Kinetrex Energy provides tractor-trailers with liquefied natural gas

Kinetrex Energy, located in downtown Indianapolis, has created an alternative fuel source for tractor-trailers. Liquefied natural gas (LNG) is being provided as a clean-burning, reliable and affordable fuel source. "Every day we tout the benefits of LNG to our customers and prospective customers," said Kinetrex President and CEO Aaron Johnson. "By purchasing our own LNG powered tractor-trailers and fueling them with LNG, we are demonstrating our belief in the product we sell."

Indy to have New Bus Rapid Transit line

Residents of the Indianapolis and surrounding areas will have a new option for getting to and from downtown. The U.S. Department of Transportation's Federal Transit Administration has a $75 million grant agreement with IndyGo for a new Bus Rapid Transit Line. "Residents and visitors in Indianapolis can now look forward to faster and more convenient transit service as they travel to work, school, and other destinations," said FTA Acting Administrator K. Jane Williams. "FTA is committed to modernizing transit systems to improve safety and reliability for all riders."

Fourth-grade Nativity students learn at the track

Compiled by Nancy Price

Fourth-grade students at Nativity Catholic School enjoyed a recent field trip to the Indianapolis Motor Speedway. They learned about engineering, race cars, car safety, race history and race traditions. In addition, they toured the museum, kissed the bricks and saw one of the suites. The students are counting down the days to the Indy 500.

Nativity Catholic School, located in Franklin Township, serves more than 400 students from preschool through eighth grade in southeast Marion County. For more information about Nativity, please visit school.nativity.indy.org.

A tutorial for potential ghost hunters

HAUNTS & JAUNTS

By Rick Hinton

Paranormal author Benjamin Radford concludes his thoughts on those of us desiring to venture into ghost hunting:

Failing to consider alternative explanations for anomalous or “unexplained” phenomena

“Ghost hunters often over-interpret evidence and fail to adequately consider alternative explanations, assuming that ‘orbs’ are ghosts, EVPs (electronic voice phenomena) are ghost voices and so on. The designation of ‘unexplained’ or paranormal must be accepted only when all other natural explanations have been ruled out. The scientific evidence of the validity of EVPs is as poor as it is for orbs. An investigator must be careful not to go beyond the established facts and assume his interpretation is the correct one without keeping an open mind about other interpretations. These types of reports (EVPs and orbs) are very common and cannot be accepted at face value.”

Considering subjective feelings and emotions as evidence of ghostly encounters “Ghost hunters often report descriptions of personal feelings. Subjective experiences are essentially stories and anecdotes. There’s nothing wrong with personal experiences but by themselves are not proof or evidence of anything. Most people reporting such experiences are sincere in their belief, but that belief doesn’t necessarily make it true. The power of suggestion can be very strong and one can easily convince themselves that something weird is going on in a dark, creepy house.”

Using improper and unscientific investigation methods

“Purposely conducting an investigation in the dark intentionally hobbles the investigation and is completely counterproductive. (Nearly every ghost-themed TV show have the investigators walk around in a darkened place) It also violates common sense and logic: If you’re trying to identify an unknown object, is it better to look for it under bright lights or in a darkened room? Searching at night, in the dark, puts investigators at an immediate disadvantage in trying to identify and understand what’s going on around them. Searching a dark room for a shadowy figure is an exercise in futility.”

“Most ghost hunters consider themselves scientific if they use high-tech scientific equipment. Yet for any piece of equipment to be useful, it must have proven some connection to ghosts. The problem is that there’s no body of research these devices measure anything to do with ghosts.”

Focusing on the history of a haunted location

“Although a supposedly haunted location might have a fascinating history, this almost always has little or nothing to do with the current haunted claims. It must be investigated completely independent of this information.”

Dismiss the stories, put away the baggage of these stories and move forward. You might just get something!

“I believe that if ghosts exist, they are important and deserve to be taken seriously. Most of the efforts to investigate ghosts so far have been badly flawed and unscientific and not surprisingly, fruitless. If an investigation is to be done, it should be done right!”

I’m currently reading Benjamin Radford’s Investigating Ghosts: The Scientific Search for Spirits. I’m savoring it slowly, like a fine wine. I don’t want to miss a thing!

Rick Hinton, a Southport resident, loves researching things that go bump in the night. His articles can be read on Facebook: Rick Hinton, Southport Paranormal Examiner. Hinton conducts paranormal investigations with his team, South Central Paranormal.

