Indiana McDonald's restaurants to hire 10,500 employees this summer

Good news for job seekers who are interested in getting an education while working: McDonald's and its independent franchisees are going to hire about 10,500 restaurant employees during the busy summer season. As well, McDonald's is allocating $150 million over five years to its global Archways to Opportunity education program, including lowering eligibility requirements from nine months to 90 days of employment and dropping weekly shift minimums from 20 to 15 hours, making new summer restaurant employees eligible by the end of the season.

Mayor Joe Hogsett launches 'Indy Achieves'

Indianapolis Mayor Joe Hogsett has announced a program to make post-secondary credentials and degrees available to every Indianapolis resident.

Indy Achieves, created by the Indianapolis Promise Task Force, will have three major responsibilities: administer the Indy Promise scholarship, which guarantees free tuition, books and fees for every Marion County scholar recipient in 2019; administer a completion grant, expected to provide more than $1 million a year in grants to Marion County students of all ages pursuing high-demand degree programs; and organize private and philanthropic resources for Marion County residents pursuing a post-secondary degree, including increased participation in state and federal scholarship programs, timely FAFSA completion and postgraduate connection to employment through EmployIndy and Ascend.

Four Benedictine Sisters celebrate
50-year jubilee of taking their vows

By Nicole Davis

They didn't know it then, but they were breaking barriers.

Sisters Juliann Babcock, Angela Jarboe, Mary Sue Freiberger and Mary Luke Jones entered the convent shortly after Vatican II, a time of big change for Catholic Church practices. As Catholic nuns, they received their higher education at a Methodist college, switched from wearing the habit to more culturally-relevant attire and were even able to discern their own career paths - things that were unheard of previously.

On June 9, the four Sisters will celebrate their Golden Jubilee, marking 50 years since they took their vows in 1968.

"We were one of the last of the classes to enter after high school," Jones said. "This is a commitment we made when we were 18 years old. There was something in all of us that knew that this is what we wanted. I used to say to people I would not have been any more ready to get married when I was 18 than fly to the moon. I wouldn't have even considered it. For some reason, this life attracted me and when I came, as far as I was concerned, it was forever."

Ten students entered the convent, or monastery, on Sept. 7, 1966. They took their vows two years later in 1968. Five women eventually took their final vows. One classmate passed away shortly after their 25th jubilee.

"The church gives us plenty of time to realize this is the life we want to lead for the rest of our lives," Jones said. "I never had any doubts, ever. I feel that's just because of the grace of God. I thank God for that."

Freiberger, Jarboe and Babcock were previously students at Our Lady of Grace Academy, a boarding and day school that opened in 1956, eventually closing in 1978. Jones wasn't a student there, but attended that year's graduation ceremony in support of a friend.

The Sisters were one of the first classes to attend Indiana Central University, now University of Indianapolis, a Methodist college. They needed an education and the closest Catholic college, Marian University, was on the other side of town whereas Indiana Central was 10 minutes away.

"We had this big, international harvester van and every morning we'd pile in there with our books," Jones said. "They called us the God Squad. It was quite the scene."

The Sisters also formed a band in 1979, the Beech Grove Benedictines, writing their own music, singing and playing their instruments as a deputation team for Indiana Central. They performed at university events and around the city. That venture ended in 2001. Today, they have a total of five tapes/CDs, still for sale at the Benedict Inn Retreat & Conference Center.

"We were young and probably naive," Jarboe said. "We were out, we were among the people. It was exciting."

The Sisters all majored in elementary education, except for Freiberger, who concentrated in mathematics. They all went on to teach.

Babcock later served as vocation director, formation director, subprioress and then prioress of the community for six years. She was one of three sisters who took the former academy building and formed the Benedict Inn in 1981.

Jones served as principal of Christ the King for nine years before returning to the monastery as director of development and later director of the Benedict Inn.

Jarboe started out as an elementary teacher where she began looking for something that would allow her to work with adults. That led her to become director of religious education in Springfield, Ohio for 21 years. She earned a degree in theology from University of Dayton in 2001 to keep up with her work.

Freiberger started in the math department at Our Lady of Grace Academy, getting promoted to head of the math department before the academy closed. She taught at Providence High School and then Cathedral High School for 27 years.

Their vocations may have put them on separate paths but they eventually reunited.

"All roads lead to Our Lady of Grace," Jones said.

Jarboe returned to the monastery in 2010 where she now does programming at Benedict Inn. Jones returned her position as director of development, where she remains an active member of the greater Beech Grove community. Freiberger is an avid gardener who enjoys spending time at the Benedict Inn's Peace & Nature Garden and painting. Babcock's talents include playing guitar, organ, pottery and calligraphy.

