COMMEMORATING 175 YEARS

St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran Church in Perry Township celebrates 175 years of heritage, tradition and worship

By Nicole Davis

When Pastor David Shadday came to St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran Church, U.A.C., he quickly realized how the parish had been able to stand the test of time: the members have a true understanding of the church's mission and of its heritage. St. Paul's will celebrate its 175th anniversary on Nov. 12, 9:30 a.m. at the Lutheran High School auditorium.

"My grandparents were baptized and raised in this church..." Shadday said, "Then years ago when my oldest granddaughter was born, she was baptized here at the same baptismal font that her great-great-grandparents were baptized at. You don't get that at many places. There is this connectivity to the people that preceded you, of God's blessing us with His grace for nine, 10 generations."

Rev. Johann Georg Kunz called the first meeting of 'German Evangelical Lutheran Congregation of Indianapolis, Marion County, Indiana U.A.C.' on Nov. 11, 1842, gathering together in a home with 18 members. Two years later, the 'St. Paul's' was added to the name. The first church building which opened in 1845 was located on Alabama Street, south of Washington Street. The congregation was incorporated in 1847, adding a school building that same year.

April 18, 1882, the church building burned down. By July 22, 1883, a new building was dedicated at McCarty and South New Jersey Street.

"It was basically a working class, family type of congregation," said St. Paul's historian and lifelong member, Donald Amt. "It started as a German congregation. In the 1850s to 1890s, they immigrated to Indianapolis. They came to St. Paul's whether they were Lutheran or not. It grew to just over 2,000 before (it) split. We had a lot of members who worked at Eli Lilly. We were in the area when Eli Lilly had a little lab on McCarty Street a couple blocks away. They started growing their campus and eventually surrounded us."

With such a large congregation, St. Paul's members eventually formed two additional churches: Trinity Lutheran which is now at 16th and Post, and Emmaus Lutheran in Fountain Square. To this day, St. Paul's members are involved in activities at both of these churches, particularly the food and clothing ministries at Emmaus and the hispanic ministry at Trinity.

While the Eli Lilly and Company campus began to surround St. Paul's property, they also formed a good partnership with one another, members said. However, with a lack of a surrounding community, decreased membership and expensive utilities and costs of upkeep, it became apparent that it was time to relocate.

St. Paul's moved to its current, 17-acre, Perry Township location, 3932 Mi Casa Ave., Indianapolis, in 1959. Today, the congregation is focused on growing its membership and its outreach programs, including its Ministry of Mercy which distributes food and clothing to those in need.

"Our people have really grabbed onto that," Shadday said. "I'm continually amazed at how much food comes in here on a weekly basis from our families. We're feeding quite a few families every month. There's not that many of us, but they have been extremely generous and willing to give of themselves to help other people."

As part of their outreach, they also allow a group of Burmese residents to use the facilities to establish their own Christian church. Three members of St. Paul's sit on the board for Lutheran High School, a school which they have supported from its inception.

There are approximately 200 members at St. Paul's today. The demographic has continually fluctuated, from having families with lots of children so that the church needed to operate a school, to having an older population and halting school services. Today, younger families with children are beginning to return to the parish, making for a mixture of ages within its membership.

"We have a big focus on families," said member, Tim Comerford. "Being a small congregation, we can be very intimate in terms of knowing each other. At the same time, we're very open and welcoming. When my family joined St. Paul's, we don't have any family in Indianapolis, my kids wound up with over 200 sets of grandparents. That's one of the things we continue today, is encourage the children, the kids, this is part of their home. We encourage them to treat it with the respect of their home."

Much has changed through the years, but a lot has also remained the same: the gospel, the tradition of music, and the understanding of the heritage that led them to where they are today.

"As someone that's been a pastor in three different parishes, I came here and everyone understood why we're here," Shadday said. "They understood what the mission of the church is. Nothing that I had to say came as a surprise. It shouldn't. The reason we're here is people have understood why we're here. It's been a group of people who understand how gracious God has been and respond with their love for people."

Lifelong member Bob Amt said he was away for a time, four years in college and three while in the army, but quickly returned.

"The memories as you would get to certain points of the year, there was no question that St. Paul's was home," Bob said. "I came back here, back in the choir, back here every Sunday. I got married. My wife and I were already attending services together when we were dating. Alice said a friend of hers said have you thought about switching to a different congregation? She said Bob will never leave St. Paul's."