A RACE TO WRITE

Greenwood resident fulfills passion as racing writer

Bob Gates, a Greenwood resident, is an author and racing enthusiast. Gates has a passion for racing and has written for several publications over the years in addition to four books about racing legends. (Photo by Faith Toole)

By Mark Ambrogi

Bob Gates found himself in the hospital in the early 1980s following back surgery with time on his hands.

"I was reading Open Wheel Magazine and I thought to myself, 'I can write this well,'" Gates said. "I wrote an article and submitted it and went on from there."

That started a second job for the Greenwood resident, who has written for several publications over the years. He just finished writing his fourth book, updating Wilbur Shaw's autobiography. Shaw, who died in 1954, was an Indiana racecar driver and president of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway from 1945 until his death. The book was released May 24 at a book signing at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway Museum.

"When you grow up in this area, it's either racing or basketball," said Gates, a 1964 Center Grove High School graduate. "I was attracted to the Indianapolis Motor Speedway before I ever was to racing as a whole. Just all the buzz around the Indy 500. So I grew up like a lot of kids interested in racing. I thought maybe I could drive and did go-karts. I always had that vision in my brain of being a writer. That was my way of getting involved in racing."

After writing for Open Wheel until it ceased publication, he started writing for Speed & Sport and other magazines.

Gates was a manager of the machining department at Caterpillar in Indianapolis for 10 years, retiring in 2012.

Gates attended his first Indy 500 in 1961.

"I can't say I've been to all of them," Gates said. "I missed some when I was in the service. I can't think of any I've missed since the early '80s."

Prior to his Air Force service, Gates attended IUPUI for three semesters and took an English/journalism class.

"I had to write a short story, which I did about racing and the instructor said I should have it published," he said. "I never did but when I thought about getting something published, it motivated me."

His first book, Hurtubise, about late race car driver, Jim Hurtubise, was published in 1995. Hurtubise died in 1989.

"A publisher read some of my stuff in Open Wheel Magazine and asked me if I would do a book on Hurtubise,"

Left, Gates met with Bill Vukovich, Jr. in 2014. Vukovich, Jr. sat in the car his father, Bill Vukovich, Sr. drove. The second book Gates published was in 2004 called Vukovich: An Inspiring Story of American Achievement. | Right, Toddy Ruttman sat in her father's (Troy Ruttman) 1962 Indy 500 winning car for the first time with Bob Gates. Gates wrote his third book, California Gold: The Legendary Life of Troy Ruttman in 2012. Ruttman won the 500 in 1952, at the age of 22. He was the youngest winner of the Indianapolis 500. (Photos courtesy of Bob Gates)

Gates said. "There had been a few attempts that had been unsuccessful but I was able to get with the family to do it."

His second book was Vukovich: An Inspiring Story of American Achievement in 2004.

"That was the book I wanted to do because (Bill Vukovich, Sr.) was a hero of mine when I was growing up," Gates said. "He was always a man of mystery. I've taken a lot of pride in the fact that I was able to look at him – as an individual."

Vukovich, a two-time Indy 500 winner, died in a crash while leading the Indy 500 in 1955. His son, Bill Vukovich II and grandson, Bill Vukovich III competed in the Indy 500 as well. Vukovich III died in a 1990 sprint car accident.

The third book was California Gold: The Legendary Life of Troy Ruttman in 2012. Ruttman died in 1997.

"It's a niche market, so it's a labor of love," said Gates, who said he made a little money in book sales.

The book he just released is called Gentlemen, Start Your Engines: The Rest of the Story. Shaw, a three-time Indy 500 winner, had written an autobiography prior to dying in a plane crash.

"I've added several chapters with the help of Wilbur Shaw, Jr. (who goes by Bill)," Gates said. "Wilbur Shaw was president of the Speedway when he died. He was the one who convinced Tony Hulman to buy the Speedway (in 1945)."

Longtime racing writer and NBC Sports reporter Robin Miller said Gates gained the trust of the families to share stories about their history.

"Vukovich, Sr. was real private and so is Vuky, real private," said Miller, a Southport High School graduate. "So, when Bob came out with his book, I was so impressed they were so open and cooperative with Bob. I think it's because he's such an honest guy. They knew they could trust him if he they said this is off-the-record or you can't use this. He's one of those guys that is instantly likable and everyone trusts him."