The Sisters will celebrate their 50-year jubilee with a Mass and dinner with family and friends on June 9. They will renew the vows that they took five decades ago by reading them aloud during the Mass.

"The church gives us plenty of time to realize this is the life we want to lead for the rest of our lives. I never had any doubts, ever. I feel that's just because of the grace of God. I thank God for that."

"This community has always celebrated jubilees," Jarboe said. "I thought jubilee were always someone else's celebration. When we were young, it feels like it was so far away. All of a sudden, it's me. You just live your life and all of a sudden, it happens."

The women who came to Our Lady of Grace at 18 years old said they are looking forward to the celebration. Who better to celebrate it with than each other, the Sisters who have essentially grown up together and supported one another in their lifelong walk of faith?

"We did everything together," Jarboe said. "We worked together. We played together."

Jones added, "This has been a wonderful life. We're a member of that community that supports us, assists us and takes care of us. We give back as good as we get."

What inspired you to become a Catholic nun?

Sister Angela Jarboe

As a boarder at Our Lady of Grace Academy, when Sister Angela Jarboe wasn't in school, she and her family were always at church.

"We knew the Sisters on a first-name basis," she said. "There was always a Sister in the picture somewhere, either a teacher or my mom knew them. I grew up from second grade on knowing I wanted to be a Sister like Sister Mary Carol who is still living here. My second grade teacher is still living here in this community. I think that is so fascinating. You just love your teachers. The Sisters were always so happy. That struck me."

Sister Mary Luke Jones

A graduate of Seymour High School, Sister Mary Luke Jones enrolled at Purdue University to study pharmacy, although it wasn't exactly what she wanted to do. She and her siblings were raised Catholic, although her father was not of the Catholic faith.

"He would participate in first communions, confirmations and was very supportive of our Catholic faith, but he did not practice it himself," Jones said. "His father was a pharmacist and owned a drug store. My dad was going to Purdue to become a pharmacist but was drafted in WWII and never went back to school. This dream of being a pharmacist was visited on me."

Yet, there was something about the Sisters she grew up with that she admired and desired to follow in their footsteps.

"I was a bit hesitant when I decided to come here," Jones said. "At that time, the Sisters were either teachers or domestics, a sister who lived on the mission and prepared meals, did the laundry. Now, it's much broader. To think of being a pharmacist and Benedictine, those two things didn't jive. I said to my dad, 'I know you always wanted me to be a pharmacist.' He said, 'Yes, I did, but if you want to be a Sister, I just want you to be the best one you can be.' He was very supportive of this community and the life I had chosen. It was very kind of him."

Sister Mary Sue Freiberger

Sister Mary Sue Freiberger is from a Catholic family, growing up on a farm in Southern Indiana close to their church. In her youth, she wanted to be a forest ranger. She was always outside, sitting in a tree at home or working on the farm. God had another calling for her. Taught by the Sisters of St. Benedict of Ferdinand, she always knew what she was actually going to do.

"I was going to be a Sister," she said. "Our whole class became teachers. That's just what we did in those days. My classmates mostly changed to other careers. I stayed a teacher for 45 years, teaching high school mathematics. In between, I've done a lot of other things."

She later continued, "I touched a lot of lives. I didn't want to tell someone how to go to God, but I could just be the person I was. I couldn't tell someone how to be, but I could teach them mathematics."

Freiberger still finds ways to enjoy the outdoors through gardening and spending time in Our Lady of Grace's Peace & Nature Garden.

St. Mark's brings food and fellowship to annual Funfest

By Brian R. Ruckle

The St. Mark's Community Funfest will bring another year of food, fun and fellowship to the corner of US 31 and Edgewood Avenue.

This year's Funfest is scheduled for June 15 - 16.

This year's main raffle grand prize is $3,000 cash or a tuition grant of up to $4,500, for a child or grandchild. The tuition grant will be accepted at any South Deanery Catholic School or Roncalli High School. Second prize is $1,000 cash and third is $500 cash. An heirloom quilt will also be raffled.

Chairperson Jim O'Brien said the event will build on efforts last year to represent some of the Southside cultures with ethnic entertainment and food.

There will be plenty of activities for young children. The dozens of games include coin toss and pop a shot. There will be a photo booth, pony rides and a dunk tank. O'Brien said he expects the nine inflatables to be a big draw. With a $15 wristband, children can play all night on the inflatables.

"We made lots of smiles on children's faces and we want to continue that tradition," O'Brien said.

Adult fun on both nights at 7 p.m. includes Monte Carlo outside in the beer garden and Bingo in Schafer Hall.

The festival has complete dinners prepared by Valle Vista Country Club including a drink and dessert for adults at $7, seniors for $6 and children $4. These home-cooked dinners will be offered in the parish's air-conditioned, multipurpose room from 5 - 8 p.m. each evening. Friday's special is St. Mark's popular BBQ. and Saturday's is a fried chicken dinner. In addition, mobile truck vendors will attend including Mrs. Curl Ice Cream on all three nights. Sample Mashcraft Beer's various brews on Friday.

