Greenwood closes purchase of former strip mall

Development - The Greenwood Redevelopment Commission (RDC) closed on the purchase of a former strip mall located at 1265 N. Madison Avenue located adjacent to the Greenwood Park Mall on Nov. 6. Formerly home to The Patriot's Table restaurant, the property has no current tenants and an assessed value nearly cut in half since 2012. The eight acre property is being considered for new park space, green infrastructure and improved overall aesthetics to enhance one of the city's most-visited areas. The city will seek community input before finalizing plans for the property. Demolition of the existing structures on the site is expected no later than early 2019. Madison Avenue streetscape improvements between Pearl Street and Noble Street are expected to begin in Spring 2019.

Johnson memorial Health receives "A" for patient safety

Rating - The Leapfrog Group, a national nonprofit health care ratings organization, today released new Leapfrog Hospital Safety Grades. The Safety Grade assigns letter grades of A, B, C, D and F to hospitals nationwide based on their performance in preventing medical errors, infections and other harms. Johnson Memorial Health was one of 832 awarded an "A" for its commitment to keeping patients safe and meeting the highest safety standards in the U.S. Larry Heydon, Johnson Memorial Health CEO/President, stated "We are pleased that our continuous performance improvement efforts are leading to our patients being safer from preventable harm, infections and medical errors. Receiving our fourth straight A from the Leapfrog Group clearly represents our ability in meeting the highest safety standards in the United States." To see Johnson Memorial's full grade, visit hospitalsafetygrade.org.

Beacon of Hope Crisis Center Executive Director Sandra Ziebold says the organization has seen rapid growth since relocating to Perry Township

By Nicole Davis

Beacon of Hope Crisis Center is seeing more walk-in clients than ever and experiencing rapid growth, thanks in part to its decision to relocate last February. The nonprofit aimed at serving the victims of domestic violence and sexual abuse had not only grown out of its former location in Hendricks County, but wanted to be more centralized to its Central Indiana client base, said CEO/Executive Director Sandra Ziebold.

The center at 6920 S. East St., Indianapolis, is that central location, is on a bus route and easily accessible: all factors which Ziebold said she hopes will allow victims to more easily utilize the services offered. After all, it's all about reaching these clients sooner, getting them out of negative and potentially dangerous situations.

"We have to try to get to them more quickly," she said. "You can see the homicide rates and linking it to domestic violence. If we can intervene more quickly, we can help save lives... You can see an uptick as people become more aware. We're excited to offer this service here in Perry Township."

Ziebold, a Franklin Township resident, has been involved with Beacon of Hope since 2012, serving four years as vice president of the board. As a survivor of domestic abuse herself, she said she was looking to be involved with a domestic abuse agency, allowing her to give back and let victims know that it is possible to get out of that situation, survive and thrive.

For four years, she was only able to dedicate nights and weekends to the cause while working another full-time job. When the former executive director resigned, the board spent a lot of time trying to fill that role. It was suggested to her, and she eventually considered, going for that position herself. She took over as CEO/executive director in the beginning of 2016.

"I love the fact that I am now dedicating my time 100 percent to helping victims get safe," she said.

Ziebold knew she wanted to grow the team and restructure the organization. Beacon of Hope was a domestic violence agency only. Under her leadership, the organization added sexual assault to its services. The organization is a member of Indiana Coalition of Domestic Violence and Indiana Coalition to End Sexual Assault.

The message Ziebold said she would really like to get out, is to help people understand why a victim won't leave.

"There's a lot of victim blaming out there," she said. "Survivors might be afraid that the'll be killed, the violence will increase, that their partner not be able to survive alone or might commit suicide, that they'll take the children, harm the children or their pets. They might threaten that if they tell anyone, they'll lose their children. There's a cycle of violence in an abusive situation, a cyclical tension building, explosion, calm and honeymoon scenario. That repeats, over and over. There is definitely a denial component. You think it's going to get better. Some of the honeymoon phase after the tension and explosion is 'I won't do it again,' and you want to believe. But often times it escalates. It's a regular pattern and it's difficult to break free of it because of the fear of what might happen. That's where places like Beacon of Hope can be helpful. Our advocates understand these barriers, can help build a safety plan and help victims understand what all is available to help them break that cycle."

