Q: May is race month in Indiana.

Electric car manufacturer Tesla and others are gaining in market share challenging the supremacy of the gasoline-powered internal combustion engine.

How do you think the tradition of racing will be influenced, if at all, by the introduction of non gasoline-powered vehicles into the market?

"It definitely could end up being more race friendly and eco friendly as well. It could be interesting to see if that is going to actually affect the racers in the end or if it is just going to come down to speed. If it ends up having a difference in hardware, it could very easily switch all the races from one type of engine to the other."

Leland Gomez of Perry Township

"I feel like it could potentially change, depending how the technology grows with it. I feel lot of people when they go to the race like to experience the power and the noise. Electric cars tend to be quieter and you almost don't know they are coming. So perhaps a different style of racing could develop, one where people can enjoy the atmosphere of racing but without so much noise."

Trisha Cooper of Greenwood

"I just worry about one, the speed and whether they could keep up with the speeds they are going now; two, what is the cost of the battery versus gas and how long is it going to last? It is going to be interesting. People might not be as interested without the sound; they have been used to the past 100 years. They say racing is not as popular as it used to be. Maybe the first couple of years it will be okay but after that people might lose interest."

Robin Cross of Perry Township

"I find it hard to believe that they would go away from the standard combustion engine in racing. I don't think that an electric motor car would be able to withstand the torture of a 500-mile race. Plus the absence of sound (with electric vehicles) would probably make a lot of people shy away from the race."

K.C. Lewis of Bargersville

Southport Spring Festival 2017

HAUNTS & JAUNTS

By Rick Hinton

Small town Americana retains firm ties to the past, yet at the same time continues to open its door to the influences of a large bordering city. Welcome to Southport!

Southport was established in the early 1830s, becoming one of the first Marion County communities to incorporate into big brother Indianapolis in 1853. In 1969 the small town made the decision to be an excluded city within, the then, Uni-Gov proposal consolidating Indianapolis and Marion County governments. While now just lying on the southern edge of Indianapolis, Southport continues to retain a unique perspective and individuality.

May 13, the annual Spring Festival, was an exhibit of what small town in Indiana can offer in the way of food (carnival style), jewelry, apparel, crafts, music, children activities and various services. A troop of clowns wandered the closed Derbyshire Road as Southport Police officers and Explorers mingled and rubbed shoulders with the public. The weather was ideal. The slight chill of the morning was replaced quickly by the warmth of the sun. Sweaters and jackets came off. And the crowds arrived.

My wife Laura and I manned a shift at the CERT (Community Emergency Response Team) booth, giving out information on how to handle emergencies, and to hopefully recruit future team members. The Kettle Corn booth next to ours produced a constant cadence of popping corn while directly across from us was tempting baked offerings from the Southport United Methodist Women's Mission Projects. I settled for a deep fried Twinkie and smiled contently while watching folks stroll by. There were the squeals of children scampering about the playground and arcade games, plenty of dogs of all variety being led on leash and lots of smiles.

I visited with old friends from the Perry Township Historical Society and stood mesmerized watching the Southport High School Indoor Percussion "Time For Swing" perform. (I also play drums - probably to the chagrin of my neighbors). Laura shopped for jewelry and drank Lemon Shake-ups. Our shift ended. I went home to cut grass. Laura stayed a while longer.

The Southport Spring Festival started with humble origins in May of 2014. Each year it has grown larger in scope; an open air venue with an eye directed towards the future. Much like the town of Southport itself! And 2018 will be no different. If you missed it, there's always next year.

VISIONS OF VIBRANCY

Purdue Extension Community Wellness Coordinator Linda Adams works with Southport and Indianapolis officials to create a plan for a healthier community

By Nicole Davis

Healthy people and vibrant communities go hand-in-hand. When you make it easier for people to be healthier, the entire community benefits in multiple ways, says Perry Township resident Linda Adams.

Through her work with the Purdue Extension as Community Wellness Coordinator the the Southside of Indianapolis, Linda has spent her time working with residents and community leaders to find ways to make the Southside a healthier, more vibrant place for everyone.

"Together, we can accomplish great things," Linda said. "One person can do a lot, but when you have a team and it's across a community, you can be so much more effective."

