Over the Hills and back again

Lionel Hills gets a renewed interest in entertaining Southside drivers through riding his bicycle backwards and dancing

By Nicole Davis

He thought his time performing for Southside drivers was coming to an end. For the past nine years, Lionel Hills has entertained the people traveling through the intersection of Thompson Road and Emerson Avenue, sitting on the handlebars of his bicycle, riding backwards, dancing and often doing tricks.

The business where he had ridden closed and a new one opened with longer hours, which wouldn't allow for the empty parking lot where he rode.

"After all these years, there are times I think people don't like this any longer," Hills said. "I recently found out, that isn't true."

When he broke the news on his Facebook, his fan page shared it. Hills had hundreds of comments, messages and friend requests which proved that people do still enjoy his talents.

"I never come to that light without looking for you," commented one Facebook user.

"Go to another intersection. You make people smile. Don't give that up," commented another.

"You ARE our celebrity!!" wrote another.

There were thousands of comments.

"The day I posted about me not riding over there, it literally brought tears to my eyes," Hills said. "I couldn't hold them in. The whole time I was reading that post, the tears were just flowing. I felt the love from the community about what I do. I just thank God for giving me a talent that I can share with everyone. He gives me the strength. Because He loves everybody, I'm learning to do the same. I do it because I simply love people. I try to express that love when I'm riding. People can see that I'm thoroughly enjoying it, which causes them to enjoy it."

It all started at a pawn shop in 2005. Hills, who was then living on the Westside of Indianapolis, went in to look for an instrument - he doesn't play but loves bands. There, his eyes caught hold of a Schwinn 26 Beach Cruiser with a price tag of $19.99. After consulting with his wife, Stephanie, he eagerly purchased the bike.

"The idea came to my mind to sit on the handlebars, to see if I could ride because we did it when I was young, my brothers and friends," Hills said. "As soon as I got on the handlebars, I noticed that I could ride. I said let's see if I can ride with no hands. I was able to ride. I started riding around the apartment complex where I lived. The kids loved it."

He took the bike to 71st and Michigan Roads and started riding there, adding more and more to his routine. He noticed that his performances were a true attention-getter. He took the act to the intersection at 38th and Georgetown Road for some time before moving to the Southside of Indianapolis, Franklin Township in 2008.

Later that year, he spotted the intersection at Emerson and Thompson. It was perfect. The business, an animal hospital, closed early and on the weekends, leaving for an empty parking lot at a busy intersection where Hills could be seen from all four directions.

"I do it to put smiles on people's faces, to bring joy to their day because you never know what type of day a person is having," he said. "I know there are days people have issues that they go through and to see me riding, if I can put a smile on their face, then I'm happy. I love to smile. I love to laugh. I love to have a good time. I believe that smiling is contagious. When I see people watch me, I put on a special performance just for them. Before they know it, they're on their way because the light has changed. It makes the light seem less long to wait, then they're going on."

With gospel music playing through his headphones, Hills is always dancing. He'll sometimes juggle tennis balls while he rides, but that can be difficult. When the weather is cooler, he enjoys dressing in all black with white gloves, creating the illusion of puppetry. He also blew bubbles one year, chasing the bubbles down while he was riding.

"My sticks, that's my trademark," he said. "I can twirl them the whole time I'm out here."

In 2010, some people stopped to ask if he knew he was on Facebook. A fan page had been created for him, titled Guy on Thompson and Emerson That Rides His Bike Backwards, And Juggles!

"About 4,000 people liked the page before I saw it," he said. "Ash Bruner is her name, the young lady that created the page. I appreciate her doing it. That's my fan page. I decided to become a member of Facebook in 2010. I liked (the page) immediately."

"I do it because I simply love people. I try to express that love when I'm riding."

- Lionel Hills

That page currently has more than 9,300 'likes.' Hills is able to interact with his fans that way, and has developed friendships through it. Now on his third bicycle since 2005, one fan even volunteered to purchase the most recent one after hearing of bike number two breaking.

With all of that support, and thinking that he would no longer be able to ride this past September when the new business opened the intersection, Li-

Getting to know Lionel...