Partnerships, such as Beacon of Hope has with local law enforcement agencies, are crucial, Ziebold said. These departments can call Beacon of Hope while they're investigating a domestic violence situation, where advocates can educate about what resources are available, which in turn increases the likelihood a victim will leave.

"Sometimes a lack of resources are a concern," she said. "You have no work history, no access to funds and children dependent on you. Those are things where we can help. Sometimes barriers are more about values or a cultural thing. We feel strongly that kids need a two-parent family. People marry for life. If you're raised religiously, divorce is wrong. That's a huge barrier. Sometimes, you just have to make that decision for your safety and your children."

Beacon of Hope is also certified by the State of Indiana Law Enforcement Training Board as a training provider for Indiana law enforcement on both domestic violence and sexual abuse.

Beacon of Hope serves approximately 900 clients per year, primarily in Marion, Johnson and Hendricks counties. Ziebold said while there are many organizations aimed to help these victims, it's not enough to meet demand. Since relocating to Perry Township, Ziebold said they are now at capacity and looking at grants and other fundraising efforts to be able to expand at its current facility.

"We're getting our foothold in this new location," she said. "People are getting more aware of our expanded services."

In October, Beacon of Hope served 87 new clients while providing follow-up and case management services to 700. Nine pets were placed in foster homes.

The organization was recently awarded the KLOVE Share the Love award for its positive impact in the community.

Grant funding to allow expansion typically requires community support, a match component. The organization recently received a $30,000 grand from Central Indiana Community Foundation. Beacon of Hope is is currently seeking grants and large donors to expand, add language services and become a 24/7 agency. There are currently nine people on staff, along with a team of volunteers. They are always looking for volunteers for the crisis call intake center, for which there is required training.

As part of those efforts, Beacon of Hope will have a Girls Night Out, Women Helping Women 2018 Fundraising Event, with Benedict Inn Retreat & Conference Center on Jan. 26, 7 to 9:30 p.m. Those interested can learn more at BeaconOfHopeIndy.org/girls-night-out.

It will host an event with Barbeque and Bourbon in Speedway, Ind., in February, in which law enforcement partners will serve dinner, with an auction. They are applying and hoping to compete in a Brackets for Hope Tournament in March.

Domestic Violence: Quick Facts

- 1 in 3 women and 1 in 4 men have been victims of some form of physical violence by an intimate partner within their lifetime.
- On average more than three women a day are murdered by their husbands or boyfriends in the United States.
- On a typical day, there are more than 20,000 phone calls placed to domestic violence hotlines nationwide.
- Only 34 percent of people who are injured by intimate partners receive medical care for their injuries.
- 72 percent of all murder-suicides involve an intimate partner; 94% of the victims of these murder suicides are female.
- Between 21-60 percent of victims of intimate partner violence lose their jobs due to reasons stemming from the abuse.
- A child witnessed violence in 22 percent (nearly 1 in 4) of intimate partner violence cases filed in state courts.
- Technology has become a quick and easy way for stalkers to monitor and harass their victims. More than one in four stalking victims reports that some form of cyberstalking was used against them, such as email (83 percent of all cyberstalking victims) or instant 2009 messaging (35 percent). Electronic monitoring of some kind is used to stalk one in 13 victims.

More about the programs:

Beacon of Hope's programs consist of its crisis call center, criminal justice program, domestic violence advocacy, sexual abuse advocacy, foster pet program, economic sustainability program, prevention empowerment program and teen talk outreach and education program. Sandra Ziebold explains those programs and their importance further:

Economic Sustainability:

"It's very important that we're empowering clients and helping them get independent and self sufficient. I feel strongly that we don't necessarily need more shelters but need to support our shelters. Our agency is trying to provide services to help victims in shelter and victims not needing shelter but to get out of their situation quickly. If they've been controlled financially or haven't been allowed to work, any number of barriers can come up, but they have to get economically sustainable to leave their situation and take care of their children. We're helping them get those skills, get those interviews. Whatever they need to get economically sustainable is a vital part."