What exactly does the Southside need to be healthier? Linda, with the help of Southport and Indianapolis city leaders, has organized a Greater Southport/Perry Township Active Living Workshop to brainstorm just that. The workshop will take place June 6, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Southport United Methodist Church, 1947 E. Southport Rd.

"I think this is extremely important as we look at the interests and desires of the people living in the cities, particularly the millennials and baby boomers, which are usually polar opposites," said Allie Kast, Southside Neighborhood Advocate for the Indianapolis Mayor's Office. "They are both drawn to cities and towns that are more walkable. The more we can make the area more walkable, the more it will benefit both generations. On the Southside, we have one of the most un-walkable areas. Once we create the plan, we'll have it drawn out with action steps. Hopefully we can present that to both Southport and Indianapolis. To have these plans drawn up and created, we're more likely to get the funding for it and actually make it happen."

Linda grew up in Chicago, in a town like she imagines the Southside could be - a walkable community where residents could easily get around. She went to Purdue University as a liberal arts major.

She and her husband, Jason, eventually moved to Ohio for his job. Linda became a stay-at-home mom to their five children for 14 years.

The family moved to Perry Township four years ago, when she went back to work as a nutrition assistant for Purdue Extension. There, she would teach senior citizens who were SNAP (food stamp) eligible how to read nutrition labels, how to be safe in their kitchen and how to stretch a budget.

"We found a lot of people in our class were interested in nutrition," Linda said. "It wasn't easy. Access to food was limited. Some didn't drive and had to wait for people to take them. Sometimes you want to be healthy and physically active but that might not be your reality. You can't walk to the store because it's not safe or there are no grocery stores. The only thing you have to choose from is a convenience store that doesn't have a lot available... So the Purdue Nutrition program decided it would change its program."

Purdue Extension still has its nutrition education program, but has added community wellness coordinators with a goal to have representatives in each county in Indiana. There are three in Marion County.

"We're supposed to go into a community, assess what's going on there from a physical activity, nutrition standpoint," Linda said. "We gather together other community leaders, city officials, non-profits. Here, I work with Franciscan Health, Community Hospital, Baxter Y, the public health department. We joined the Healthy Southside Initiative. The plan is to take those needs and develop action plans that will help make it easier for people to make the healthy choice."

One such project, Linda is working with Adult and Child Health on Madison Avenue in its project to start a community garden for Burmese residents. With 20 raised beds, half are assigned to residents who sign up and produce from the other half will go to food pantries which have Burmese clients.

Last year, Linda began working with the cities of Southport and Indianapolis to apply for a grant to host the active living workshop. Seven communities across Indiana were approved this year, including the Greater Southport/Perry Township area. A planning team has formed to organize the workshop, which will include presentations on the benefits of active living, a walking audit of nearby infrastructure after which participants will get together and identify active living goals for the community.

"This is my fifth project with Linda," Kast said. "She is by far the most organized and driven person that I have met in this job. She is one of the most important players on the Southside right now when it comes to creating a stronger, more vibrant, healthier community. She's taking this idea (the workshop), something that's never been done in Marion County before, and making it happen and hopefully making it the most successful one they've ever had. She really cares a lot about it."

Linda said the Southside's greatest need is improved infrastructure to make it easier to walk and bike. While it's hard to create park-like environments in a city that's already fully-developed, the way to simulate that is through infrastructure. What exactly the Southside needs, will come about through ideas at the upcoming workshop.

Linda said they will spend the following nine months after the workshop to see which ways they can implement the ideas that come from it.

"For some communities, the workshop is a starting point," Linda said. "Here in Perry Township, it's not a starting point. It's a continuation and momentum builder of all of the work the Greater Southside Business Alliance, Madison Avenue Redevelopment Commission and Southport Redevelopment Commission has done over the last decade. They laid the ground work. Now it's time to capitalize in the groundwork and continue the vision."

Greenwood school bus driver named CICOA Caregiver of the Year

Health - Maria Dampier of Greenwood received the CICOA Caregiver of the Year Award during the nonprofit's eighth annual Signature Breakfast recently. The award honors a personal caregiver in Central Indiana who models courage, sacrifice, strength and creativity while caring for another.