Bob is chairing the 175th Anniversary Committee. The actual anniversary is Nov. 11, while the celebration takes place on the following Sunday, Nov. 12. A German-themed luncheon will take place, with Dr. Daniel Gard, president of Concordia University in Chicago, speaking. Gard entered into the seminary from St. Paul's church. Gettysburg - the stories

HAUNTS & JAUNTS

By Rick Hinton

Gettysburg, Pa. is claimed to be an “extreme” haunted location. From the three day campaign of fear, adrenaline, emotional despair, and sudden death and injury, I don't doubt it! Laura and I were there only three days... hardly time to scratch the surface. The battle was a demonstration of humanity at its best and worst, seemingly with supernatural ramifications carrying over to this day. These are just a few of my favorite stories and observations from others over the years:

Stories of sightings of phantom brigades moving through the early morning fog; audible sounds of music, singing and shouting; drums, rifle and cannon fire; re-en actors encountering those in period garb turning out NOT to be re-en actors; Sachs Bridge, a retreat point for the Confederate Army has become a focal point of local lore, drawing folks almost nightly; the sighting of a woman continually roaming over East Cemetery Hill; and, strange happenings at Gettysburg College (known as Pennsylvania College during the battle). Severely wounded soldiers were taken there.

The west side of Baltimore Street houses a building now known as the Soldier's National Museum. During the battle it was used as the headquarters of General Howard. Afterwards it became an orphanage for children. The “dungeon,” a basement alcove, was used by a particularly wicked matron who thought that punishment was best suited by chaining children to the walls and leaving them in darkness. Reports from this location have included apparitions and the sound of children's voices, sometimes laughing.

The Jennie Wade home — the only civilian causality as she baked bread in the kitchen — has activity: upstairs footsteps, a second floor security chain swinging on its own accord, and children visitors seeing the apparitions of other children.

I could go on and on, yet space does not allow. Our group did, however, have a few oddities occur.

Presently, the group continues to pull out ghostly images from photographs. The Triangular Field is a past hotbed of activity, producing mists, shadow figures, rustling in the treeline, and the feel of eyes upon you. Steve Hunt knelt upon the ground and came up with with a cut and finger sized welts upon one leg. He stated if felt as if something had grabbed his leg, yet, not in a threatening way. The next morning the site was examined. There were no rocks or sticks that would have caused the injury. One of my photos showed two shadow masses in the field. This photo mysteriously disappeared from my camera card. This has been known to happen.

On Cemetery Ridge Laura was walking alone near the High Water Mark when she was suddenly enveloped in body odor. She backed out of it and then returned to experience the same. On that hot July during the third day of battle soldiers would have been profusely sweating (and had been for the past two days) without the benefit of a shower.

At the Jennie Wade House a photo of Tim Poynter in a mirror, found with a “figure” standing at his shoulder. You can see in the expanded photo no one was standing next to him.

Two of Laura's photos (downtown Gettysburg and re-en actors on the battlefield) came out sepia toned (black & white). The camera did this itself.

Good times at Gettysburg! We are already planning a return trip.

Families fill Southport Park for annual Trunk-or-Treat event

By Nicole Davis

Families filled Southport Park on Oct. 29, dressed in their best costume and bundled in their warmest coat for the annual Trunk-or-Treat event.

Funded by the Southport Parks Department, One Christian Church supplied many of the volunteers for the free event. Volunteers creatively decorated the trunks of their cars - everything from a spooky scene to a Candy Land set. While most of the volunteers handed out candy, Southport Police officers also stood by the trunks of their police cars to hand out stuffed toys to the children. Children could earn even more candy by playing games manned by church volunteers next to the community center.

Breaking policy

Beech Grove Police challenges the community to help raise funds for cancer awareness during No-Shave November

FEATURE

By Nicole Davis

It's been 16 years since Beech Grove Deputy Police Chief Michael Maurice hasn't had to pick up a razor and shave to keep in compliance with the Beech Grove Police Department's grooming policy - even longer for some of the other officers. This November, nearly 2/3 of the department has opted to forgo the razor and donate to charitable causes for No-Shave November.

"It's good for the public to see their police department involved in stuff since we are so visible out there," Maurice said. "I think once it gets out there, what we're doing, especially Beech Grove residents will love it."

The No-Shave November movement encourages participants to donate the money they would have otherwise spent on shaving-related products and services to cancer research and education. This year's charities receiving the proceeds are Prevent Cancer Foundation, Fight Colorectal Cancer and St. Jude Children's Research Hospital.

BGPD's grooming policy states that officers must have their hair off their collar and their ears, no beards, no goatees and be clean shaven, but they can have a mustache.

"The minute any of us hit on vacation, no one has a razor," said Captain Robert Mercuri. "The minute someone gets sent to Safe Streets, everyone has a goatee or a beard. It's one of those things that if you never have it as an option, you're dying to have it the minute you can."

Starting Oct. 28, the department suspended the facial hair portion of its policy. Officers who participate in No-Shave November won't be touching that razor until Nov. 30. Of the 34 officers, 18 to 20 have signed up to participate and donated to the cause.

"Some guys joke about how they would grow a wild beard, but I think we'll pay it pretty even keel to show it's really not that big of a deal," said Officer David Parker. Parker, who has worked with BGPD for six years, said he came from a department where facial hair was permitted. "I think it makes us somewhat more approachable, it makes us more normal to the people we're out there working with everyday. It takes away some of that wall, that we have this military look, and makes us more normal guys."