Live music includes a 30-piece brass band called Crossroads Brass Band from 6:30 - 7:30 p.m. Friday and Third Generation from 8 p.m. - midnight. Saturday will feature Ray Cumberland and Friends from 6 - 7 p.m. and the Woomblies from 8:30 p.m. to midnight.

Nuggets of Southport history

HAUNTS & JAUNTS

By Rick Hinton

Southport has a varied history. Most small towns do. Southport Road (once known as Union Street) moved east from Madison Avenue. The Old Southport Cemetery was not always a graveyard, but once a farm.

Jacob and Mary Smock of Kentucky made their way north to Indiana, settling into the wilderness area of Southport. In May 1822, land was purchased and the work began. The property was cleared and the first cabin built by the summer of 1823. This became the "Smock Farm." Two of Jacob's brothers made the journey and themselves settled a little farther south in Greenwood. Legend says the first school in Southport (likely called the Mudhouse) was built on Smock's land during this period. The log structure also doubled as a church (they had their priorities), eventually being replaced with a new frame school. It was destroyed as the result of a tornado and Smock got out of the school business.

This is where history gets a tad fuzzy...

The former Southport Baptist Church (now Bethel Community Church) was built on the east end of the former Smock's farm in 1896. There are current members who feel strongly the church has some Presbyterian ties. It still stands in prominence on Southport Road today. There was a cemetery associated with it – Southport Baptist Cemetery; the very same graveyard exists today. When did the Smock Farm become a graveyard? And church life? Apparently there were always incarnations of a church on the property associated with the Smock's. South side historian Bob Alloway states that by 1920, the church could no longer keep up the cemetery, deeding it to the Perry Township Trustees. That continues to this day. Grass is cut and the frontage wall was replaced five years ago (close to the original design). "The steeple above the bell tower had been leaking rain water into the church for a long time, and continued to leak even after repairs," Bob said. "The steeple was finally torn off and a pitched roof built over the bell tower." In 2012 the church experienced a tragedy when a mentally unstable woman shot and killed Pastor Jaman Iseminger as members gathered for a cemetery clean-up project. The church has carried on.

The cemetery went through years of neglect, with Halloween especially vicious for vandalism. Frank Kautsky remembers a time in the past, walking between the cemetery fence line and the church parking lot to go down to the creek to fish. He remembers seeing the Brewer plot with wooden tombstones not in great shape. In March 2011 Southside Times writer and eventual editor, Nicole Palmer (Davis), covered workshops to restore the monuments in the graveyard. This became a reality when in August of that year 50+ folks gathered at the cemetery to put into practice what they'd learned.

Samuel and Mary Bryan are buried there. Jacob and Mary Smock are not; however, there are Smocks present. Did these early south side pioneers know one another? Absolutely! The Little Buck Creek Baptist Church, organized in 1832 and about a mile southwest of the present location, has on its roster Jacob & Mary Smock and Samuel, Mary, Luke and Polly Bryon. Bryan is spelled as Bryon (most likely a transcription error), yet this leaves little doubt they're the same people, and worshipping in the same church. (This places the Bryan's in Southport about two – three years earlier than suspected.) In 1837 the Smock's transferred ownership of their farm site to the relocation of the church, with the cemetery being established that year.

Festival Country Indiana lures visitors with local favorites

Kenneth Kosky completes first year as director

FEATURE

By Marianne Coil

In his first year promoting Johnson County as a place of tourist attractions, Kenneth Kosky learned to stop talking about Johnson County – a necessary paradox in the world of marketing.

During his tenure as public relations director for the tourism agency in Porter County, Kosky met Roger Brooks, an internationally known branding expert who consulted with local officials. Kosky said Brooks told them no one goes to a county for a vacation.

For example, campers go to Yellowstone National Park but don't even know which county it's in. Thus, in appreciation of local geography, the Porter County group changed its name to Indiana Dunes Tourism, Kosky said.

When he became tourism director for the Johnson County Convention, Visitor and Tourism Commission in April 2017, Kosky was in charge of "Journey Johnson County." He called in Brooks, and his advice was to identify what local residents liked about their communities and to rebrand the program by targeting a unique feature.

"The first order of business was to tap the people who have the knowledge," Kosky said. He inquired of almost everyone he met, "What's your favorite thing about Johnson County?"

FROM THE EDITOR

June is Alzheimer's &amp; Brain Awareness Month

Every 65 seconds, someone develops Alzheimer's disease in the United States. In Indiana, more than 100,000 people are living with the disease. In addition, there are 338,000 unpaid caregivers. Chances are, you know someone who is taking care of someone with Alzheimer's. Either way, Alzheimer's takes its toll, emotionally, physically and financially.