Maria Dampier, a bus driver of 48 years, cares for her husband Bill Dampier, 80, who was diagnosed with Alzheimer's about seven years ago. Things took a turn in December 2015, when he fell and broke his hip and femur. When he woke up from the surgery, he was a different person. He no longer could walk or talk. After 100 days in rehab, he showed no signs of improving. He no longer could care for himself, and Maria made the difficult decision to place her husband in a nursing home.

Nearly every day since, Maria, drives her morning bus route, then heads over to Forest Creek Village to care for Bill. He smiles when she walks into the room. She stays until it's time for her afternoon route, then she returns, staying until she puts him to bed. For more information about CICOA Aging & In-Home Solutions, visit CICOA.org.

Suburban Christian School juniors collect new and gently-used shoes for funds2orgs

FEATURE

By Beth Wade

The Junior Class of Suburban Christian School is seeking the help of the community to collect new and gently-used shoes.

Suburban Christian School's Junior Class are currently collecting shoes for impoverished people in developing nations with the help of the organization, funds2orgs.

"When planning the fundraiser," said Tammy Green, a teacher at Suburban, "I learned of the organization funds2orgs. We were excited about this idea, that by raising money, the kids are not just selling candy bars, but are actually helping people."

This fundraiser has two purposes; to raise money for the Junior Class' senior trip and provide for families in developing nations such as Haiti and Honduras, plus many other nations in Central America and Africa.

"This has double benefits, said junior, Natalie Crute. "It helps our class, but at the same time we are able to help out those in need in another country."

Funds2orgs takes the shoes that have been collected and sorted by the class, and pays per the pound. They send the shoes to developing countries and help people set up businesses in which they can sell the shoes and other items. The proceeds from the sales are used to feed, clothe and house the budding entrepreneur's family.

The shoe drive has taught the students a lesson in humility and has them thinking about how life would be if they lived in one of these developing nations.

"I've heard them talk about what it would be like for the people in these underdeveloped countries to get these shoes, and how some of them may have never had shoes before," Green said. "The conversations I am having with the kids, or that I am hearing them have with each other, show that they are really thinking about where these shoes are going."

Maggie Jones, a member of the junior class, said, "This fundraiser has given me and my class the ability to give to kids and people that do not have shoes readily available," said Jones. "We have the opportunity to help out and be a blessing to them by giving them the shoes we collected."

To donate to the Junior Class and support their desire to give back to those in need, bring new or gently-used shoes by May 31 to Suburban Christian School at 722 E. County Line Rd. The school sits directly behind the church. The class has set up a collection box just inside the front door. Any size and style of shoes welcomed.

Beech Grove infrastructure improvements continue

As you have probably seen, there is a lot of infrastructure work being conducted in the City of Beech Grove. After 5 years of paving, we are starting to catch up on fixing our local roads and streets, but we still have a ways to go.

As we pave local roads, we also identify bad sections of curbing and sidewalks and replace them as we go. We also are required to make sidewalks ADA compatible where they touch a roadway. Actually that is a really good rule.

We are set to begin some extensive storm water drainage projects throughout our city. These drainage projects are much needed and will make a huge improvement in local neighborhoods when they are complete. With the large amount of rain we received a couple weeks ago, I'm happy to report that where we have completed drainage projects, the storm water drained very quickly, especially on Main Street. But like our local roads, we have a ways to go to correct some of our worst drainage areas.

As you may have seen, work is set to begin on the addition of sidewalks on Churchman Avenue from Emerson to Arlington. The contractor may start to do some drainage work very soon, but has decided to hold off with the major construction project until school has concluded for the summer. This is a much needed project and will make it safer for those who walk along this area, especially those with disabilities and students walking to and from the high school. We are very fortunate to have received approximately one million dollars in funding through INDOT and the Indianapolis MPO for this project.

Infrastructure improvements are so critical for the future of our city and we look forward to continue to make improvements in this area without the issuance of any debt.