Crisis Call Team:

"If law enforcement isn't involved, the crisis call team handles that. We're trying to do prevention. We're trying to make sure that situation doesn't evolve into law enforcement being involved. Sometimes those calls, their crisis might be in the past and they're still dealing with issues. They need counseling services."

Teen Talk Outreach and Education:

"We're trying to reach youth here in central Indiana - in church groups, middle, high schools and college campuses - to get the word out about what healthy relationships look like and what to do if you or someone you know is in trouble."

Foster Pet Program:

"Our foster pet program allows victims to safely leave their situation. Their pet can be fostered while they're trying to become self-sufficient and then they can be reunited with that pet."

Criminal Justice Program:

A program unique to Beacon of Hope, its Victims of Crime team works with the organization's six law enforcement partners: Speedway, Beech Grove, Lawrence, Greenwood, Bargersville and Southport Police Departments. "Anyone that comes in, if their domestic violence situation has law enforcement involved, that team handles that. Our advocates are able to educate the client about the criminal justice process."

Giving thanks Beech Grove High School hosts its third annual Community Thanksgiving Dinner

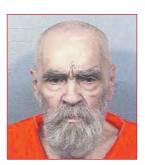

By Nicole Davis

More than 586 people RSVP'd to Beech Grove High School's Community Thanksgiving Dinner on Nov. 20.

Students, staff and community members volunteered throughout the night, serving guests a meal complete with dessert and drinks. The food was donated from the school's community partners, while Chartwells' staff prepared the meal. Central Elementary students colored Thanksgiving-themed placemats which were used throughout the night.

Charles Manson

An Indiana connection?

HAUNTS & JAUNTS

By Rick Hinton

Little Charlie Manson stared out over the confines of a western Indiana sunset, cherub cheeks and clear eyes (not the spinning pinwheels they would later become) and took in his future. The confine was actually his reality, taking place in a locked building, eventually becoming a series of homes as time rolled forward and to a degree, a form of refuge. It was a safe space... this institutional life; it would be for many years to come. But at that time, who would know of such things? Charles Manson had a tenure in Indiana. A sporadic and brief tenure for sure, but a tenure all the same...

Manson was born Nov. 12, 1934, in Cincinnati, Ohio, to 16 year old Kathleen Maddox (some say a drug addicted teen prostitute). A series of moves east began a continuous cycle of the instability of a single mother going through the motions of raising a young boy while battling her own personal demons. She at one point was incarcerated in prison for five years, placing her son in the home of relatives in West Virginia. It was not the stuff of Leave it to Beaver. Author Alan Hunter states, "His mother once traded him for a pitcher of beer at a bar."

And the Indiana connection?

After their move to Indiana in 1947, Manson became truant and began stealing from stores and his home. He was sent to the Gibault School for boys in Terre Haute, a setting for male delinquents run by Catholic priests. He was