This month is Alzheimer's & Brain Awareness Month. Indiana Governor Eric Holcomb invites Hoosiers to raise awareness and take action through the Alzheimer's Association Greater Indiana Chapter's 65 Ways to Go Purple.

There are many ways you can help fight the disease: attend an education program or support group, assist with raising funds, understand the benefits of early diagnosis and clinical research and knowing where to find support and resources.

How can you tell if someone you love may be suffering from Alzheimer's? Check out 10 warning signs at alz.org/10signs. Where can you find some support? The Association's Livewell website, at alz.org/living\_with\_alzheimers has video clips of people in the early stages of the disease and have just learned they have been diagnosed. Those with the disease can learn how to live healthy and how to find the strength moving forward.

The Longest Day is an event held on June 21 (the longest day of the year). The day is designed to help Hoosiers with the financial expenses of the disease. Festival Country continued from page 9.

Kicking around names, the commission settled on Festival Country Indiana. "What we finally came down to was that every weekend, there's something going on," he said.

Collecting anecdotal evidence is critical to the promotional effort. Kosky compiles Top 10 lists in various categories and uses social media to publish the results. Destinations are rated by contributors.

Some lists are for types of food, such as the Top 10 places for treats. Another is for tenderloins. Kosky singled out long-time volunteer Don Cummings, who went with his daughter to many restaurants to rate the tenderloins. The pair came up with a Top 10 list that has an extra spot.

To assist in the development of new attractions, the campaign has given grants to 11 organizations staging events and after the award of seed money, the financial support will phase out over time.

"If we're going to be Festival Country Indiana, we need a robust line-up," he said, explaining the reason for the grants totaling $27,000.

This Saturday, one of the recipients, the Johnson County Public Library, will stage the Little Library on the Prairie Festival at the Trafalgar branch. With activities and booths inside and on the grounds, the pioneer festival will offer music, crafts, storytelling and a pie-baking contest.

Tourism products in the planning stages include the construction of extreme sports parks, and the scheduling of musical entertainment on Friday and Saturday nights from June to September in the downtown districts of Johnson County cities and towns.

A graduate of Portage High School and Ball State University, Kosky was a reporter for the Vidette-Messenger and the Times of Northwest Indiana for 22 years, before he joined Indiana Dunes Tourism, where he worked for over six years. He and his wife, Anicia, have a son, Ian, who is a student at Culver Military Academy.

Getting to know Ryan...

- I've played guitar since I was 10.
- I absolutely love reading. A few times a year the library near Ivy Tech does a sale where you can buy a whole bag of books for $7. I make sure we go to every single sale.
- I love yard sales and flea markets. It's fun to find some of the cool things that other people aren't interested in anymore.

How did Ryan do it?

BEST ADVICE:

I've actually gotten the same advice from a number of different people over the years: As long as you provide a good product or service, you never have to apologize for not being the cheapest.

KEEP IN MIND:

You always have to keep in mind that everyone has their own feelings or opinions. Especially in this day and age, it seems like a lot of people don't remember that when they communicate with others (and) it makes it more difficult to have a relationship with anybody whether it's a friendship or business relationship. It's important to keep in mind everyone feels their own thing.

WHY DO YOU OWN YOUR OWN BUSINESS?

To be perfectly honest, I never saw myself working for anybody for the rest of my career.

SOMETHING UNIQUE ABOUT YOUR BUSINESS:

The networking component of it is what makes us unique. We want to help you, no matter what, whether you being able to be our client or not. We want you to succeed in building your own business no matter what it is.

WORDS TO LIVE BY:

Open In Indiana

Henry promotes networking sessions to help small businesses

By Mark Ambrogio

Ryan Henry's mission is to help other small business flourish.

"One of the ways we've worked to help small businesses get the word out about themselves is we created a networking organization late last year called Open In Indiana," said Henry, a south side Indianapolis resident who co-owns Henry Marketing Group with his wife, Carly. "It's a free small business networking organization. We currently have seven different meetings throughout central Indiana."

One of those meeting locations is at the Southside Business Initiative, co-working building at 6825 Madison Ave, where the Henrys are members. Those meetings are held the first and third Friday every month. Henry serves as leader of those along with downtown Indianapolis and Carmel.

"Networking with Open In Indiana benefits members by creating an environment where new members feel welcome and where all members can connect, find support, and learn new techniques to help them build their own brand," Carly said.

Henry, 29, said the SBI meeting typically draws eight to 10 people, Diane Smith, a Crestwood Village South resident, leads a weekly Open In Indiana meeting in Crestwood.