Indiana Blood Center needs donations

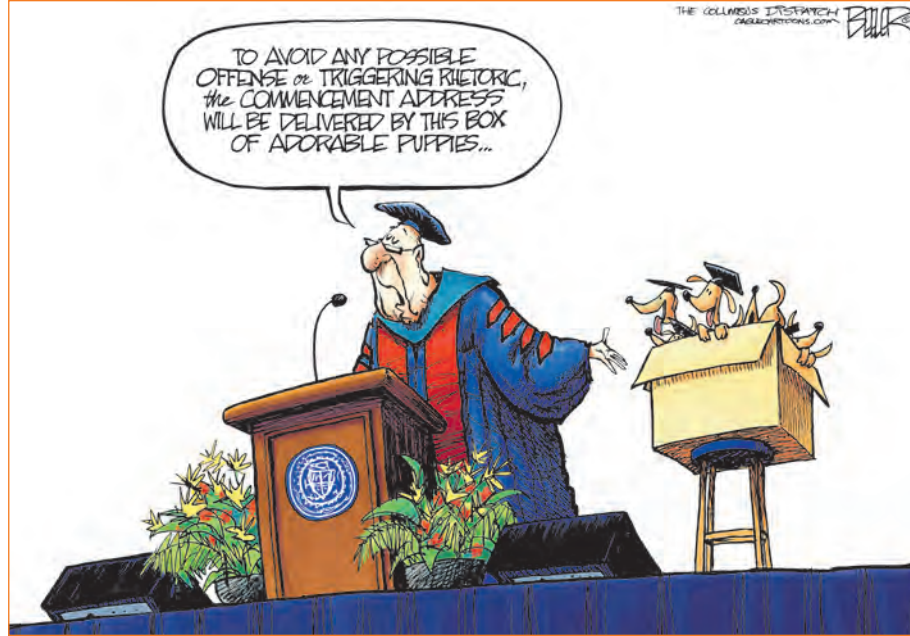

Every two seconds, someone in the U.S. is in need of blood, according to the Red Cross.

The need is never-ending. Recently, the Indiana Blood Center announced that it needs your help. A local hospital responded to a traumatic event early on May 17 that required 30 units of type O blood. Indiana Blood Center's inventory is now depleted, placing the community's health at risk. Donors are urgently needed today through the weekend and we ask them to call 800-632-4722 x 5150 or visit one of six Indiana Blood Center locations, including in Greenwood, 8739 US 31 S., Indianapolis. The donor center is open until 7 p.m. on May 18. For more hours and information, indianablood.org/locations/Pages/default.aspx.

We don't see these urgent alerts all too often, and we hope we can hear about how the community stepped up to contribute. And although they don't publicly announce the need every day, the need is constant. Besides the fact that giving this donation can save a life, it's also beneficial to the donors health, including reducing iron levels in your body, which is said to be linked with a low cancer risk!

TOP TEN THOUGHTS OF A CROTCHETY OLD MAN

By Torry Stiles

- "Kids hardly ever come outside to play any more. I might never get the joy of yelling at them to get off my lawn."
- "I'm at the age where I try to be extra neat and careful just because it's getting too painful to bend down and pick stuff up off the floor."
- "Soy milk. Almond Milk. Rice milk. Seems they're making milk out of everything but milk these days."
- "Used to be the whole town went nuts over the Indy 500. Nowadays the only way I know the race is coming up is because Kroger's brings back their Track Pack."
- "I remember when Saturday Night Live loved Trump. Those were the cocaine years. It was cool to be rich and white as long as you were in New York or Hollywood."
- "The Harry Potter movies are all about the effects of bad parenting. But, then, it's hard to be a good parent when you're worried about your kid turning you into a frog every time you tell him to clean his room."
- "If it looks funny and tastes funny maybe we need to see if there's a clown working the grill."
- "Some stores just put the 'cuss' in 'customer service.'"
- "Other people's dogs make the worst messes."
- "Kids all want those fidget spinners to fidget with. If their little paws are that restless I know where there's a sink full of dirty dishes they can fidget with."

Is your criminal record holding you back?

By Dave Byers

Many individuals cringe at having to check yes when asked if they have been convicted of a crime on their employment application. In many instances it has been years or even decades since you made a mistake and completed your sentence; however, the conviction record continues to haunt you and hinder your chances at more gainful employment. Many individuals have simply given up hope of being able to overcome their past indiscretions. If this applies to you, then you need to seriously consider getting your convictions and arrests expunged.

You can now take action to remove your embarrassing criminal history. Indiana law allows for individuals to expunge their criminal records and be treated as if they were never convicted of the offense. This means that you no longer have to check yes on the employment application being left to wonder if your conviction immediately sent me to the bottom of the pile. Convictions have a wide array of consequences on one's life ranging from limiting job opportunities to eliminating your civil rights, including the right to vote, serve as a juror, act as guardian, and possess a firearm.