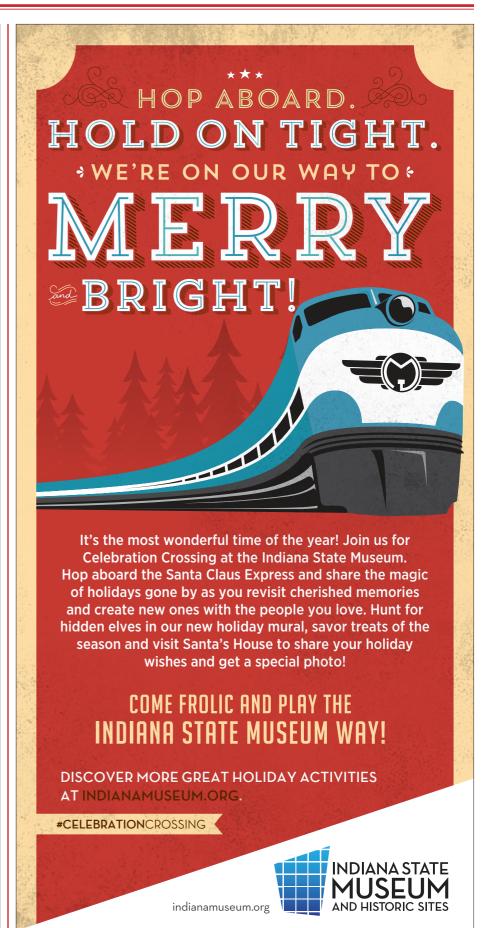

13. That didn't last long. "He escaped there," Hunter states. "He started stealing things, breaking into cars, businesses and homes." A stint in a juvenile facility in Nebraska produced another escape and robberies as he headed back east. Busted, he landed in the Indiana Boys School in Plainfield. He managed to escape from there on 18 different occasions. Using money from a robbery, he once rented a house near the then Central State Hospital. Manson spent about eight years in Indiana before heading to California. His transformation into a hippie cult leader-and under his influence-resulted in nine murders at four locations in July and August of 1969. It was the Summer of Love but quickly became Helter Skelter. His tenure in prison became his eternity!

Manson was a spastic little man with a history of controlling behavior, schizophrenia and paranoid delusions. He was also the consummate actor, relishing the influence he held over overs. He liked to perform, becoming the poster child for insanity, violence, and slivers of the macabre. He spent over half his life in correctional institutions. Reality check! Some folks are just caged animals that need to remain in their cages. At the end of the day, he would have never been released...

Manson died on Nov. 19, 2017, suffering from gastrointestinal bleeding. This era is finally over!

Put Giving Twists on Holiday Traditions

FAMILY FEATURES - If giving is an important aspect of your holiday traditions, you may find yourself repeating the same activities year after year. While the giving feels good, it can also grow monotonous. This season, make your generosity feel fresh and new by putting your own unique twist on your favorite holiday traditions.

COOK EXTRAS FOR THE COOKIE EXCHANGE.

A baking party is a wonderful way to kick off the holiday season. The delightful aromas and hours of laughter blend with the sweet treats for a cheery (and tasty) tradition. This year, instead of simply baking cookies to trade with your friends, encourage everyone to bake several extra batches and take them to a local soup kitchen or senior living community.

EXTEND A SEASONAL ICON.

The ringing bells and red kettles found outside of retailers across the nation are nearly as symbolic of the holiday season as twinkling lights and red-nosed reindeer.

During the holiday season, more than 3 million families and children rely on The Salvation Army to provide them with a warm meal on Christmas Day or toys for their children. This year, the organization is making it easy to extend those kettle collections offline as well with the Fight for Good campaign, which allows you to create your own fundraiser, including setting a goal and designating the cause you'd like to support. Visit redkettlereason.org to create your own fundraising page and encourage friends and family to donate and start their own pages.

In addition, you can donate to the Red Kettle Campaign by dropping dollars and coins into the thousands of Red Kettles found in front of retail stores and on street corners, or donate your time by contacting your local Salvation Army for volunteer opportunities.

ADD A SPECIAL PRE-DINNER STARTER.

The holidays bring plenty of opportunities for celebratory meals, and it's the perfect time to ask everyone to lend an hour or two to a good cause. Instead of spending hours around a table, spend some of that time catching up while you volunteer at a food bank or other charitable organization. When you make your way on to dinner, your festive spirit may be even stronger for the difference you made together.

TRAVEL WITH CARE.

As you flit from one place to the next checking off your list of holiday chores, you may encounter any number of homeless and needy families. Instead of simply handing over a few dollars as you pass by, keep a supply of holiday care packages in the car. Include items like warm socks or gloves, toiletries and non-perishable snacks. You may even want to include an uplifting note to share some festive seasonal cheer.

GIVE GIFTS WITH MEANING.

If you're like most people, there are many on your shopping list who truly don't need a thing. Instead of wracking your brain, donate to a cause in their honor. It may be the foundation of a beloved alma mater or an organization serving orphans in the country where they honeymooned. The more personal the connection, the more gratefully it will likely be received. After making your donation, simply gift your recipient with a card that explains the contribution you've made in their name.

No matter which cause you support, a fresh approach to your charitable giving can renew your spirit and enthusiasm for helping those in need this holiday season.