The department is also looking to get the community involved. It has set a goal to raise $2,500. Those interested can donate at no-shave.org/team/BGPD. It has also teamed up with Chad's Barbershop to figure out additional ways to raise money for the cause.

The officers have challenged other departments across central Indiana to jump on board. IMPD has since agreed. One officer from each department will be chosen at the end of the month to compete for their department's "best beard."

"It's a good cause, going to the three charities that No-Shave November supports, cancer research," Parker said. "The biggest thing is it's a moral booster. It's infused us all with some excitement and camaraderie. We're not going to really compete but it'll be fun to check on each other's progress. We don't know what any of us look like with facial hair. ... We hope it continues every November, and I think a lot of guys would love it to be a year-long thing."

FROM THE EDITOR

Prepare food
for the holidays

As the temperature drops, we start thinking more about hearty stews, warm soups, and mashed potatoes covered in gravy. You probably have a 20-pound turkey in your fridge or freezer in preparation for Thanksgiving, or maybe an extra-large sack of potatoes in your pantry. Now imagine tomorrow you woke up and opened the pantry to find there was nothing inside. Seems like a nightmare, right?

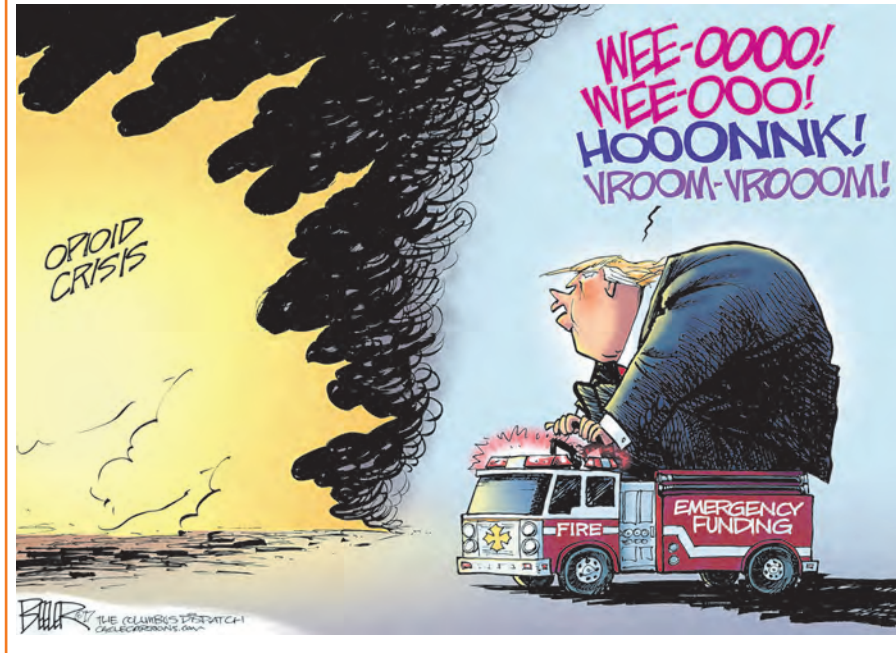

Sadly, this is a reality for many people who use food banks. They worry about whether they can feed their kids or just themselves every day. More often than not, people who use food banks are employed, have run into some kind of crisis, and are unable to make ends meet. Kids are going to school, looking forward to eating rather than learning because they have not eaten at home. One in seven Americans are reportedly using food banks, and using them more often. The food bank is no longer just an emergency stop; it's a vital place for hungry Americans to come so that they can fill their families' bellies.

You can help this food crisis by spending a few extra dollars on healthy groceries to donate to food pantries. If you walked into the grocery store right now, you could probably pick up a generically-branded jar of sauce and a box of pasta for under three dollars. Soup costs even less per can, and is in high demand in food pantries during the winter season. Both these items are desired by food pantries as readily accessible and easy to prepare, but canned veggies and instant milk are also in high demand. By spending a little extra money in the store when you go shopping, you can bring a simple joy, the joy of a full stomach, to someone in need.

Thinking of donating? Don't forget about Hunger Inc., Servant's Heart or the plethora of church pantries on the Southside where the donations stay local!

IASC Administrator of the Year is awarded to Principal Kevin Koers

#THANKaPRINCIPAL – The Franklin Central High School Student Council surprised and honored Principal Kevin Koers on his 18 years of service during its October's National Principal's Month! The recognition campaign, called #THANKaPRINCIPAL is sponsored by the National Association of Student Councils. Members presented him with the following: a banner with a hand-written notes for all the little things they notice he does to make FC so awesome; 18 balloons with special notes for the 18 years he has dedicated to making FC a 4-Star, nationally recognized school; a "Slam Dunk Principal" basketball goal because he played basketball in college; animal crackers because "it'd be a Zoo without Mr. Koers;" highlighters because he is the "highlight" of our school; donuts because we "donut" know what we'd do without him; gum because he goes the "Extra" mile; fortune cookies because it our "good fortune" to have him as a principal!