Gates is involved with the Indiana Racing Memorial Association, which is erecting historical markers pertaining to auto racing in Indiana.

"We've done it all over the state the last four years," he said.

"We're up to our 35th marker."

Gates is the editor of the Indianapolis 500 Oldtimers newsletter.

"The best part of it is being part of something I'm passionate about and really enjoy," Gates said.

Miller said it's clear Gates loves racing. "It's pretty neat he has a second career," Miller said.

"I was attracted to the Indianapolis Motor Speedway before I ever was to racing as a whole. Just all the buzz around the Indy 500. So I grew up like a lot of kids interested in racing. ... I always had that vision in my brain of being a writer. That was my way of getting involved in racing."

Store owner breaks for racing

By Mark Ambrogio

Chris Jockish spends long hours at Jockish Flowers.

"I work a lot but I play a lot," said Jockish, whose floral shop is located at 2636 S. East St., Indianapolis. "I work 60 to 70 hours a week and sneak away to get to a race or a ballgame."

That means attending a lot of sporting events, including the Indianapolis 500, every year since 1964.

The 61-year-old Jockish's maternal uncle took him with his cousins to the race when he was seven years old that year.

"My dad's friend, Bill Sudkamp, has only missed one race since 1947 because he was in the Korean War with the Marines," Jockish said. "He's 87 years old. The last 25 years I've probably gone with him. I enjoy the pageantry of the race and I like the speed. I like people watching and the excitement of the pre-race (activities), the bands, the prayers and the fly-over. Being from Indiana, everything still gives you a little bit of chills. It's pretty cool."

The floral shop is loaded with all types of sports memorabilia, including racing.

"I'm a big sports nut," said Jockish, who has Indiana Pacers and Indianapolis Colts season tickets. "I have Pacers and Colts and Fever up. Racing is my favorite of all."

Jockish said he has posters up from various drivers and stickers from Hoosier Auto Racing Fan Club.

"Sarah Fisher is one of my favorite drivers," Jockish said. "I have stuff from the O'Gara family, who I've been sponsoring for a long time. Sarah is married to Andy O’Gara.”

Jockish said other favorite drivers included the late Mark Donohue, Sam Hornish and James Hinchcliffe.

“I like Jim Clark because he won the ‘65 race,” Jockish said.

Jockish is a big fan of sprint cars and midgets. “I’ve sponsored a couple of customers who have race cars out at the Speedrome,” he said. “The Little 500 at Anderson Speedway is one of my favorite races to go.”

Jockish, who never married, said he is able to use his free time to travel to IndyCar races as well. He attended the race in Phoenix April 7 and plans to go the IndyCar race June 9 at Texas Motor Speedway in Fort Worth.

Mid-Ohio and Pocono are fun races to attend as well, Jockish said.

“My dad (Harold) always liked horse racing,” Jockish said. “My sisters like different sports like golf. We’re a sports family but I’m the only one who really likes race cars.”

His grandfather, Ervin Jockish, started the floral shop in 1945 at the same building.

“I’ve been the owner since 1992,” Jockish said. “My two sisters, Jill and Jane, help me and my aunt. That helps me get away sometimes.”

Jockish said he is a supporter of area high school sports as well.

Enjoy the Race!

May brings excitement to the southside

May always seems to bring out an energy of excitement. Kids (and teachers!) are counting the days until summer break. Graduation ceremonies and parties are held. Preparations are made to attend the Indy 500 and sunblock is flying off the shelves as families get ready for their vacations to the beach or lake.