Many individuals do not realize the lingering consequences of their convictions until it is too late. It is a common public misconception that convictions will fall off after so many years; however, this is not the case. A conviction can only be changed by you taking action. A conviction for drunk driving not only raises your insurance rates, but also closes doors to more gainful employment and stays on your official driver's record. A felony conviction prevents you exercising your gun rights and greatly hinders your employment opportunities. Also felony convictions embarrass and prevent parents from chaperoning a child's field trip or other school functions. These are only a few examples, but undoubtedly the effect of a conviction is harsh and lingering. An expungement can alleviate these issues and restore your civil rights.

The law does require a waiting period. For individuals arrested for a crime that was subsequently dismissed, you must wait one year from the date of arrest to file. For those convicted of a misdemeanor offense you must wait five years from the date of conviction to file. Examples of misdemeanor convictions are operating while intoxicated, possession of marijuana, public intoxication, and shoplifting. For those convicted of felony offenses, the waiting period is typically eight years from the date of conviction.

Recent changes in the law now allow for an expungement to restore one's firearm rights in many circumstances. The restorative language in the expungement law has been approved by the Federal Government as a restoration of an individual's 2nd Amendment rights. It is important to discuss your individual situation with an experienced attorney. There are some offenses, domestic battery for example, where an expungement alone is insufficient to restore one's gun rights. Further an individual could have other issues which bar them from being a proper person to possess a firearm.

The expungement process can be very confusing and you are only allowed one expungement during your lifetime. It is important to have an experienced attorney guide you through this process. An experienced attorney can properly draft all the necessary paperwork, has experience with the Court and Prosecutor, and most importantly, can advise you exactly what an expungement can and cannot do. Our office has done many expungements and can confidently guide you through the process. We are happy to discuss expungement with you during a free consultation. For additional information, visit beechgrovelaw.com.

Don't let your criminal record preclude you from better employment or enjoyment of your rights. It is possible to get that criminal record expunged. Do not allow yourself to continue to feel the effects of your past decisions. Take action by contacting our office to see if you qualify.

Forming your business

What legal protection do you need?

By Mitchell A. Ray
Taylor, Chadd, Minnette,
Schneider & Clutter, P.C.