Student Council Co-Presidents, Emily Evans and Carson Whitesell, ended the presentation with a special announcement on behalf of Indiana Association of Student Council Director Rob Zeider: Mr. Koers has been named the IASC ADMINISTRATOR OF THE YEAR! He will be honored at the State Convention at the Indianapolis Marriott Hotel on Nov. 4 where he will be presented a plaque in front of hundreds of Student Councils across the state. Student Council is very grateful for Mr. Koers and his continued support of our leadership programs!

Getting to know Jared...

- Favorite coffee drink: espresso, iced with almond milk and our handcrafted vanilla.
- Faith is obviously a huge part of our life. ... My wife and I currently mentor to young married couples. My wife teaches a mentoring class to seniors at our Christian school and is part of writing a curriculum to allow other Christian schools to bring this same program into their class that really prepares students for life beyond high school.
- Brickhouse is family-owned. It's myself and my wife who manage it. Our 18-year-old is one of our top baristas. Our 12-year-old will do what she can.
- We really don't have names for our drinks. We make off-menu names for our drinks too. One is The Marshall. The fire marshal came in for inspections and I made him a drink. He really wasn't a coffee drinker. We have a vanilla soft-serve cream that I used with two shots of espresso over ice and blended it together. He loved it. Because of that he became a coffee drinker. We called it The Marshall because of him.

How did Jared do it?

BEST ADVICE:

Take the path that leads to peace.

WORST ADVICE:

Hasn't happened yet.

BEST BUSINESS DECISION:

Follow the best business advice I've been given.

SECRET TO SUCCESS:

Show up. Persevere. Repeat. You're either going to build your dream or someone else's.

IN 5 YEARS...

Keep pursuing the dream and the vision that The Lord has given.

Bringing craft to the coffeehouse

Stayton family roasts and serves coffee at Brickhouse Coffee Co. in Greenwood to grow community and support mission work

By Nicole Davis

The Stayton family has brought a new type of coffee-drinking experience to the Southside. It's more than than the smell of freshly-made coffee a customer can expect when they walk through the door or the hot (or cold) cup o' joe they'll receive upon ordering.

Brickhouse Coffee Co. at 100 Byrd Way, Greenwood has used the same concept as a craft brewery business but with coffee as its product. The beans are roasted in-house, allowing customers to experience roasting and production first-hand.

"Coffee is our means, our tool to develop community," said Brickhouse co-owner, Jared Stayton. "Crafting. Coffee. Community. became one of our slogans. We're artisans. Community is what we want to craft, now only within our coffee shop, but in our surrounding communities. And we want to train others how to do the same thing"

The idea was born on the mission field.

Having grown up on the Eastside of Indianapolis, Jared tried his hand at university before looking for a career. He worked in the fitness industry, mortgage business in Greenwood, network marketing, roofing and remodeling, before feeling called to attend Bible college. He, his wife Lora, and two daughters moved onto the Bible college campus, where the desire came to go on a mission trip to Southern Spain. The family spent a year and a half, from 2010 to 2012, working in a community center.

"We struggled financially," Jared said. "We wanted to find an alternative means to support ourselves as opposed to relying 100 percent on friends, family and churches for our support. Looking for jobs within the community would only take away opportunities for locals to have jobs. We started looking at doing business as a mission. Coffee seemed to be this international phenomenon. No matter where you go in the world, there are people drinking coffee and tea."

Jared had gone to a barista school prior to leaving for Spain and had also developed a passion for coffee. The family decided to put together a business model that would allow them to sustain as missionaries and teach others how to do the same.

"Our heart is to be a vocational training facility for mission work."

- Jared Stayton

They began roasting coffee four years ago, knowing that the business would need to start as a roastery, selling fresh, direct-trade beans to churches, coffee shops and individuals. From there, they started a catering service with a mobile espresso bar. The next part of their plan was to open a retail center.

The family brought in a business partner in December, and were able to purchase a new production roaster built in Carson City, Nev.

Then they started looking at locations on the Northeast side of Indianapolis. They received a call from developer, Randy Faulkner, who had purchased the former Jonathan Byrd's Cafeteria building in Greenwood.

"From the moment we walked in, we knew this is where we were supposed to be," Jared said. "We met with a designer and knew exactly what we wanted in a coffee shop. We didn't brand it as a coffee shop; we branded it as a crafthouse. We are very much hands-on. We do it all ourselves, as much as we can."

After four to five months of building, Brickhouse opened its retail location in August. A grand opening was celebrated on Oct. 21.

The interior, Jared describes as vintage industrial with a little bit of farmhouse.

Brickhouse works with an import partner in Kansas City, obtaining its direct-trade beans from Brazil, Columbia, Ethiopia and Indonesia. There aren't necessarily names for the drinks on the menu. Customers can craft their own drink by choosing the type of brew, hot, cold or frozen, type of milk and if they want a flavoring. The syrups are made in house, with no preservatives.