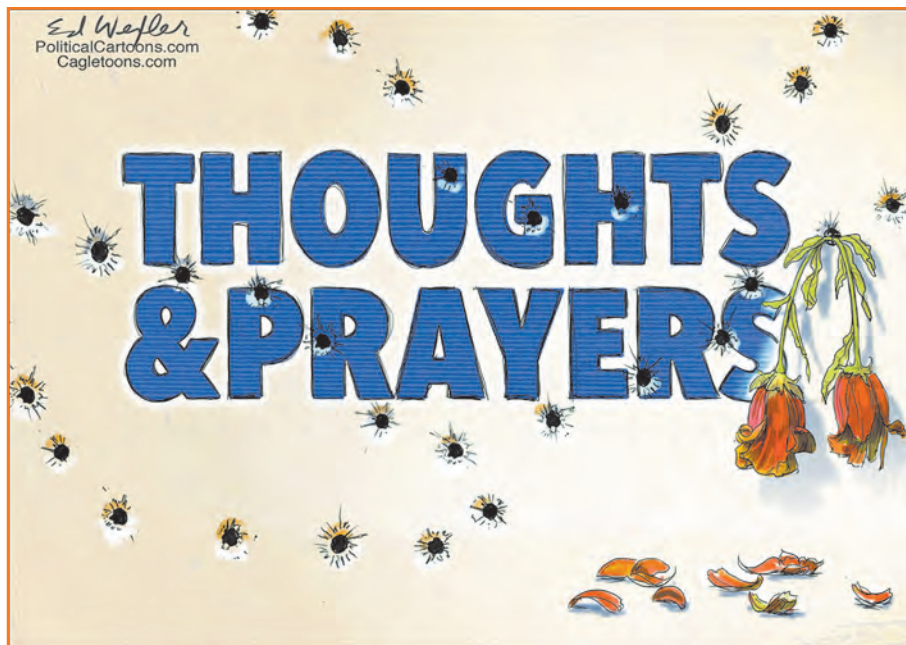

Locally, festivals and concerts are beckoning. Greenwood's Freedom Festival is held the last Saturday of June, offering something for each member of the family: crafts for Mom, beer for Dad and activities for the kids. Greenwood Park Mall is having their annual summer concert series (Indiana native Henry Lee Summer is kicking off the season) and local libraries are hosting movies, including Beech Grove (Coco is playing June 7). In addition, southside libraries are offering a Summer Reading Program, "Everyday Superheroes" from June 4 through July 28.

For kids itching to get out of the house during the day, take advantage of IndyGo's Summer Youth Pass. Starting June 1 and continuing through August 31, they can go hang out at the mall with their friends, walk around a park, take a class or look for a summer job. The pass is $30 for the summer. To get more information, go to: indygo.net.

Enjoy the summer!

TOP 10 SIGNS YOUR KID IS THE PROBLEM

By Torry Stiles

1. His picture is posted on all the walls at the Disney World security office.
2. She was booted out of Scouts for telling the other girls how NOT to get pregnant.
3. He's already on the "Barred List" at four taverns and he's only in the seventh grade.
4. The school counselor is recommending a good exorcist.
5. You can't participate in "Bring your Daughter to Work Day" again because the guys at the loading dock complained about her cussing.
6. Your kid is the one everyone calls when they've locked their keys in their car.
7. She was the first junior high cheerleader to get hit with a 10-yard penalty for unsportsmanlike conduct.
8. He's not as smart as you thought; the teachers have been giving him good grades to make sure he doesn't repeat the class.
9. She taught Grandma how to make a killer margarita.
10. He's been banned from Tee Ball for foul language.

Report crime to our police department

Recently a citizen was assaulted in the confines of their own home. This is unacceptable under any circumstance. I have great faith in our police department's ability to solve crimes and we as citizens must do everything possible to assist them with their work. If you see something, say something. If you know anything about this incident, I ask that you call (317) 327-TIPS and come forward so we can hold the person responsible for this accountable for their actions.

This Saturday, the American Legion and the VFW will hold their Memorial Day service at 11 a.m. in the city park. We invite you and encourage you to attend this special event. Thanks to all who have served, those who are serving now and please remember those who made the ultimate sacrifice so we can be free people.

Respectfully Submitted,

IU alumni should vote in the trustee election

IU is one of only a handful of universities in the nation that allows its alumni to vote for a representative on the Board of Trustees. Each year in June, any graduate of IU (any campus, any degree) can cast a vote for their choice of trustee. It's so quick and easy to do!

Sadly, the vast majority of alumni don't bother to vote, or aren't even aware that an election for trustee is taking place. Last year, out of over 650,000 living alumni, only about 10,000 votes were cast. That is a turnout of less than 2 percent!

The Board of Trustees sets the vision and the direction for IU and charges its administration with carrying out that mission. Most importantly, the board hires the president of the university to lead this charge. This critical function has a significant impact on the value of an IU degree.

As an alumnus and a candidate for trustee, I would urge all IU alumni to vote in this year's election. Because of the low voter turnout, your vote is powerful in determining who represents you on the Board of Trustees. You can find out more about me and how to vote at www.WellsforIUtrustee.com. Go Hoosiers!