"What I get from hosting a network group is it gives all of us an opportunity to come together on one accord and bounce ideas each other about how we can improve in our business endeavors," Smith said. "I just enjoy hosting a network group. Ryan Henry is such an awesome leader. It's been a very important person in my journey."

There will be another south side meeting, starting June 20, once a month, run by Carly, at The Healthy Food Cafe. There are meetings in Carmel and Fishers, which launched June 11. All the meetings are free to attend.

"All the groups operate as non-industry specific meetings, meaning we don't just want one web guy, we don't just want one insurance rep," Henry said. "Each business has unique niche it works best with. For example, since I have an IT (Information Technology) background I do a lot of connecting with IT guys who have since become members. We have two different IT professionals that have pretty much come to every meeting; you normally think they're in competition but one of them does the physical repair of the system in-house. The second IT member only does Cloud computing implementation. He doesn't do anything as far as the monitoring and repair of the system. So they are able to work together even though they are technically in the same industry."

Henry said certain topics of the Open In Indiana meetings are more popular than others. Each meeting leader chooses an activity or topic.

"Most of it is top-level overview of components of business marketing tools," Henry said. "Those topics are available for our meeting leaders to use. The meeting leaders can also choose an activity, like an icebreaker game that gets everybody active and participating in the group."

Henry said he recently opened up the sessions to guest speakers.

Members are also encouraged to join the OpenInIndiana.com online directory and forum, Carly said.

"We share these business listings, events, and promotions from OpenInIndiana.com on social media and at networking events, to help connect our members with our community," Carly said.

Henry said they continually share on social media all the information members share on the website.

"We have some networks that target consumers, which is us promoting our members' content to the general public," Henry said. "It doesn't matter whether or not you become a customer of Henry Marketing Group or not, this membership is free and open to the public. It's not contingent on purchasing anything from us. It doesn't matter what industry you come from or how big your company is."

The Southside Business Initiative is part of the Indiana Co-Working Passport.

"What that means is one day every month I can use my membership to access any of the other affiliated co-working spaces in the state of Indiana," he said. "That means when I do have to travel out of Indianapolis, as long as it's part of the co-working passport, I can request access."

Henry previously was running an IT company, which focused on small businesses.

"Most of our clients weren't asking us to do IT-related things for them," Henry said. "They were asking us to do things like build their website, manage their social media and otherwise use some of the other tools that are out there to get word out about your business. We decided to close the IT group and start Henry Marketing Group (in 2017) because it more accurately described what our clients were looking for. All the expertise we learned for Henry Marketing Group was what we learned ourselves from starting the IT company and trying to build that up."

How is your garden this summer? Are you growing leaders or followers?

By Mike Heffner

One of the toughest things to do as a leader is to cultivate and grow future leaders. It's easy to find yourself surrounded by a good group of effective and efficient people but then realize there isn't anyone being developed into the next leader. In order to make sure that happens you have to make sure you are planting the seeds and then providing the guidance as the fertilizer to produce the future leader needed. If the business is built around getting all the direction and input from one person, this will limit the growth and can create burnout of both the leader and the followers. If your goal is to groom others to become leaders, then below are some things to think about:

1. Look to mentor others – most likely you've looked up to someone, make sure you are doing the same for others. Think about how that leader made you feel special.
2. How you make decisions matter – the way you carry yourself as you lead and gain input from your team will shape and groom how others make decisions when given the chance.
3. Don't look to get the credit – look to give the credit to others. Leaders who only look for the personal win and don't share the success will likely not empower others.
4. Failure is what allows others to grow – the fear of making a mistake won't allow the risks that are needed to learn and win. You won't reap what you don't sow.

5. Take time to listen - you hired individuals with ideas. Take time to hear them. Ask questions and dig into the ideas. Future leaders need to learn how to peel back the onion to uncover the hidden thinking.

6. Individualize – like every plant, every individual grows and is motivated in a different way. Find what motivates others and utilize their strengths to help them grow and fill the leadership voids that exist.

I have received the greatest joy seeing individuals grow and a team succeed through the leadership of others. I also have had some of my greatest frustrations when members of a team don't accept or step up to fill the challenge or leadership gap. I have found when that frustration comes along, I have to step back and evaluate my leadership style and make sure it's working for those on the team. No different than a gardener who creates great produce because it was carefully cared for; when we focus our energy on helping others succeed it's amazing how we are the ones that end up with the blessings.