It doesn't end in Greenwood. Jared said they plan to build multiple locations, from the Southside to Northside to downtown. Greenwood will be the only roastery/production site. Ultimately, though, their goal is to return to Southern Spain with Brickhouse.

"Our heart is to be a vocational training facility for mission work," he said. "At some point, we hope to take this back to Spain, develop a world-class company."

2017 4Q Hiring Trends Show Signs of Optimism and Challenges

By Mike Heffner

This summer and early fall, the demand for talent has been very high on the Southside of Indianapolis and surrounding area. The unemployment rate in the area is around 3 percent as of September, down from 3.4 percent in August. This is the lowest it has been in years. I have been getting lots of questions asking about what I am seeing as we move into 2018. I thought I would share some insight from the recent national Express Employment Professionals Job Insights Survey for the 4Q. The report leaves me optimistic about the future but also nervous as it seems to be a constant battle for local employers to find good people.

Optimistic about the economy

Business is growing and demand seems high. The majority of respondents reported that they expect to see an upward trend in hiring, or at least maintain the status quo. Only 11 percent of businesses expect their employment activity to trend downward in the 4Q of 2017.

Up slightly since the beginning of 2017, 45 percent of respondents said they expect business to trend up, followed by 44 percent who believe their hiring activity will stay on par with current levels. In fact, these statistics have remained relatively consistent throughout 2017.

The most robust hiring activity this year has been in the "general labor" segment, followed by skilled labor (industrial), and administrative/office clerical. And perhaps the most optimistic statistic heading into 2018, 92 percent of respondents did not plan to eliminate positions in the 4Q—which is up from 86 percent in 4Q 2016.

Despite optimism, qualified candidate pools continue to dry

Across most industries, there are jobs to be found. However, candidates with the skills to fill in-demand positions are becoming fewer and far between. Attracting and retaining top performers continues to be one of the highest priorities for businesses.

The Job Insights Survey revealed that more than 70 percent of businesses say it is "somewhat" or "very" difficult to recruit for and fill positions, with the top three reasons jobs go unfilled including lack of applicants with experience, lack of applicants in general, and lack of applicants with hard skills.

Some wage growth locally but still slow

Wage growth is often a barometer for the health of the overall economy. Locally as the labor market has tightened, I have seen the average wage grow 7 percent over the same time last year with local clients. I see this trend continuing as employers are seeing the need to increase wages to hold on to and attract the talent they need.

The challenges that come with a strong economy and tight talent market can be maddening at times. I have been fearful that the difficulty in finding good people for businesses would really slow the economy but so far the growth has continued even as the labor market tightens. I have also been pleased to see companies that are taking steps to improve the engagement and retention efforts to help make their workplace as attractive as possible.

The Wine Market opens in Fountain Square

Market – The Wine Market at Fountain Square opened its doors on Oct. 12 at 1031 Virginia Ave., in a building that once housed Skip's Market and has been fully renovated for its second life. The iconic corner building at Virginia and Woodlawn Avenues has been reimagined to provide casual comfortable café style seating along with an intimate private event room on the second level. Both residents of Fountain Square, Partners Kris Bowers and Zachary Davis chose the bustling location because of the neighborhood's eclectic mix of independent restaurants, bars, breweries and shops and their desire to share their love of wine with their neighbors. The Wine Market will offer a wide variety of wines from virtually every wine producing region of the world with a rotating selection of by-the-glass options. Coworking comes to Greenwood

By Andrew Angle

When your business is one that enables you to get work done by merely having a reliable computer with Internet access, it's feasible to either work from the comfort of home or the local coffee shop. When I mention to others that I have been working from home for most of the past 20 years, the response is typically, "Wow! I wish I could do that!"

Although the work-from-home life has its advantages, I have found that coffee shops are too noisy. Being at home can be either too noisy or too quiet. Either place can be isolating while lacking an air of professionalism.

Having seen the co-working spaces in Broad Ripple, Fishers, and some sprouting downtown, I was disappointed at the lack of such places in Johnson County. Co-working would be great, but not great enough to welcome a long commute. Based upon the local demand, I even pondered the possibility of launching a co-working space, but concluded that it would be more work than I could responsibly accept. I did, however, find a private office on Madison Avenue in Greenwood, just north of Winchester Place. Shared Office Leasing was surprisingly affordable. It was a relief to finally get a real business address and plenty of storage for my business junk. Upon moving in, a fellow tenant in that converted residence soon became my new client. The deal paid my rent. Yay! Had I stayed home, this business wouldn't have happened and Google Maps would still be showing a balloon over my house. The virtually silent private office is nice, but I was still wishing it provided more of a co-working element.