- "I play table tennis every week, so when it gets cold, I have an inside hobby."
- "I also like to paint."
- "My wife and I have our own ministry, Team Ministry. We're a small group, but we're fully functional. We have a weekly prayer line, a Friday and Saturday night service."
- Most memorable moment while performing: "I was riding one day on the Westside. I was on the handlebars and I tried to go in a circle. For some reason, I fell off the bike and my pants split from my ankle all the way up. I didn't get hurt or anything. People were watching me. I was so embarrassed, I stopped riding, had to hold my pants leg as I walked to put my bike in my Blazer. As I look back over the years, that was very memorable."

nel said he felt sad.

"Ain't no better spot in town than here," he said.

He needed a new location. Hills works full time as a claims processor for Anthem, and while he loves his job, he said he's not home 30 minutes before he hops in his Blazer, anxious to take his bicycle out to ride.

Fans began suggesting alternative locations, and some businesses even volunteered their parking lots, but Hills said he wanted to stay at a busy intersection with a stoplight so people would have a moment to watch.

His last day at his former location was Sept. 5. He decided to try riding across the street, in the Hardee's parking lot, the following Monday. A video was later posted on his fan page of him riding in the new spot.

"I can't express how happy I am!" a fan commented.

"Yay! We didn't lose you after all!" wrote another.

Hills plans to continue riding there for now, until the weather gets too cold. He's not as visible as the previous spot, but said it's the next best option.

He has also participated in other community events, such as the Beech Grove Fall Festival Parade and the Southport Homecoming Parade on Sept. 29. He said while he has been grounded in the Franklin Township/Beech Grove vicinity, he would love to participate in larger festivals and take his act on the road.

Nativity celebrates Homecoming weekend

Sam Smith, a member of Nativity's 3/4 Football Team, runs out to the stands during the school pep rally.

School spirit – Nativity's School Campus was bustling with activity last week-end for Homecoming. Students loved participating in the Pep Rally during school on Sept. 29 afternoon. The Middle School Student Government put on a Homecoming Dance the night before the football games. The evening consisted of raffles, pictures with photo props, and, of course dancing. Canned goods were collected and donated, along with a portion of the night's proceeds, to God's Bounty Food Pantry. Alumni enjoyed an afternoon of 3 football games on Sunday. The 3/4 Nativity Titans lost to St. Barnabas 21-40. The 5/6 Titans won against Immaculate Heart of Mary 14-12, and the Cadet Titans won 27-0 against Holy Spirit Geist. The football players and cheerleaders and their families also enjoyed a team picnic after each game.

Marion County South Special Olympics team earn medals

Athletics – Last week on Sunday, Sept. 10, teams across the state competed in the Special Olympics EKS State Games at Brebeuf High School. In the unified volleyball competition, the Southside was represented by two teams competing in two different divisions. Unified teams are composed of both athletes and volunteers, and the state tournament is the final competition of the season. Both Southside teams capped off their seasons by winning medals in their respective divisions (Hurricanes the silver, and Lightning the bronze).

Public invited to Franklin Township historical marker dedication

History – On Oct. 21st, the Franklin Township Historical Society will dedicate a new historical marker at 5605 S. Franklin Road marking the historical site of the town of Gallaudet. An event starting at 1 p.m. that day will include a luncheon held on the actual site of Gallaudet, live music, presentations about area history, a silent auction of gift baskets donated by area merchants, and the official dedication of the new marker.

"The Franklin Township Historical Society hired the country's premiere maker of roadside markers to create the sign," said Society president Nancy VanArendonk. The marker contains a brief history of and the story behind the town of Gallaudet. "We also added a note that the sign is erected in honor of the late Sylvia Henricks, charter member and long-time president of our Society," VanArendonk said.

The roadside marker will be erected on the property of Grace Church, directly across from the Franklin Road Library, on land that was once part of Gallaudet. A professionally catered luncheon will be held in the Grace Church building. Professor Doug Stringham of Utah Valley University will give a brief Skype presentation about the town and its founder, who named it after the man who had co-founded the first school for the deaf in America.

Reservations for the event are $15 per person, and all proceeds support the non-profit Franklin Township Historical Society. Reservation deadline is Oct. 12. Reservations may be made online at FTHS.org, or checks may be mailed to FTHS, P.O. Box 39015, Indianapolis, IN 46239. For more information, call (317) 862-1993, visit FTHS.org, or at facebook.com/FranklinTownshipHistoricalSociety.