Thank you,

Craig Wells

Fleecing Indiana taxpayers

I wish I had an extra day, with pay, to do the things I didn't get done yesterday. I'd also like the work I did that day not to be scrutinized, subjected to any rules and everyone would have to just take what I do and be happy about it.

This is what your current Indiana legislature has done, except YOU get to pay them for it. The Republican supermajority, in their bickering about language, could not pass four laws that were to be done by the completion of the session at midnight on March 14. They stayed until midnight, and still couldn't get the job done. The last time Indiana saw a special session when Republicans controlled the House, Senate and governor's office was 1987. That's over 30 years ago.

The GOP suspended the rules, the Constitution, and any discussion on the bills. Speaker of the Indiana House of Representatives, Brian Bosma, said they had already been debated. Some Democrats disagreed. But when there is a supermajority, the other party's hands are tied. It was an unnecessary expense for Hoosiers to bear and an unnecessary session for a supermajority.

Here's some of what they did "accomplish" in their one-day session:

Passed HB 1230, a school safety bill that has one section stating that students stay in their classrooms for three minutes in the event of an "unplanned fire alarm" going off. So, an "unplanned fire" would give the students three less minutes to escape a burning building.

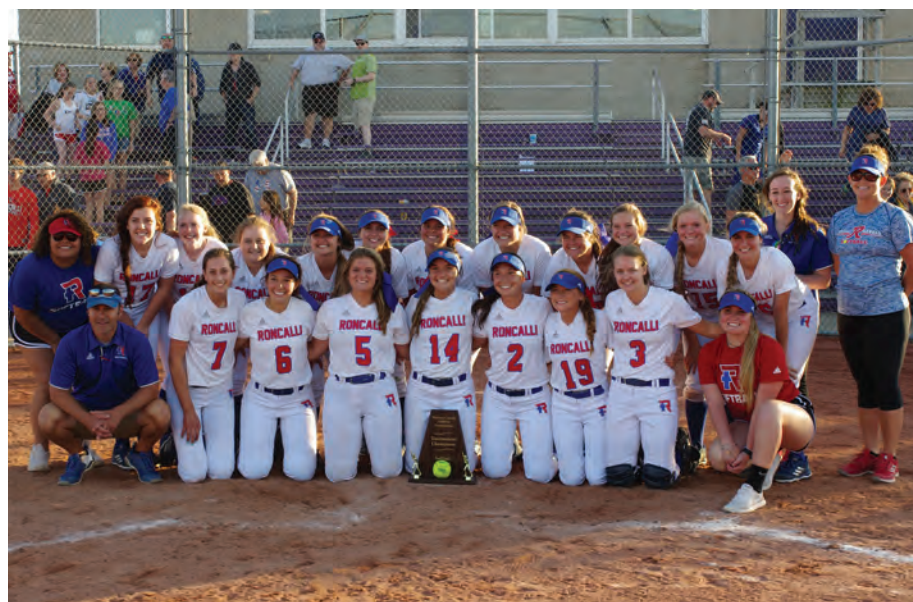

The bill also provides for a litany of training for schools, including how to identify trafficking and reporting of bullying and cyber-bullying. All of these provisions require the schools to report, document and keep a record for the state. Weaponizing the inside of the schools instead of de-weaponizing those on the outside.

Passed HB 1315, a takeover of Muncie schools by Ball State University. Constituents were left out of the process and the specifics of the Bill were primarily designed by GOP lawmakers. Ball State does not have to comply with the rules other schools do, like not discriminating against teachers due to their marital status, providing leave for military service or pregnancy and following disability laws. Plus, it takes away collective bargaining for the teachers. One more exemption: Teachers will not be required to be trained in detecting neglect or abuse; there is also no mention of requiring suicide awareness and prevention. This exemption flies in the face of the "school safety bill".

Indiana taxpayers did not get what they were forced to pay for.

Deadpool 2

A funny, violent and entertaining time

MOVIE REVIEW

By Adam Staten

While the calendar may not officially say it's summer yet, at the box office the summer season is in full swing. We've already seen the release of the third Avengers film, which continues to rake in the money at an astonishing rate. Disney is set to release their annual Star Wars film by the end of the month and the second Ant-Man flick will soon pop up on theater screens. However, in between all of those movies is another superhero film; one with a slightly different, more violent and profane take on the genre.