This October a co-working space finally launched in Greenwood. "Greenhouse JoCo" was born from the collective efforts of its founder, Laura Kennedy, plus the City of Greenwood, Mayor Mark Myers, the Greenwood Chamber, and the essential donation of floor space in the Tilson building by I-65. Co-working space is about more than "square footage." Greenhouse JoCo is a co-working space that provides freelancers, entrepreneurs, startups, and groups with coworkers, connections, and unforeseen business opportunities. With this news, you can consider me their newest member.

PEER TO PEER

You Build it They Will Come

By Howard Hubler

So, from time to time, I go to the Chick-fil-A on the Southside at Southport Road and 65. Typically, I'll pick up a couple of meals, take them to my mom's house and talk about the state of the world. Unfortunately, it was closed the last few months as it was down for construction. One day it was there, the next day there was a giant crater where a Chick-fil-A used to be. I came back a month or so later and there was a brand new Chick-fil-A that was twice the size of the old one.

Well, the big day approached where I was going to give it a try. The other one was plagued with long waits and this new was so large I could not imagine a wait. After walking quite a ways down the frontage road, I walked in the front door. To my dismay, the line was from the front door all the way to the area where you would normally start the line. However, next to every fourth or fifth person in line was a person with a vest on and a headset. They would ask you your name and what you wanted to eat. When it was my turn, it was painless. The line was as fast as any line you've ever experienced. Everyone simply went to the nearest cash register of which there were several and stated your name. As quickly as that, they handed you your meal, you paid and walked out the door. I noticed the lanes for the drive-through were three lanes wide. Again, young, smiling, happy people with vests and two-way radios were greeting drivers. I presume the same drill, "Name, and what would you like to eat?" Those lines were going as fast as an interstate tollbooth. Eisenhower brought the first tollbooth back from World War II along with the interstate as the only idea that we copied from Europe. We're still trying to figure out trains. Anyway 70-some years later we've finally figured out the magic for making a tollbooth flow. I guess Chick-fil-A just took a page out of their best practices manual.

Advertising executives can give me the name of legions of fast food companies whose names we have long since forgotten. Chick-fil-A won't be one of those companies that you need to concern yourself with anytime in the near future. Have a blessed day. (No, I did not get a 12 piece chicken nuggets in exchange for this article)

"To my dismay, the line was from the front door all the way to the area where you would normally start the line."

Mike Middleton opens Music Lessons of Indianapolis, offering instruction for all ages

Compiled by Nicole Davis

Mike Middleton says he enjoys sharing his knowledge about guitar and his love for music.

With a background in ad and web design, he has also balanced his time with guitar instruction since 2004 and has played the guitar since 1980. Seeing a growing interest in lessons, he officially opened Music Lessons of Indianapolis this October.

Music Lessons of Indianapolis, at 5703 S. East Street, Suite F, Indianapolis, offers one-on-one lessons, group lessons and pre-school music classes on a variety of instruments. Current lessons include drum, guitar, cello with a plan to expand into even more as the business progresses. The school, open Monday through Saturday, 1 to 9 p.m., features private teaching studios and a waiting area for parents and siblings.

"I love to see beginners get a grasp on the instrument and that moment when they realize that they can do it and they're actually playing a song," Middleton said. "That gives me a lot of personal satisfaction as a teacher. It's just great to watch students progress throughout a long period of time, also."

Music Lessons of Indianapolis is an expansion of the Mike Middleton Guitar Academy which has been in business in Indianapolis since May of 2015. Middleton, a Perry Township resident, originally from Wabash, Ind., has brought in the students he was already teaching with another guitar instructor and is looking to grow that clientele.

"One thing I'm really looking forward to is getting students involved in a group setting, so they're playing with other musicians as a group," he said. "Often students just play for their teacher, parents or family members but they don't get a lot of opportunities when they're younger to play with other musicians. I'd like to match musicians together to play and do performances, too."

Why did you open this business?

I was teaching guitar from my apartment. I have been doing that since the Spring of 2015. My schedule was full, so I had to hire another guitar teacher. We wanted to expand and get some drums and piano involved. The only way to do that is to go out and open a new business.

What did you do to prepare for opening your business?

I did contact several teachers who taught piano, guitar, drums and try to line up some teachers. I had to buy a lot of new equipment for the place and furnish it. I wanted a comfortable setting for parents who were waiting on students.

Who is your ideal customer/client?

We teach students of all ages.

How do you plan to be successful?

I'm doing a lot of promoting right now, just going from door to door, handing out fliers, a lot of footwork trying to let people know about us. I plan to give the best service I possibly can and provide a nice place for lessons, so hopefully people will continue to come back as they'll like the atmosphere and the service.

What would we be surprised to learn about you or your company?

We have pre-school classes in the works. It would be from ages 3 to 5. We have had some people interested in it but would still need to get a few more to form the class... We can work with preschoolers, teach them how to sing, clap and count rhythms, let them experiment with different instruments and see what they become excited about and what instrument they may choose to pursue later.

