmade bracelets. She is always set up in front of Hook's Drug Store, near the exit, so that children can take get their rubber duck on the way out of the gate.

"They say it's the most colorful stand at the fair," she said.

Carmen, with her son, still travels to many of the same fairs that she and her father did, only she has added some.

"The big fair for us was (and is) the Marion County fair," she said. "Everybody knows my dad here and they kind of support me now, too. This year, this woman at the Marion County Fair, she was telling me a story that when she was a little girl, there was this man that worked in the trailer here and he would pull a quarter from behind her ear. That was my dad. Stuff like that happens all the time. Even in Florida, people say that they love my dad."

Carmen spends about six months of the year traveling to different fairs. Over the winter, she'll either take another job or spend her time making the items that she sells at the state fair. She also enjoys cross stitching, which she'll enter into fair contests.

"I pray a lot," Carmen said. "I ask for help from up there, to keep us safe from traveling. We do a lot of praying for no rain."

This year has gone well so far, Carmen said. They were so busy at the Marion County Fair in June that there was a constant line. She was able to join the show, be with the carnival rides and games, at the Hendricks County 4-H Fair in July.

"You can be independent or join the show," she said. "I like being with the show. That's when I feel closest to my dad."

Working a fair is a lot of hard work and not for everyone. Carmen stays in it for the love of the business and the friends she's made along the way.

"It's a good business," she said, "meeting new people and getting to see stuff that you've never seen before. I hope that someone in my family keeps it going."

Alum Wilham to lead Franklin College women's lacrosse program

Athletics – Chris Wilham, a 2014 Franklin College graduate and former assistant coach, has been named the head coach of the women's lacrosse program, announced on July 31 by Director of Athletics Kerry Prather. Wilham has been engaged with the women's lacrosse program since its inception as a club sport in 2011 while he was a student. Having played lacrosse for four years at Center Grove High School, Wilham took an immediate interest in the new women's program at Franklin. He continued to work with the team as it transitioned from a club team to an NCAA-sponsored program back in 2015.

"Chris has invested an enormous amount of time, energy, expertise and passion in our lacrosse program since it was formed," said Prather. He has an impressive understanding of the sport and a good working relationship with our players. I'm confident he can help our team continue on its positive trajectory and chart a bright future for the Grizzlies."

Wilham inherits a program that is coming off back-to-back six-win campaigns. Last year, the Grizzlies finished 6-7 with a 4-5 mark in Ohio River Lacrosse Conference (ORLC) play, placing sixth in the league.

Dwight Simmons will perform a comedic skit about labels and the impact of them at IndyFringe. (Submitted photos)

Greenwood's Dwight Simmons to perform comedy act at IndyFringe

FEATURE

By Rebecca Bennett

Last year, Dwight Simmons performed poetry written by someone else at IndyFringe. This year, he's ready to take on the challenge of performing his own work.

"It's a lot of emotions. Going through writing it and finishing it," he says. "Nerves and excitement and anxiousness, it's like an emotional cocktail swirling around at all times."

IndyFringe, taking place Aug. 18 to 27, is an event that gives an opportunity to see local, talented acts. Fringe showcases a wide array of talent, including poetry, dance, theatre and comedians. One such local comedian, Simmons, will perform Seeking Consciousness, an act which aims to answer the question why humans have a need for labels and the effects they can have from adolescence into adulthood.

Simmons, who now splits his residence between Greenwood and Broad Ripple, is from Indianapolis and graduated from Carmel High School. He went on to graduate from Indiana University, tours across the country doing comedy shows.

He has been a comedian for about nine years, getting into comedy in college by participating in open mic night at the Comedy Attic in Bloomington. As a comedian Simmons has performed all over Indiana especially the Indy area.

"I feel like I've performed in every nook and cranny of the city," Simmons said.

However, he's also been traveling the country, doing stand up all over from Chicago to Atlanta and New York to Los Angeles, in everything from bars to comedy clubs.

Simmons says the thing he likes most about being a comedian is honing the craft and going through the process of writing a joke.

"Taking a concept and turning it into a finished joke is not something a lot of people see," Simmons said.

"It's a lot of writing and testing then writing and re-writing," he said. "It's sort of like this math equation you're constantly figuring out in front of a live audience."

One of the things he likes about the writing the equation is that it's continually changing and evolving.

"It'd be nice to say that it's finished, but it never really is," Simmons says.

The show he's debuting at IndyFringe has taken him nearly a year to write and it's delves into the need to place titles and labels on ourselves and others as well as some personal stories.

So many ways to show support

Houses light up blue at night. People are sporting “thin blue line” bracelets. Signs cover the Southside in memory of Southport police Lt. Aaron Allan who lost his life in the line of duty on July 27. Lt. Allan’s car was literally covered in flowers and other gifts. We’ve never seen a stronger backing of our law enforcement officers here on the Southside than we have seen in the past two weeks.