Wonder touching, feel good film

MOVIE REVIEW

By Adam Staten

Whoever said too much of a good thing is bad, is flat out wrong. For instance, can anyone make a compelling argument why you wouldn't want more vacation days? How about another zero added to your paycheck? See, two great examples where a lot more of something desirable would go a long way. One new film looks at kindness and how even just a little bit can greatly affect those around us.

Wonder is the story of 10-year-old Auggie Pullman who was born with a facial deformity. In order to shelter young Auggie from stares and cruel comments, he has been homeschooled by his mother (Julia Roberts). However, feeling that Auggie will have to learn how to deal with the real world at some point, Auggie's father (Owen Wilson) suggests enrolling him in public school. Initially, she objects to the idea, but his mother eventually relents and Auggie sets off for fifth grade.

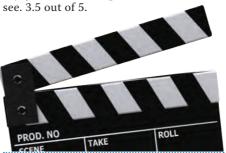

As is to be expected, his classmates are anything but kind as they ridicule, mock and taunt Auggie in front of him and behind his back. Failing to fit in or be accepted by his peers, Auggie is ready to go back to being homeschooled. However, a rather unexpected event happens, something neither Auggie's father, mother or older sister saw coming: Auggie makes a friend. This simple act of kindness - just being a friend- ends up changing Auggie, his family and his entire school.

While the story is rather simple, it has been done before in other films. However,

Wonder incorporates some features to help to set it apart from the rest. Instead of solely focusing on Auggie's struggle at school, the film is told from several other characters' perspectives. We see how having a brother with special needs affects his sister, her best friend and also get a glimpse of Auggie's best friend's point of view.

As a result, some issues do arise with this direction. A fourth of the way into the film, it switches gears and explores another character but for entirely too long and there are problems with consistency when this happens. The film also never really explores Auggie's parents. Instead, they feel more like stand-ins, without a whole lot of purpose in the film. While Roberts and Wilson are fine in their respective roles, they aren't given much to do.

Wonder isn't a perfect film and nearly every single scene tries to make you cry; nevertheless, it's still incredibly touching, enjoyable and an important film to

FROM THE EDITOR

Domestic violence touches home

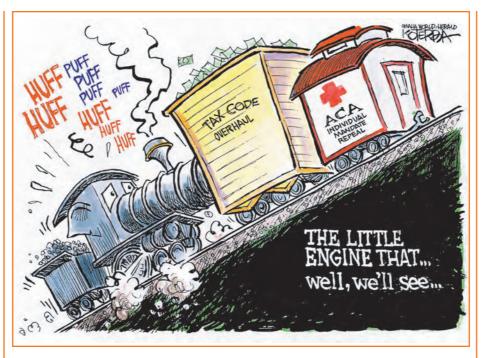

This week's cover story could not have come at a more relevant time to our Southside readers. As Beacon of Hope Executive Director Sandra Ziebold shared of the nonprofit's efforts to help domestic violence victims receive help and to get out of their situations, she described the uphill battle they face. Victims will continue to return to their abusive households, the situations escalating, growing worse and worse. Families don't understand why these victims don't just leave, and may give up trying to help. But it's a cycle that needs to be stopped, the sooner the better. Ziebold expressed sadness in stating, from the point of our conversation, that 30 people have died in Indianapolis this year alone as a result of domestic violence. On Friday, that number increased.

On Friday, Nov. 24 Roncalli High School graduates Mallory Open and Meredith Opel, ages 27 and 20 respectively, were found dead in their Southside home. According to the Indianapolis Metropolitan Police Department, Mallory's husband, Darrel Jackson is accused of the murder, when he then fled to Arkansas and killed himself. Reports state that Darrell and Mallory had a history of domestic violence in the home, with police responding to a call where they provided information on filing a protective order. Friends and family will gather to celebrate the lives of the sisters on Dec. 1, 3 to 8 p.m., in the gymnasium at Roncalli High School. The Mass of Christian Burial will be 10 a.m., Dec. 2, in the gymnasium at Roncalli.