About me personally: I was in The American Coaster Enthusiast Club (ACE) for many years. I had a bit of an obsession with roller coasters for a few years. I would try to make an amusement park trip every weekend. I have ridden hundreds of different roller coasters in dozens of different amusement parks.

Thank You for Your Service
questionably written, well-acted flick

MOVIE REVIEW

By Adam Staten

As the saying goes, "war is hell." At times, though, war is a necessary evil but the conflict can result in long-lasting, life-altering ramifications for both the victor and the loser. In addition to the obvious physical scarring, those who have served sometimes suffer emotional and mental wounds, which, sadly, often go undetected.

Thank You for Your Service is the true story of three soldiers returning from a tour of duty in Iraq and the difficulties they encounter during their return to civilian life. The film begins with a plane full of soldiers landing back in the good 'ole US of A. Family and friends stand on the tarmac awaiting their heroes' triumphant return home, armed with an abundance of hugs and kisses. However, things are not as pleasant as they first appear on the surface.

All three characters soon begin exhibiting obvious signs of post traumatic stress disorder. A deadly occurrence forces them to reexamine their current situation and seek treatment. After realizing they need help to process what happened during combat, they basically get the middle finger from the government. Due to bureaucratic red tape at the veterans' affairs office, wait times for the psychiatric care they need can take up to a year.

Things continue to spiral downward for our three characters. For instance, one of the three comes home to find his girlfriend has moved out and taken nearly everything with her. A second character, who soon learns he is going to become a father, turns to a life of crime in order to provide for his child. The third character seems completely uninterested in fatherhood and his marriage and starts exhibiting suicidal behavior.

As what can be easily gleaned from the summary, Thank You for your Service isn't exactly the most lighthearted and uplifting of films. It's also not the best written either. Except for the three main characters, nobody else is really fleshed out at all and even then, most of the time, our three protagonists feel more like their symptoms and not actual people. The film never really allows the audience to settle in and get to know the characters.

Even with some flawed writing, Miles Teller turns in another strong performance as a veteran dealing with severe mental anguish. He's easily the brightest aspect of a film shining the light on an important and often over looked topic.

Perry Twp. Kiwanis donate to Trusted Mentors

Service - The Kiwanis Club of Perry Township recently donated funds to the Trusted Mentors program. Executive Director and Founder Jeri Warner and volunteer mentor Mark Wiley (left) received the donation from Kiwanis President Les Branham. Trusted Mentors connects trained volunteer mentors with at-risk adults to help them stay housed and out of prison. The club was formed in 1982 and meets at the IHOP restaurant, 7521 U.S. 31 South, Thursdays at 7 a.m. Through fundraising events held during the year, Kiwanis supports community programs such as this one as well as college scholarships, Baxter YMCA, Riley Hospital for Children and Hunger Inc. food bank, among others.

Volunteers needed to pack 50,000 meals

Feeding the hungry - While some shoppers are planning to pack shopping bags full of gifts the day after Thanksgiving, others are planning to pack bags of a different kind. On Nov. 24, Pack Away Hunger will host its 5th annual Pack Friday event, giving volunteers an opportunity to pack meals for local families in need. At the family-friendly event, each volunteer will pack 200 Nutri-Plenty® Meals, a highly nutritious blend of rice, soy, vegetables, vitamins and minerals. This year, the meals packed at Pack Friday will be distributed to local food pantries and areas that have been affected by recent hurricanes. Pack Friday volunteers can choose from three shifts on Friday, Nov. 24 (9 a.m., 11a.m. and 1 p.m.). The event takes place at La-Quinta Inn & Suites Ballroom, 5120 Victory Dr., Indianapolis. Pre-registration is required at PackAwayHunger.org. While the event is free, participants have the opportunity to create a personal fundraising page for the event.

Peace begins at the kitchen stove

NUTRITION

By Wendell Fowler

A good society is built one citizen at a time. When you are healthy, you are happy. Therefore, peace on earth begins with you.

Rainy, chilly fall days and unstable political times stimulate folks to dive into rich, heavy, comforting foods that fill the belly, warm the bones and dissolve uncertainties. Are your feel-good foods made with ingredients that create health and ultimately, happiness? Hardy foods, often high in empty calories and fat, break down more slowly in the digestive tract, releasing a steady flow of energy to the temple and raising body temperature. Good fats and quality ingredients are important. With a substitution here or an addition there, anyone can create health and a peaceful soul.

When we own our health and happiness, with each mouthful we positively contribute to our world ravaged by endless war, racism, hostile contention and toxic language. If you are expecting someone other than yourself or ET's to swoop down and save us from ourselves, don't hold your breath. It's not that easy. Peace begins within you, not outside you. Friends, when you are naturally healthy and happy, your light shines brightly and dilutes the darkness.

America's been unknowingly eating against its nature for too long: disconnected from earth's apothecary, source and everything relative to a healthy, harmonious earthly existence. And it's not your fault! You've been misled by the botched Standard American Diet that causes aggressive social behavior and 45 percent of all deaths from heart disease, diabetes, stroke and cancer. (JAMA).