After hearing about the death of Lt. Allan, the community began eagerly looking at ways to show their support. Fundraisers were popping up everywhere we looked. At a time like this, it’s best to be aware of which fundraisers to contribute. The Southport Police Department, with the help of Indiana Going Blue, released a list that has been approved by the police department, stating events with which the proceeds benefit the Allan family. We would encourage those who still want to contribute, to do so through those legitimate places:

- Mail a check to Stacy Allan to Southport Police Department, 6901 Derbyshire Rd., Southport IN 46227.
- Car Show by Indianapolis Top Notch Mafia on Aug. 12, 3 - 7 p.m. at Southport High School.
- T-shirts and window decals at libtac.com/Indiana-Going-Blue-c-119.html.
- Memorial dog tags through Scotty’s Laster Accents, find them on facebook.
- Drop off donations at Southport Lawn Equipment, 7101 S. Madison Ave., Indianapolis or Stacked Pickle Southport, Address: 7040 McFarland Blvd, Indianapolis.

The show of support has been extremely impressive. Let’s not forget the sacrifices these men and women make for us every single day, and carry on this strong show of support even as time passes on.

The Southside Times welcomes letters to the editor in good taste.

★ Stars: To the thousands people who lined up for Lt. Aaron Allan’s funeral procession, showing their support for not only the fallen officer, but all of those who serve and protect.

★ Stars: To the Greenwood Police Department for hosting its first Night out Against Crime. The police held several family centered stations including food vendors, games, a flag that could be signed with condolences for the family of fallen Southport Police officer Lt. Aaron Allan.

★ Stars: To Greater Greenwood Chamber President and CEO Christian Maslowski for being the first Greenwood chamber executive to be elected board chair of the Indiana State Chamber Executives Association for 2017-2018.

Guests filled Christy’s auction house for dinner on Aug. 5.

★ Stars: To Christy’s of Indiana for being the host of an after-funeral dinner to hundreds of guests on Aug. 5 after the service of Lt. Aaron Allan. Also, thanks to the numerous local business which donated food for the dinner.

END OF WATCH

A community says goodbye to Southport Lt. Aaron Allan while showing their support for law enforcement

Residents across the city of Indianapolis lined the streets from downtown to the Southside and back to Crown Hill Cemetery on Aug. 5 as they mourned the loss of Southport Police Lt. Aaron Allan.

Allan, a six-year officer for the Southport Police Department, lost his life in the line of duty on July 27. He responded to a car crash at South Madison and Maynard avenues. The vehicle was inverted with the driver and a passenger still inside. He leaned in to ask the driver, 28-year-old Jason Brown, if he was ok, when the driver shot at Allan multiple times, striking and killing him.

Funeral services were held Saturday morning at Banker's Life Fieldhouse, where hundreds of law enforcement officers and city officials filed into the seats.

"Aaron loved his wife, his children, hunting and fishing, and police work," said Southport Police Chief Thomas Vaughn during his speech at Banker's Life. "I think it was pretty much in that order." He later continued, "I cannot be more proud of the Southport police officers who do this job everyday without pay. That takes a strong commitment... You and all the officers across this nation get dressed every day with eyes wide open to the risk of not coming home. I want you all to know that the community is overwhelmingly grateful for you, and as we can see in the last week, (they) support us."

That support was demonstrated when the funeral procession left Banker's Life and made its way to the Southside where Allan could drive by his police station one last time. There, over the police radios, the 10-42 was conducted, announcing Lt. Allan's end of watch.

"There is no greater love than a man who would lay down his life for another," came the voice over the radio. "Southport Police Department, Lt. Aaron W. Allan, Southport 10, this 10-42. He has gone home for the final time."

Throughout the route, residents stood tall, holding signs, saluting and waving as the procession went by, ending at Crown Hill Cemetery where a final service was held with the Gordon Pipers playing musical tribute, a flag presentation and officers, family and friends placing white carnations with a drop of red onto the casket to say their goodbyes.

Detroit

One of the year's best

MOVIE REVIEW

By Adam Staten

In America, there are certain topics sure to immediately stir up emotions, often resulting in screaming, shouting and hurt feelings. Abortion, immigration and gun control are some of the most polarizing issues today and that's not likely to change anytime in the near future or beyond. However, there is one hot button issue that seems to resurface every few months, in some form or another, and not just around election time when politicians use polarizing topics as a lazy way to energize their base. One recently-released flick deals directly with this sensitive issue: race.