Deadpool 2, as you probably guessed, is the sequel to 2016's Deadpool. The second film picks up with our sarcastic and foul-mouthed anti-hero in a rather explosive situation. Things quickly go from bad to worse for the "merc with a mouth." Following the death of a central character, Deadpool is forced to make a decision that will change his life and the lives of those around him forever – sort of.

Knowing that he'll need reinforcements in order to survive his current predicament, Deadpool puts together a ragtag group of misfits. And in extremely Deadpool-like fashion, that goes violently and hilariously wrong. Continuing along from that mishap and the four or five others that follow, Deadpool calls upon a few old friends to help him take out his biggest and deadliest foe yet – a child.

Deadpool 2 brings all of the elements that made the first film such a hit – the rapid-fire wit, the needless, over-the-top violence and the creative breaking of the fourth wall – and then some, including a much better story. Believe it or not, through all the dirty jokes and the blood splatter, the film even attempts to cobble together somewhat of a message. However, this is likely just another joke from the filmmakers.

While the story is immensely better than the first film, this one is not as funny as the first film. That's not to say that Ryan Reynolds as the film's antihero is any less sarcastic or funny than the first film, it's just that the story is the obvious concern here and rightfully so. The jokes are still present but they don't come as fast and furious and don't connect nearly as often.

Despite a few missteps here and there, it's hard not to like Deadpool 2. The film's wit, charm and its ability to not take itself seriously makes for an incredibly entertaining time.

Adam Staten lives in Perry Township and is a movie buff. Staten graduated from University of Southern Indiana with a degree in Communication Studies. He can be reached at adam.staten1@gmail.com

Road tripping and food

NUTRITION

By Wendell Fowler

What an adventure it can be traveling the open road. America's breathtaking beauty makes my soul smile as I cruise down the highway into 360-degree postcards of peacefully grazing livestock, unique old barns, rolling meadows and pastures with meandering streams; lakes blending with the horizon, sun-dappled mountains painted in shades of blue, gray, brown and green rising into a sea of cottony clouds and blue skies speckled with hungry hawks chasing small birds.

I also viewed semi's barreling and swerving down the road, distracted texters, tailgate bullies, signs warning of drug activity, the potential of hotel bedbugs, leering strangers and creepy bathrooms. I enjoy people watching. This vacation when stopping for gas at rest stop food courts I surveyed portly folks, ten deep, eagerly waiting in line for fries, burgers, doughnuts and sugary frou-frou coffees. Conjured up images of insatiable Audrey in Little Shop of Horrors, "Seymore, feed me, I'm hungry!"

It's clear we're an obese, sickly bunch of Americans seeking ephemeral moments of pleasure to ease our fears and unhappiness. Crappy food is manufactured to make us feel good, for the moment, as these foods stimulate the holy temple to release dopamine, the feel-good drug. However, if you're compassionately disciplined with your food choices, traveling can be daunting unless you plan ahead and have a strategy.

Vacations should be a sensible departure from normal daily routines and eating behaviors: to occasionally cheat with a self-promise to lose that five pounds, "after I get home." Sandi and I learned when we make deals with ourselves and depart from our normal way of eating clean and choose to cheat, we'll pay for it later.

As a rule, we avoid hard-to-digest processed junk food, fizzy sodas, doughnuts, fried animal parts, burgers and fries. Instead we plan ahead and pack what we want to eat to stay alert and energetic as we cruise so when we arrive at or destination we're not diminished, sleepy, bitchy and dehydrated. When our packed food runs out, we google the closet grocery store exit and purchase hummus, almond butter, Ezekiel bread, salsa, guacamole, fresh fruit, sugar-free juices, veggie sticks and nuts. To prevent dehydration's snarky side effects, we opt for Kombucha and water but no caffeine. On your next road trip, avoid the dead food outlets that line America's highways and eventually your arteries. For a memorable, energetic vacation, have a plan, do your best and maybe listen to my #LiveRightNow Podcast on iTunes.

Picking your friend's nose

GRAMMAR GUY

By Curtis Honeycutt

Believe it or not, correcting other people's grammar isn't going to win you any friends. And you might also have trouble keeping the friends you do have if you follow them around with your figurative red pen poised in conversations.