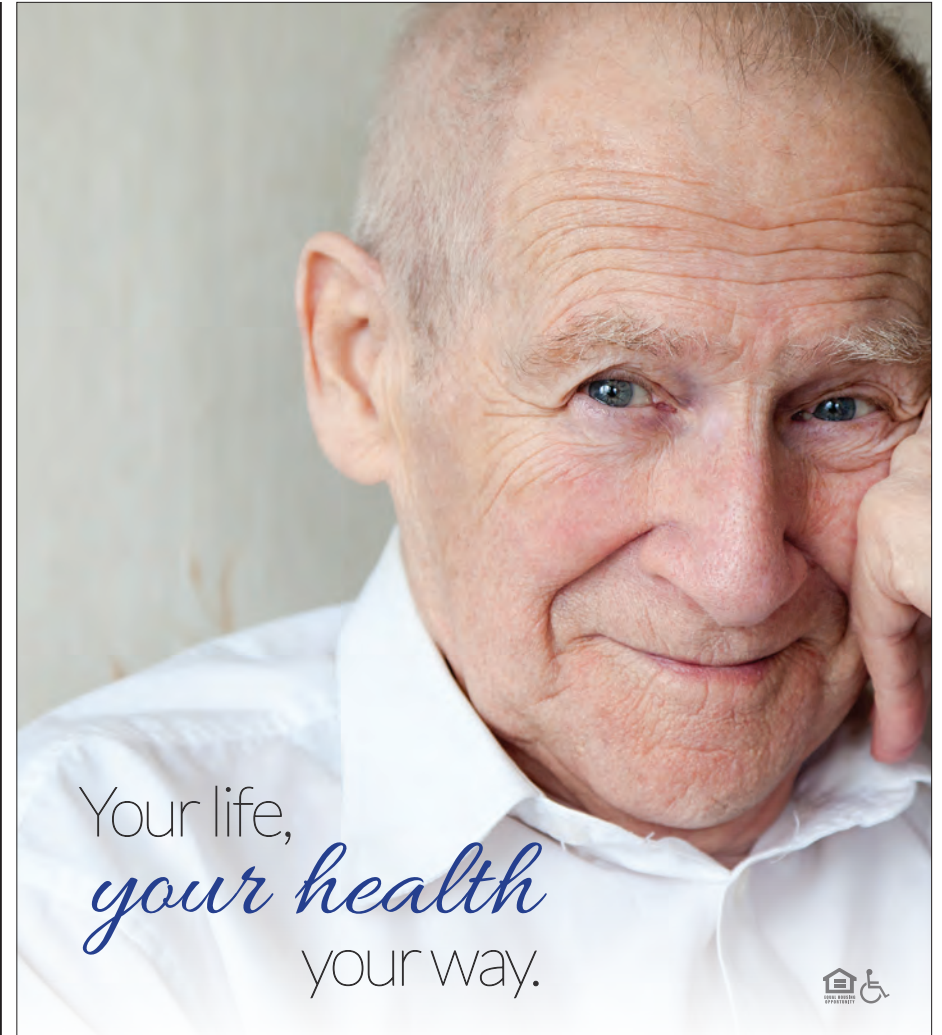

For many entrepreneurs, the first legal question that arises from starting a business is: how do I protect myself from personal liability? The answer to this question largely depends on the type of business entity the business owner desires to form. This choice will have a significant impact on the entrepreneur's personal liability.

A partnership is one choice of business entity and is an informal organization of multiple owners who share in profits. A partnership, however, does not provide the partners legal protection from personal liability. Partners can be personally liable for the partnership's debts and even for the actions of the other partners. Consider this: a customer is injured from a product purchased from your business. Under a partnership, the partners may be held personally liable for the customer's injuries. This means the injured party may be able to come after your personal assets, bank accounts, cars, etc.

Corporations and Limited Liability Companies, on the other hand, provide greater liability protection to the business owners. These types of businesses, which must be recognized formally by the state, shield owners from being personally liable to creditors. LLC members, for example, are typically only liable for their financial contributions to the business. Thus, if the business in the above hypothetical was a corporation or LLC, and if the proper formalities were followed, it is unlikely that the injured party could attack the owner's personal assets.

Protection from personal liability is only one of many factors to consider when forming your business entity. For further guidance on business formation, or for other legal questions you have about your business, please call Mitchell A. Ray at Taylor, Sims, Chadd, Minnette, Schneider & Clutter, P.C. Keeping your pet healthy and parasite free

PAWS for THOUGHT

Spring is here. The weather is getting warmer. Everyone is ready to get outside and have some fun. Spending time with your dog while enjoying the great outdoors can be fun. There are so many choices such as a hike in the woods, a visit to the bark park or even a walk around the block.

However, there are risks that are associated with these activities. There are various parasitic, viral and bacterial infections that your dog will be exposed to on your travels. On the bright side, there are ways to lower the risk of problems.

You should make sure that your pets are vaccinated. There are several different vaccines that are given routinely. These can vary depending on where you and your pet are going on your travels. You should talk to your vet about your pet's risk factors.

You should also give your dog a heart-worm preventative. Heartworms are fairly common in the area and can be a big problem if your dog becomes infected with them. Since heartworms are spread by mosquito bites, any dog will be at risk in the park, on the sidewalk or in your own yard.

Fleas and ticks are also a common problem in central Indiana. These pests can not only cause problems directly from their bites, but they can also spread other diseases and worms.

It is important to have fun this summer, but also be safe and prevent disease. If you have any questions about your pet's needs, you should talk to your veterinarian.

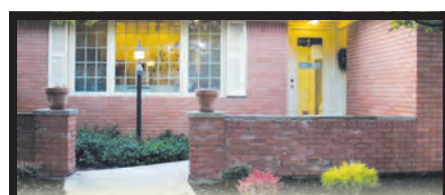

Dr. Jeff Ambrous practices at South 31 Veterinary Clinic and can be reached at (317) 788-0893.

Father's Day 2017

"What is one special skill your dad has?"

Why is this special? What are some examples of him using his skill?"

Father's Day is just one day out of 365 to show our fathers appreciation for raising us and helping to shape us into who we are today! Though we try our best to appreciate Dad the whole year round, we sometimes lose track of all he's done for us. Take this Father's Day as an opportunity to show Dad how much you care with a genuine letter from you, personally!