Five Points Kennels adds space for dogs & cats

Business – Five Points Kennels, Inc., located in southeast Indianapolis, just opened an expanded boarding, daycare, training and grooming practice in its original 15-year-old building on Five Points Road. Owners Ann and Kevin Stickford nearly doubled Five Points' size by adding 12,000 square feet of space. Five Points Kennels can now accommodate 150 dogs and 60 cats overnight, over 50 dogs in daycare and 25 dogs for grooming. Part of the expansion also includes a lobby and prep kitchen. Twenty people are employed at Five Points Kennels. Ann Stickford anticipates Five Points will add 8-12 employees in the next several months. The Stickfords financed the remodeling construction and bought new equipment with a loan from the U.S. Small Business Administration 504 program through Star Financial Bank and Indiana State-wide Certified Development Corporation.

How to get fined For GDPR violations

By Andrew Angle

Recent waves of identity theft, data breaches and congressional hearings about Facebook are driving media attention toward data privacy topics. Right now the European Union's new 200+ page legal framework known as the General Data Protection Regulation that took effect in May is striking fear among Web marketers worldwide.

Fines for GDPR non-compliance can reach €20 million Euros ($23 million) or 4 percent of revenue, whichever is greater. Not only does the law apply to electronic communications from Europe but even from Europeans who happen to be traveling. Becoming GDPR compliant offers benefits beyond avoiding fines, since it spells out some best practices in handling online visitor data.

Have you noticed sites now showing pop-ups asking you to click an "Accept" button to acknowledge that you read and agree with the site's privacy policy and the use of cookies to personalize your visit? That and the many privacy policy updates filling your inbox are motivated by the GDPR.

I'm not a lawyer, so don't take this as legal advice. Blogs on the subject lean toward suggesting that a business would have to seriously abuse common sense to actually get fined.

From designspace.co/gdpr, here's my paraphrased list of how to get busted for GDPR violations:

1. Abuse your European contact list to royally tick off lots of Europeans.
2. Sell visitors' names and email addresses to slimy spammers peddling everything from filthy links and Nigerian prince scams.
3. Not only omit a privacy policy from your site but bypass reasonable privacy policy practices, such as letting your contacts unsubscribe to your obnoxious emails and texts.
4. Ignore direct requests to be removed from your email list.
5. Demonstrate that you have no intention of abiding by any part of the GDPR rule.

In the wake of learning about said GDPR rule and with insufficient time or budget to rewrite clients' privacy policies, we took the "sledgehammer to a thumbtack" approach of blocking all traffic from outside of the USA. That took 15 minutes. These local sites don't serve Europe anyway. Besides, this could eliminate nearly all data scraping and hacking attempts, since all of them I have seen originated beyond U.S. borders. After revising our privacy policy and opt-ins, we might lift the foreign traffic ban. Or maybe not. Either way, it seems more likely that abusing your contact list will cost you more from lost customers than from fines imposed by a foreign government.

PEER TO PEER

Success breeds success: Here is where you spend your time

By Howard Hubler

From time to time I extend my extensive resume to public speaking. I am all for free speech; that is the only kind that I get. Well, that is where I found myself at the abnormally early time of 7:30 at Ruth's Chris Steak House a few weeks ago. I was the unpaid attraction for a group of high achieving men and women from all around central Indiana. With the notable exception of my minor league endeavor, the past speakers read like a Who's Who of Indiana business leadership.

While most of central Indiana executives were home just waking up or brushing their teeth, this room was chocked full of people that simply wanted to be the best of their craft. They were there to listen to all of the wisdom that highly skilled local business leaders could offer. The speakers had two tasks: give their personal story of how they achieved their measure of success and offer some pearls of wisdom in the process. My story was my story; my pearl of wisdom was what I had written about over the last couple of months, "process management."

Many people use this term in a business context but they really do not know the working definition. The definition as I understand it is a follows. It is a repeatable activity with a better than average predictable outcome. Imagine a store with five employees all handling production or customers or phones all in a way that they feel most comfortable with, but no two people doing their tasks the same. To the experienced observer there were bits and pieces of "best practices" accomplished by each of the staff, but none had all of the pieces put together.

Imagine this: that you were at this company for a day as a paid consultant and you want to make a marked improvement on your visit. You gathered everyone together for lunch for what was to be a working lunch comprised of ice tea and submarine sandwiches. You found the room with the white board and markers and started your drill. "OK, what do you guys think are the various steps to your tasks?" Who here feels that there are some unique steps to your particular approach; who has a style worth copying? What are the, as they call it, "best practices" that you have experienced or observed here that if all adopted, we would get a superior outcome?"

Once your white board was full, you go to the next step. "If we were to change the pay plan, what kind of a compensation matrix could we devise to reward increased productivity using the steps that we just listed? We will afford a bonus program through increased productivity. Our goal was to do that task faster with a greater level of quality. We want to have an improved quality of work life and a better customer experience score here at work."

Well, well, well; you have just had your first best practice meeting and you only invested one day. Now comes the hard part: maintaining the integrity of the program, keeping the process alive and the staff committed to it. If the pay plan is responsive, it will go a long way in keeping the interest of the staff to keep their commitment to the program. A responsive matrix bonus plan will allow the staff to gauge their success on a daily basis.