I'll admit, I fell prey to the low-hanging fruit of correcting a friend's grammar the other night. My red ink came out almost as a grammatical reflex. For the record, I was right. Also, for the record, I'm sorry I did it. Unless someone gives you explicit permission to correct their grammar during conversations, just don't do it. You'll look like a jerk. It's almost as bad as picking your friend's nose — and you wouldn't do that, would you?

I chose to lay down the grammar hammer over the words obtain and attain, two-word cousins people often get confused. Let's learn about these two words and how to use them correctly. Attain is a verb that means to achieve or accomplish reaching a goal. Obtain is a verb that means to acquire or get something. Just based on these two definitions, the words seem strikingly similar.

When it comes to attain, think about achieving or accomplishing something. This is usually something that isn't physical, like enlightenment or wisdom. You can attain a rank in the Army, which isn't necessarily something you can physically hold. When you obtain something, it's usually a physical object, like car keys or a pet octopus.

The fine line between attain and obtain is found with things such as degrees and diplomas. You attain a degree (something you achieve or accomplish). You obtain a diploma (the physical piece of paper). When you attain something, it's achieved with a high degree of work and effort. When you obtain something, you take ownership of a physical object. In National Treasure, Nicolas Cage's character obtains the Declaration of Independence. By doing so, he attained criminal status. Do you see the difference?

If you choose to correct people's grammar publicly, you risk attaining a reputation for being someone nobody wants to be around. You might even obtain a black eye. So, put the red pens away; people aren't friends with you because they like it when someone points out their grammar discrepancies.

wins state title*Athletics – The Roncalli Rebels captured the 2018 IBVCA (Indiana Boys Volleyball Coaches Association) state title with a four-game win over Cathedral in a match played at Southport. The Rebels won the first game, 25-16, dropped the second game, 23-25 and won the final two games, 25-20 and 25-22. Roncalli advanced to the championship match with a three-game win (25-22, 25-16, 25-21) over defending state champion Carmel in the semifinal round. The state title is the boys' volleyball program's first state championship.

"This was an amazing team," said coach John Kesterson. "Everyone had a role in the system and executed it to near perfection but the team was truly led by the seniors. They are amazing individual athletes, but they suspended all ego and supported each other no matter what. Their sacrifice to do what was best for the team led us to the title."

Weekly Devotion

He that has My commandments, and keeps them, he it is that loves Me: and he that loves Me shall be loved of My Father, and I will love him, and will manifest Myself to him. Judas said unto Him, not Iscariot, Lord, how is it that You will manifest yourself unto us, and not unto the world? Jesus answered and said unto him, If a man love Me, he will keep My words: and My Father will love him, and We will come unto him, and make Our abode with him. He that loves Me not keeps not My sayings: and the word which you hear is not Mine, but the Father's which sent Me.

JOHN 14:21-24

So, Jesus tells it like it is. When I was a boy a man was known for "Telling it like it is". That is, a man was known for telling the truth and not tainting it. Little "white lies" were considered as bad as "big fat ones" and a man who was a liar was disrespected by all.

Here it is in a nutshell, so to speak. If a person loves Christ, he or she will keep His commandments and not just the ones that are convenient for them to keep but all of them to the very best of their ability. So, do you love Christ? That is the question, isn't it?

In Sunday School we were taught a song. The title of that song was, "Oh, How I Love Jesus". We would sing it and some of us would sing it with all our hearts. We meant it then but can we sing it with the same gusto today that we did then? Time and trials and life-altering decisions often get in the way of that love and people begin to justify the poor choices that we have made with the words, "Well, we all are only human, after all, aren't we?"

Well, yes, but if you will read Romans 7 and 8 you will find that the solution to that is the Holy Spirit of Christ which He promise to us all if we will receive Him gladly into our lives. Christ promised Him – it is up to us to welcome Him into our lives, our hearts and our decisions.

God bless and go and have a great day.

Paul A. Kirby is the pastor at the Church of God at 3939 S. Emerson Ave.

WHY PRINT?

ENGAGEMENT

According to International News Media Association, printed newspapers boast the highest amount of ad engagement by readers.

While other mediums allow for the option to ignore or "skip" an advertisement, newspaper ads are built into the content. (inma.org)

AFFORDABILITY

Newspapers offer a lower cost per thousand readers than radio, tv and direct mail advertising. (mediaspectrum.net)

TARGETING

Loyal readers and niche audiences are easier to reach when you know the geographic area and circulation. (fedena.com)