We offer our condolences to the family and friends of these two girls, who lost their lives far too young. We encourage anyone, if you suspect someone is going through a domestic violence situation, to offer a helping hand - be a listening ear and encourage them to seek help through law enforcement or places such as Beacon of Hope. It's never a situation that should simply be dismissed.

Holiday Buffet Season is here! Call Roto-Rooter

NUTRITION

By Wendell Fowler

Despite their unhealthiness, what are some of your favorite, traditional holiday foods you know darn well you're going to strap on the old feedbag and munch and slurp in mass quantities? You are only human my friend and tradition is a powerful seductress. Just stay calm. No one's asking you sacrifice cherished holiday eating traditions. Just add a side dish of restraint, mindfulness, and dietary fiber. (cue bell)

During winter's flu, cold and sniffle season, to avoid shutting down your immune system and upsetting the delicate balance of your temple's health, before attending holiday gatherings, fill up with wholesome, fibrous plant foods so you'll be less apt to pig-out on foods that increase waistlines or put out the welcome mat for sickness. And no! A toasted bagel with a schmear of cream cheese is not cool.

Decrease the potential harm to your holy temple and annual extra pounds caused by delightful holiday foods by matching your holiday diet with equal portions fresh, crunchy vegetables and fruits, seed and fibrous grains Aka, Roto-Rooter. At home, we keep a container of ground flax and chia seed close at hand and sprinkle a little on everything we eat. Even for the dogs, which makes for prolific pooping puppies.

Those who watch our weekly segment on WISH TV, and I thank you, know I preach that dietary fiber sweeps the colon of stagnant food and cancerous toxins, helps stabilize blood sugar, which helps control diabetes; lowers "bad" LDL cholesterol, reducing risk of heart disease and encourages weight loss. Men and women with the highest fiber intake had a significantly lower risk of death from any cause. (2011 Archives of Internal Medicine, the NIH) reveal a strong correlation between dietary fiber intake and rates of colon and colorectal cancers. Now you know why each week we ring the fiber bell.

Yes, my message may not connect with everyone. We all grow at different rates. But occasionally I find a grateful horse, eager to become the best version of itself. At least when you are ready, you'll be armed with the tools you need.

Pre-Holliday buffet foods:

- · Humus and veggies
- Cup of bean soup
- Vegetable soup and whole grain bread
- Ezekiel bread (toasted) spread with almond butter
- Handful of granola (Not Frosted Flames or Fruit loops)
- Apple, pear, banana or celery with peanut or almond butter
- · Rice cakes with salsa
- ½ avocado drizzled with Balsamic

Mary Brian fourth grader Sonya Rees wins Circle of Lights contest

Ceremony – Sonya Rees, fourth grader at Mary Bryan Elementary, is the winner of the Circle of Lights coloring contest, and she had the honor of "flipping the switch" at the tree lighting ceremony on Nov. 24. She and four finalists will also be awarded $529 for her 529 college savings plan and $100 gift card to Carson's department store.

The three Presidential Scholarship Award Winners, Charlie Schoettle, Carlie Young, and Andy Geibel.

Nativity announces Presidential Scholarship award winners

Placement – On Nov. 4, 309 students gathered at Roncalli High School to take the High School Placement Exam. The Nativity faculty congratulates all of its eighth graders on their wonderful scores! Nativity has three students earning a score in the top 10: Andy Geibel, Charlie Schoettle, and Carlie Young. All three have been named as a Roncalli Presidential $2,500 Scholarship winner.

Rosa Parks student Lydia Andrews wins nationwide contest

Competition - Perry Township Schools announced Lydia Andrews is one of eight students to win a nationwide contest and have her T-shirt design sold in clothing retail chain Gap Kids. Lydia, a fifth grade student at Rosa Parks Elementary, entered a contest called "Certified Kind," sponsored by Gap Kids and Lionsgate. The challenge encouraged students across the country to design a t-shirt that illustrates what kindness looks like. Lydia's shirt shows stick figures holding hands around a globe with the words "Kindness is everything; it's a chain reaction." Her design is among eight chosen to be printed and sold in select Gap Kids stores and gap.com.

Profits will benefit myFace and Children's Craniofacial Association, two non-profit organizations dedicated to supporting children with craniofacial differences.