There may be a plan out there for your business; all you have to do is reach out and do a little study, then just assemble it with some staff help. They will be surprisingly candid. You only have increased profits and an improved quality of life to gain. In a world full of vocational complications, embarking on a meaningful new and improved process makes just good old fashion sense. Just reach out and grab it. What are you waiting for?

A wonderful little hole in the wall

Kevin and Brenda Kyle hope to create a cozy atmosphere for customers on Main Street

By Jeremy Dunn

"I got a wonderful review on Google the other day. It said, 'This place is a wonderful little hole in the wall.' And I thought, 'It can't get any better than that for a tavern.'" Brenda Kyle, of KPK Ventures LLC, recently shared. She truly believes that is the ultimate compliment for a bar undergoing changes while trying to embrace a near 70-year history in Beech Grove.

On Feb. 1, Brenda and her husband Kevin "Brick" Kyle, a veteran Black Hawk pilot, took ownership of Main Street's historic Harvey's Tavern. The couple quickly realized a need to implement a cozy and welcoming environment for patrons and remind people that Harvey's Tavern was still open for business. Brenda stated, "When I took the black film off the front windows, people came in and said, 'I didn't even know this place was open and that it was here.' The Beech Grove police came in and thanked us because they could see in here now." However, making Harvey's Tavern visible again was just the beginning.

Building a culture

Hard work is nothing new to Brenda, a former language arts teacher, and Kevin, who did a tour in Kuwait in 2001 followed by three tours in Iraq (earning him the "Sagamore of the Wabash" from Vice President of the United States, Mike Pence, at his 2016 retirement ceremony as governor of Indiana), and the duo immediately began rebuilding the tavern's décor, menu and entertainment options. The Kyles masterfully found a way to honor Harvey's history, keeping the original logo, signage and framed pictures, while adding more color and sharing their own history, with Brenda painting a Black Hawk helicopter on the bar's front wall and surrounding it with photographs from Kyle's military career.

Next, the couple started making tweaks to the menu, adding a few specialties, such as Brenda's mother's tenderloin recipe, a classic club sandwich dubbed "Jack's" and walleye on Fridays. According to Brenda, the community has responded favorably to the changes. "Two guys walked in the other day and said, 'I heard you guys have good food. That is the word on the street.' So the word on the street is that we have good food," she said.

Finally, KPK Ventures wanted to revive the entertainment offered at Harvey's Tavern. Upon purchasing the bar, the Kyles with good friends.

How do you plan to be successful?

We are rebranding the slogan, "Where Good Friends Meet" and attracting the non-smoking customers that like to relax with a cocktail or two after work or on a weekend afternoon.

What would we be surprised to learn about your restaurant?

According to previous owners, Harvey's Tavern (formally known as the 19th Hole) was one of the first bars in Indianapolis to have karaoke. It has been around for almost learned that a previous owner had taken a trip to Florida and was introduced to karaoke and was so amazed by its popularity that he brought it back to Harvey's Tavern, making it one of the first bars in the Indianapolis area to offer karaoke. After becoming aware of this, the pair knew they wanted to rebrand the tavern's slogan, "Where Good Friends Meet," by offering more evening events. From Wednesday through Saturday, the tavern offers an open stage night for songwriters, "Geeks Who Drink" trivia, karaoke, dancing and live music.

Adding their own chapter

Thanks to the Kyle family, Harvey's Tavern will have the opportunity to continue writing chapters in its long-standing Beech Grove history. As Brenda completes the Black Hawk painting on the wall, this duo looks to pen their own additions to Harvey's legacy. Brenda summed up this transition, stating, "It was very much a dive tavern, and we have now escalated it to a wonderful little hole in the wall place."

And if you ask the Kyles, you could not ask for a better recognition.

70 years and is now owned by a great retired veteran. He (Kevin Kyle) is a Black Hawk pilot and instructor out of the Indiana National Guard Aviation Armory in Fairland.

Your earth suit: God incarnate as man

NUTRITION

By Wendell Fowler

"We are star stuff which has taken its destiny into its own hands."

— CARL SAGAN

We are the universe, stardust; a vibrating soulful orb of energy of white light having an earthly experience. The vehicle for our eternal spirit as we journey through life in this earthly realm. We are stewards of our precious earth suit which is comprised of elements that came from the sun and earth.

The more we learn about our earth suit/holy temple, the more we discover just how intricately designed it is — with features infinitely more elaborate than those of a super-computer or skyscraper. Our earth suit's intricate engineering surpasses virtually everything else. Even the finest scientists and engineers can't come close to replicating its mechanics, breathtaking beauty, efficiency and complexity. Clearly, all life is the result of an intelligent, giving and creative mind light years beyond the scope of human understanding.