Though we know it's difficult sharing all the wonderful things about your father in just one page, we ask that entries do not exceed one page or 300 words.

Elementary or middle school students from the following schools are eligible to submit one essay: Beech Grove, Center Grove, Franklin Township, Greenwood and Perry Township or if you attend a public, private, parochial or charter school in zip codes 46107, 46142, 46143, 46203, 46217, 46225, 46227, 46237 or 46239. Please include your name, age, grade, and school or home address on the letter as well. The three best entries will be selected and published in the June 15 issue of The Southside Times.

City of Greenwood announces new park, expanded trail system

Amenity – This week, city of Greenwood officials announced plans to develop Grassy Creek Park, sitting on roughly 10 acres along Worthsville Road on the city's Southeast side. The park's official address is 602 E. Worthsville Rd. Grassy Creek Park is Greenwood's 15th park and brings the total footprint of public green space in the city to more than 280 acres. The land, previously occupied by a concrete plant, was purchased by the Greenwood Redevelopment Commission (RDC) in 2012. The RDC then transferred the land to the Parks & Recreation Board, which officially accepted the land for park use during a meeting earlier this week.

Sellas and Keeley coordinate Little Free Library

Literacy – Jescee Sellas remembers driving around one Saturday afternoon almost a year ago in Johnson County. She saw a little box full of books that had a sign labeled "Little Free Library." Ms. Sellas coordinates the 21st CCLC program, which includes the district's "Buzz Club." Mrs. Sara Wiley and Mrs. Missy Keeley wanted to implement this same program, but also include "Blessing Boxes." Jescee teamed with Mrs. Wiley and Mrs. Keeley to make the boxes a reality! After purchasing one box from "Little Libraries," Ms. Sellas asked Mr. Lawton, a teacher at the middle school, to build two more boxes. Pictured is one located at the north side of the South Grove parking lot near the recycling bins, one is behind the Mayor's office at the corner of 8th and Main, one is by the stairs between the administration building and the Hornet Training Center, and soon to be one near the middle school. These pantry/libraries are for people to "take what they need and give what they can." To donate, call Melissa Keeley at South Grove, (317) 786-7687 or Jescee Sellas at the middle school, (317) 784-6649.

King Arthur: Legend of the Sword

A royal mess

MOVIE REVIEW

By Adam Staten

For some inexplicable reason, people are interested in the lives of Prince William, Prince Harry and Kate Middleton. This idea that just because of no other reason than birth, entitles someone to a life of wealth, fame and literal royalty is so foreign in our country. That is unless, of course, your last name is either Clinton or Bush. Whatever the reason for the continual interest in royalty, one ancient tale of kings and queens continues to mystify and intrigue. And as such, a new film about this archaic tale opened this past weekend.

King Arthur: Legend of the Sword is the tale of the mythical king's journey to becoming the King of England. Despite being the son of the king and the heir to the throne, Arthur (Charlie Hunnam) is robbed of his birthright. In coup orchestrated by his uncle Vortigern (Jude Law), Arthur's father and mother are both killed as Vortigern seizes the throne.

However, prior to his father's murder and after catching wind of the planned overthrow, Arthur is sent away to live with the commoners. From that point forward, Arthur's life consists of running the streets, getting into fistfights and stealing everything needed in order to survive. It's not until an unexpected occurrence, when Arthur extracts Excalibur from the stone, that his true identity is revealed. Encouraged by his lowly band of brothers, Arthur soon hatches a plan that sends him on his way to claiming that which is rightfully his: the throne of England.

As far as story structure is concerned, King Arthur: Legend of the Sword is pretty much a mess. The pacing of the story is laughably bad as it sprints from one frenzied action sequence to another, never allowing the audience to catch its breath. Additionally, except for Arthur and to a much lesser extent, Vortigern, the characters aren't developed at all. The story concentrates on the adversarial relationship between Arthur and Vortigern, not spending even so much as a scene depicting Arthur's relationship with any other character. The film also introduces aspects of mysticism and the occult, but never explains what's going on or who is actually pulling Vortigern's strings.