"It's pretty neat to have my t-shirt sold at Gap Kids," said Lydia. "It's even more important to teach kids at my school and around the country to be kind to each other."

The "Certified Kind" campaign was inspired by the film Wonder which debuted in theatres Friday, Nov. 17. Lydia's class, under the instruction of teacher Shaun Pennington, read the book of the same name, which tells the story of Auggie Pullman – a boy born with facial differences that hindered him from attending mainstream school. As a reward for winning the t-shirt design challenge, Lydia's class was treated to a special screening of the movie.

You Got Daved

GRAMMAR GUY

By Curtis Honeycutt

Today's language lesson inspiration comes courtesy of my friend Dave. As a professional language nerd, I'm thrilled that fellow English major wannabes are coming out of the woodwork to share their grammar irks and quirks with me. By addressing and discussing that which syntactically disgruntles you, I hope to make all the other Daves out there sufficiently gruntled.

Do you know what bothers Dave? The verbification of nouns, especially the word impact. Nouns like impact, access, text, Google and task have transitioned their parts of speech from nouns into verbs in our recent usage. Dave's question is: is this necessary?

The short answer is no. It seems that the verbification of nouns follows a trend in English usage that can either be viewed as a desire to be more efficient or as simple laziness. On one hand, it's unnecessary to verbify nouns: The grammar column had a significant impact on me. In this case, impact is a noun, just like the good Lord of the English language intended. In a world where impact is a verb, you'd say: The grammar column impacted me significantly.

While I think I agree with Dave that I don't like when nouns become verbified, I think it's just a matter of personal preference. For instance, I'm not a fan of the word process as a verb. When someone says something like "I'm really processing a lot of emotions right now," in my opinion, while not wrong, this makes humans sound like robots.

Originally, process was a noun. Then we created room-sized computers which computed the processes we inputted into them. Soon, in an effort to mince words, we said the computers were processing our punch cards to find funny cat videos on the internet (forgive me if my history is approximate here...I was born in the Orwellian year of 1984).

Now computer processors are powerful enough to provide robot vacuums with artificial intelligence. Am I suggesting the verbification of nouns will ultimately (albeit indirectly) lead to the robot apocalypse? I'm not sure; I think I need to process it some more.

Weekly Devotion

14 And Enoch also, the seventh from Adam, prophesied of these, saying, Behold, the Lord cometh with ten thousands of his saints,

15 To execute judgment upon all, and to convince all that are ungodly among them of all their ungodly deeds which they have ungodly committed, and of all their hard speeches which ungodly sinners have spoken against him.

JUDE 14-15

It is not my intentions to suppose anything or to propose by supposition anything other than what Jude wrote in this passage. Jude is describing those who make merchandise of the Words of God. Enoch was seven generations removed from Adam and wrote prophetically about them. The word "prophetically" means only that he preached even in his day warning all to be very careful who it was that they were listening to and following. He also said that the "Lord comes with ten thousands of His saints" which only means that He will come with tens of thousands of His mighty army to take vengeance upon those who would use His name to make themselves rich and powerful in the eves of others.

Jude's use of the term "ungodly" four times in one sentence certainly lends itself to the idea that there is nothing good or of value in what these persons have to say. They are on God's "watch list" and will most certainly be among those who will finally bow their knees and confess with their lips that Jesus Christ alone is Lord in the last day. They are not godly though they speak of God and even Jesus Christ as though they had special insight into things that no other person has or even could have. Their speeches are full of charisma but these are they that draw away "silly women" as Paul tells Timothy. The term silly merely means "easily fooled" or "easy to be fooled." Those that follow them, are they that are looking for a "rose garden" experience instead of the true and right experience required of all Christians, which is difficult to say the least. Loving Christ is not enough for them. They are drawn away by the lust that resides deep in their minds and hearts and will not submit to Christ to be cleansed. They seek their satisfaction in physical relationships and not spiritual.

May God protect His church from such as these and He will if we listen to such writers as Jude and Peter and others that warn us away from them.

God bless and go and have a great day.

Paul A. Kirby is the pastor at the Church of God at 3939 S. Emerson Ave.