Did you ever realize how much your earth suit loves you? I mean, it's always trying to keep you alive. That's all it lives for. Your earth suit makes sure you breathe while you sleep, stop cuts from bleeding, fixes broken bones and finds ways to beat illnesses with the requisite plant foods your cells need. Precious as it is, your earth suit is also an impermeant, disposable vehicle subject to vitamin deficiencies, mental and physical, disease, aging and death.

There is a profound symbiotic relationship between body and spirit. The earth suit is a wonderful gift we use to gain knowledge, experience and overall enlightenment. Each cell contains the secrets to the universe you seek. The truth's Christ and teachers of love and compassion said would set us free. Our potential for interaction, love and compassion with all human entities is immense.

We are the earth that gives us elements of life: satellite dishes to divinity. If your earth suit is less than whole from a diet of dead, lifeless foods... connectivity to the divine is weakened, plus it's blasphemous to abuse our most precious gift of life.

As a gift to yourself, do your spirit-self a favor. Take loving care of your earth suit and become more you: embody your aliveness. Exist in love and light, take care of others and cherish each breath. Your earth suit loves you so much. It's time to begin loving it back and become the beautiful stardust being that you are.

The mysterious order of the adjectives

GRAMMAR GUY

By Curtis Honeycutt

Everyone's on the lookout for their next clever party anecdote for that awkward pause between the cheese course and dessert (I know I am). The perfect quip at the perfect time will make you feel like a million bucks in the tuxedo people are now assuming you own. If you memorize today's grammar gem, you're guaranteed to be the hero at the next soiree or gala you attend.

Do you remember the mnemonic device from math that goes, "Please excuse my dear Aunt Sally?" This helps you remember the order of operations in a math equation (parentheses, exponents, multiplication, division, addition, subtraction). In English, there's an equivalent, but largely unknown "order of operations" for the order in which adjectives go in front of a noun. Even more shocking is that this rule is taught to most non-native speakers, but native speakers are never taught it. The order is quantity, opinion, size, physical quality, shape, age, color, origin, material, type, purpose, noun.

We are never formally taught this adjective order, but we know that "five wrinkly octogenarian bronze Italian sunbathers" sounds correct (albeit an odd scenario), but if you say "octogenarian five Italian wrinkly bronze sunbathers," you sound like a total weirdo. You don't know how you know that's wrong; you just know it.

Let's try it with some simpler phrases. You'd never say "old little lady"; you would always say "little old lady." Likewise, "blue suede shoes" sounds right, but you would never say "suede blue shoes." You've probably heard someone remark about their baby's "big brown eyes," but if that same parent went on about their baby's "brown big eyes" you'd think something was wrong with them. Try saying these phrases out loud and you'll hear how truly ridiculous adjectives in the wrong order sound to your English-preferring ears.

And, while I don't have a clever mnemonic device for adjective order, it's something you should feel privileged not to know — unless, that is, you want to be the talk of your town's small secretive Sicilian social circle.

Weekly Devotion

Behold now, Your servant has found grace in Your sight, and You have magnified Your mercy, which You have showed unto me in saving my life; and I cannot escape to the mountain, lest some evil take me, and I die

GENESIS 19:19

The Greek word for "grace" generally used in the New Testament is "Charis" from which we get the term Charisma. This is the nature of God and encompasses His great ability to forgive and forget and to add so much to our lives once we have repented of our sins.

In this verse from Genesis 19 we read about Lot and where he had chosen to live versus where he should not have been living. He had chosen the communities of Sodom and Gomorrah and God has come to warn him of their impending doom. God is going to destroy these towns because, like the earth in the days of Noah, they had become so evil there was no redemption possible for them. The hearts of those who lived in these communities had become so evil that this was all that was on their minds day and night. Evil can do that to a person, a group, a community, a nation. In order to see this in more modern times, all we have to do is to go back to the days of Germany under Hitler's rule. There were a few "good" people in Germany at the time but they were few and far between and greatly outnumbered by the evil one.

Sin is like a cancer in the human body. At first it goes about its business undetected. It lies hidden in one of the organs or glands of the body. Even doctors who are trained to find it don't notice it until the damage it does is done. Then, measures are taken against it but, oh so many times by that time it is too late to save the life of its victim. The Bible tells us that the wages of sin is death, always. But it also tells us that because of God's love for His Son, Jesus Christ, He can now offer us eternal life. Our bodies, all of them, will perish because of Adam's sin. But, for those who have found grace in the eyes of God, there will be life after physical death. Praise the Lord and on that note.

God bless and go and have a great day.

Paul A. Kirby is the pastor at the Church of God at 3939 S. Emerson Ave.