The film also heavily employs the use of computer generated imagining (CGI) for the many mystical beasts that appear on scene. However, the CGI is so poorly done that it actually takes you out of the film. In several instances, a long, drawn-out battle scene has you hooked, you're on the edge of your seat and then out of nowhere a giant snake pops into frame and gobbles up a character. It's totally unexpected, and wholly unnecessary.

While a mildly enjoyable film, King Arthur: Legend of the Sword is more style than substance, making for a mess of a film. 2.5 out 5.

Weekly Devotion

42 And when it was day, He departed and went into a desert place: and the people sought Him, and came unto Him, and stayed Him, that He should not depart from them.

43 And He said unto them, I must preach the kingdom of God to other cities also: for therefore am I sent.

44 And He preached in the synagogues of Galilee.

LUKE 4:42-44

The fame of Jesus grew. His rise to fame was similar to the sudden rise of a movie, political, or even "religious" star of our time but even more so because then there was no media to hype him. His fame grew as people spread the word of the power and authority that he spoke with and his unique ability to cast out demons and heal the sick. If this was all there was to him, his fame would have quickly faded for there had been others who claimed to be somebody important who had proven themselves to be exceptionally flawed.

Jesus had a passion in his soul and great compassion for the people that others had never demonstrated. Jesus took every opportunity presented to Him to share the good news about the kingdom of God. This won Him great popularity and caused some to hate Him at the same time. The doctrine or teaching of the kingdom of God as Jesus tells it is not what those already in power in Israel wanted to hear. Jesus tells it anyway and eventually it will result in His arrest and death. He is a kingdom-wide influence and that influence grows and grows until He becomes a threat to the powers that be. He is yet.

He never presents Himself as a physical threat to anyone. Yet, He is seen as a threat. This is because, like Nicodemus and others, He is not seen by man through the eyes of the Holy Spirit but through the eyes of the flesh. He never teaches the kingdom of God as of this world but from heaven. We seek answers from heaven and when they are sent, we reject them and the messenger that brings them. How sad.

God bless and go and have a great day.

Paul A. Kirby is the pastor at the Church of God at 3939 S. Emerson Ave.

Asparagus taste of spring

NUTRITION

By Wendell Fowler

As the brown-gray mood of winter gives way to warmer temperatures, asparagus pokes its purple tips through the soil.

The word asparagus first appeared in English print around 1000 AD. In 200 BC, Cato the elder documented detailed growing instructions. The Egyptians began to cultivate it and at that time any self-respecting Romans from Pliny to Julius Caesar coveted the wild spear. History shares Roman emperors were so terribly fond of asparagus that they kept a special fleet of ships solely to fetch it. Along with its seductive flavor, Ancient Romans hoarded a private stash since they believed asparagus spears cured all ailments, which is conclusive evidence of man's recognition of food as medicine. Hippocrates was right!

Asparagus is one of the most nutritional, well-balanced veggies. A five-ounce portion provides 60 percent of the RDA for folacin, necessary for blood cell formation growth. Folic acid helps prevent liver disease, cervical cancer, colon and rectal cancer, and heart disease. Asparagus contains potassium, which helps regulate the electrolyte balance within cells, and helps maintain normal heart function and blood pressure. The crisp spears contain fiber, thiamin, B6, and is one of the richest sources of Rutin, a phytochemical/drug that strengthens capillary walls. Asparagus is especially rich in antioxidant vitamins A, C, and vitamin E.

In the 19th Century France, bridegrooms were required to eat several courses of asparagus because of its alleged power to arouse.

Asparagus contains Glutathione that helps repair of damaged DNA. The root contains compounds called steroidal glycosides, which may have anti-inflammatory properties to ease the pain of arthritic related conditions. In 1991, an Italian researcher reported a compound found in asparagus which had shown some antiviral activity in test tube studies.

Between 20 to 40 percent of the population observe that their urine smells rotten eggs, cabbages after they eat asparagus which is partly caused by the sulfur compounds in the spring vegetable.

At home, we add them to our smoothies and salads. Raw is always best. Heat destroys digestive enzymes and some vitamins. Prepare the asparagus for cooking by washing them well. Then break off the bottom woody pulpy stem. It is not necessary to peel them.

I remember Mom warning us as my brothers and I ran through the family garden uprooting and using asparagus spears as swords in our imaginary swashbuckling fantasy, "Don't run while you have asparagus in your hands. You'll poke someone's eye out."