Today, more than ever, we need a revolution of brotherly love that begins at the supper table. It warms my heart that so many are becoming healthier: reconnected to wholesome plant-based vitamin nutrition. No one wants to give up comfort food. Here's healthier swaps and additions that contribute to your health and peace of mind.

- Non-dairy cheese for full fat dairy cheese
- Coconut milk for cream
- Meat alternatives rather than hamburger and smoked meats
- Swap white flour or semolina flour pasta for whole wheat, brown rice, or bean flour pasta. (We prefer Barilla Plus)
- Stevia, real honey or maple syrup for toxic sugar
- More fresh, undercooked fruits & veggies
- Sprinkle chia or ground flax seed on food
- Add beans to salads, stir-fries and soups
- Blend pureed pumpkin or sweet potatoes into potages as thickeners
- Switch from corn, safflower, or grape-seed oil to avocado oil
- Mindfully season food with love

Local chefs and bartenders to compete in 25th Annual Taste of the Southside

FEATURE

During the 25th Annual Taste of the Southside, attendees will be able to watch as the area's best chefs and bartenders compete during live challenges. The Taste of the Southside, presented by Meijer, supported by DiscountFilters.com, First Merchants Bank and Sam's Club and organized by the Greater Greenwood Chamber of Commerce, will feature a Chef Challenge and Mixology Competition.

Three chefs will vie for the coveted title of Master Chef while incorporating a mystery basket of ingredients provided minutes before the start of the event. Chef Michael Leak from Stone Creek Dining Company will be back to defend his title for a third year:

- Chef Kelly Milligan, Chef Suzanne Catering
- Chef Nick Workman, Tried & True Alehouse

Chefs will have 30 minutes, starting at 5 p.m., to prepare a meal judged on plate presentation, flavor, portion size and how creatively the mystery ingredients were incorporated for a panel of judges. The Best Chef will be announced at 5:45 p.m.

The Mixology Competition returns for a third year allowing bartenders to compete for the title of Master Mixologist. Stacy Olthoff from Stone Creek Dining Company will return to defend her title against:

- Carlos Fiero, Hops and Fire Craft Tap House
- Mike Williams, Big Woods Franklin

Bartenders will begin preparing their concoctions based on what the chefs prepare in addition to using the same mystery ingredient starting at 5:15 p.m. The drinks will be judged on name, balance, simplicity, taste, originality, presentation and how well the mystery ingredient is incorporated. The panel of judges will name the winner at 5:45 p.m.

Tickets can be purchased online at GreenwoodChamber.com or at the door. Each ticket holder can sample from all vendors without buying additional food or beverage tickets. Early access tickets are $45 each and allow guests a 30-minute early entrance. General admission tickets are $40.

The Taste of the Southside will be held on Sunday, Nov. 5, 2017 at the Primo Banquet and Conference Center (2615 East National Ave., Indianapolis) from 4:30 – 7 p.m.

Reba Boyd Wooden receives Indiana Woman of Achievement Award

Retired teacher – Reba Boyd Wooden has been named a recipient of a 2017 Indiana Woman of Achievement Award on Oct. 18 at Ball State University. The award recognizes her Distinction in Advocacy for Education, Civil, and Human Rights. Reba was a teacher and guidance counselor at Perry Meridian High School for 31 years before her retirement in 2005. This is the 18th year that the College of Sciences and Humanities at Ball State University has celebrated outstanding contributions of women in this way. Indiana Women of Achievement Awardees are drawn from many walks of life and display many different talents. Previous awardees have included judges, a university president, scientists, educators, business innovators, artists, community leaders and public servants. In each case, these are women who make the world better because of what they do and have done. Reba was nominated by Alice Bennett, Biology Professor Emeritus, Ball State University. Alice wrote: "Reba has made outstanding contributions to life in Indiana, supporting public education, science, civil liberties and civil rights..."

RHS Science teacher Robyn Witty honored

Math & science – Roncalli High School science teacher, Robyn Witty, was honored over fall break at a luncheon sponsored by the Indiana Department of Education. Robyn was recognized for being one of the four state finalists in the Presidential Awards for Excellence in Mathematics and Science Teaching. The Presidential Awards are the nation's highest honors for teachers of mathematics and science (including computer science). Since 1983, more than 4,700 teachers have been recognized for their contributions in the classroom and their profession. Award recipients serve as models for their colleagues, inspiration to their communities, and leaders in the improvement of mathematics and science education. In addition, recipients receive a certificate signed by the President of the United States, a trip to Washington D.C. to attend a series of recognition events and professional development opportunities, and a $10,000 award from the National Science Foundation.

Southport principal awarded District 7 Principal of the Year

Administration – On Friday, Nov. 17, the Indiana Association of School Principals (IASP) will recognize Amy Boone, Assistant Principal at Southport High School in Indianapolis as the 2017 Assistant Principal from IASP District 7.