Detroit is the story of the 1967 riots in the Motor City, focusing on one deadly incident in particular. The film opens as members of Detroit's Police Department are in the middle of busting an illegal underground nightclub. This incident sets off the devastating and destructive riots that ultimately pits people against one another simply due to the color of their skin.

With tensions at an all-time high and police patrolling the streets, the Detroit featured in the film looks more like a war-torn city in the Middle East than the USA. After hearing what appears to be gunfire from a high rise building, a couple members of the Detroit Police Department gather several people in a hotel room for a night of intense, abusive and even deadly intimidation tactics. They are searching for the supposed sniper and convinced that the suspect is someone in the room, the officers will stop at nothing until they get a confession.

Detroit is a nearly two-and-a-half hour film and for most of its runtime, much like the city at that time, maintains a sense that something big, destructive and deadly could happen at any moment. However, the film starts off rather slow, with an unfocused, unclear story line and takes an inordinate amount of time to introduce main characters. The film feels distracted, jumping from place to place, before ultimately settling into the main story.

After finding its footing, the film, due to the excellent direction, develops and keeps an edge-of-your-seat type atmosphere. The film moves along with one tension-filled scene after another, building to and finally resulting in a somewhat disappointing ending.

Detroit is a well-directed film, that it is entirely too long, mainly to its somewhat unfocused story. However, Detroit is a fact-based film that is both entertaining and one of the better films of 2017.

Mac and cheese redo

NUTRITION

By Wendell Fowler

“Nom, nom, nom” ... everyone loves Mac and Cheese! However, a recent news story revealed there were potentially dangerous chemicals and artificial food colorings lurking in popular, brand name powdered mac and cheese mixes. When you discover the real thing, and how easy it is to make from scratch, you’ll forget all about the little boxes of instant nothingness.

- Hard for me to image that something so ubiquitously idolized comes in a simple little blue box made by a machine.
- There is a price to pay when we let strangers cook our meals.
- A study of 30 cheese products found 29 tested for higher levels of phthalates than expected. (the Coalition for Safer Food Processing & Packaging) Source: HLN
- Phthalates are so ubiquitous, we all have traces in our bodies.
- EPA put phthalates on a list of chemicals that “may present a risk” to human health.
- What are phthalates? phthal-ate. Phthalates are a group of chemicals used in hundreds of products, such as toys, vinyl flooring and wall covering, detergents, lubricating oils, food packaging, pharmaceuticals, blood bags and tubing, and personal care products, such as nail polish, hair sprays, aftershave lotions, soaps, shampoos, perfumes and other fragrance preparations.

- Phthalate esters are mainly used as plasticizers. (Wikipedia)
- They disrupt hormone activity and may be causing a slow and steady demasculinizing of men.
- In Europe, foods with Yellow No. 5 are required to include a warning label that says, “This product may have adverse effect on activity and attention in children.”
- Kraft remove the artificial dyes from its European line, and uses paprika and beta-carotene to add color. However, the company has not make the same change in the US.

Summary of Major Findings

1. Phthalates were detected in nearly every cheese product tested (29 of 30 varieties). The testing identified 10 different phthalates in all, with up to six in a single product.
2. Average phthalate levels were more than four times higher in macaroni and cheese powder.

Weekly Devotion

1 Then verily the first covenant had also ordinances of divine service, and a worldly sanctuary.

2 For there was a tabernacle made; the first, wherein was the candlestick, and the table, and the shewbread; which is called the sanctuary.

3 And after the second veil, the tabernacle which is called the Holiest of all;

HEBREWS 9:1-3

The first covenant made a people God's people for time but not for eternity. The second extends the promises of God into eternity itself.

The Jews saw the kingdom of God as being synonymous with the kingdom of the Jews. Jesus came and proclaimed that the kingdom of God was available to all of us regardless of our earthly birth. The kingdom of God was dependent upon a different birth, as far superior birth than that of the flesh. To enter into the kingdom of God one had to be born-again. One could not see (understand) what Jesus was proclaiming until they were born-again. What was true then is also true now for no one can lead you to the truth that Jesus taught until the Holy Spirit opens it up to be understood. Jesus said of Him that "He will lead you into all truth".

The first chamber of the Old Testament Tabernacle typifies our salvation. The second typifies our sanctification for it is the chamber of the holiest of all holy places. This also typifies the place where Christ, our High Priest, is now. He is there making intercession for us but we are allowed to come into His presence there and thereby, through Him, into the holiest of all places, the very throne of God. What a privilege the second Covenant has given to us that we may go boldly to the throne of God with our petitions. We need not go through any human agent or agency but through the Son of God. It is over whelming when you stop to give it the consideration that it deserves.

For this I am very thankful and will praise Him, Hallelujah!

God bless and go and have a great day.

Paul A. Kirby is the pastor at the Church of God at 3939 S. Emerson Ave.