Irvington Ghost Tours

HAUNTS & JAUNTS

By Rick Hinton

It's that time of year again! Last Friday night Laura and I found ourselves winding along the narrow sidewalks of the Southside burg of Irvington, led by Alan Hunter - dressed in black trench coat, dark leather hat, and swinging a lantern as his walking stick made clicks along the pavement - leading the charge on the first night of the Irvington Ghost Tour. He had a smile upon his face. Why wouldn't he? He considers it a privilege to introduce folks to the history, mysteries, lore, and a good story about the neighborhood of a small town nestled in the folded arms of nearby Indianapolis. There's something about Irvington, there always has been...

Irvington is believed to reside over Ley Lines - a geographical alignment of emanating power -resulting in spiritual and mystical radiating currents. (Like electricity you can't shut off). It's known to affect areas with paranormal activity. Consequently, Irvington is a beehive of such activity!

The fall night introduced bursts of wind and steadily falling temperatures. It was a decent size group for the first night. They'll get larger as the weekends progress towards Halloween. Tour helpers with lanterns guided the mass along the streets as vehicle traffic slowed for a look. There's walking involved, yet plenty of time to recuperate when Alan sets down his lantern and begins the tale. And there are many of them: everything from the haunted Irving Theater to the historical Masonic Lodge; the Bona Thompson building (the last surviving building of Butler College); the Irvington Library (location of a former pawn shop shadowed by murder); a former site robbed by John Dillinger; Indianapolis' involvement in the Klu Klux Klan and a resulting death by infatuation; first serial killer, H. H. Holmes and his tie to Irvington; and site of the Lincoln funeral train when it passed through the neighborhood. There are a lot of points in between with their own stories with which one tour could never encompass. Books of Irvington history written by Alan shed light upon these "in between" stories. One is included with the price of the tour.

The Irvington Ghost Tours are at 7 p.m., Fridays and Saturdays, through Oct. 28. Tours start at 10 S. Johnson Ave, next to the Irving Theater. Tickets are $15 and can be purchased at that location prior or in advance at the Magic Candle, 203 S. Audubon. Proceeds go to support Gaia Works Pantry and other local charities. This IS a walking tour so dress accordingly. Afterwards, eat at Jockomo's Pizza. We did!

Next week: Our trip with Alan Hunter to Gettysburg.

Rick Hinton, a Southport resident, loves researching things that go bump in the night. His articles can be read on Facebook: Rick Hinton, Southport Paranormal Examiner. Hinton conducts paranormal investigations with his team, South Central Paranormal.

No limitations on leadership

Center Grove's Sneha Dave advocates for students with chronic health conditions

FEATURE

By Nicole Davis

Many times when there is an opportunity for high school and college students, that opportunity might not necessarily be available for students with chronic illnesses. Having gone through school with a chronic condition herself, Indiana University Sophomore Sneha Dave saw a need for more advocacy and has taken the steps to spread awareness to the issue.

"Often we're told maybe we shouldn't do all of these things, you should focus on your health," Dave said. "And while you should focus on your health, you should also reach out for your goals."

Dave is a 2016 graduate of Center Grove High School. She was diagnosed with the ulcerative colitis, a chronic inflammatory bowel disease, at age 6. The condition flared up in middle school, having her spend five years receiving partial schooling while she was treated at Riley Hospital for Children. Her junior year of high school, she organized a Leadership Day for Teens with Chronic health conditions to help other students make the transition back to school. She created and still runs Chron's & Colitis Teen Times, a newsletter offering support and encouragement to other youth coping with the condition.

She was inspired to become a motivational speaker, and is now majoring in chronic illness advocacy, economics with a certificate in journalism at IU.

True to her studies, she's gotten even more involved in advocacy for those with chronic illnesses. She works for a pharmaceutical company, Pfizer, through which she's had opportunities to travel across the United States to speak, helping them bridge the patient-pharmaceutical gap. She's advocated with the United Nations in summits which she speaks about the third Sustainable Development Goal, which states "ensuring healthy lives and promoting the well-being for all at all ages is essential to sustainable development," according to un.org.

"Most recently, I spoke on C-Span, broadcasted nationally, and spoke on Capital Hill on behalf of disability advocacy," Dave said. "The main thing I want to focus on is something a few IU students and I started, the Chronic Illness and Disability Advocacy Foundation," she said. "With that, we'll host a health advocacy summit, to bring together high school and college students to network with each other and gain advocacy skills."

That Health Advocacy Summit will be held on Saturday, Oct. 21 for all high school and college students who have been diagnosed with a chronic condition. The no-cost event features high level speakers, legislative education, networking opportunities and alumni engagement.

"We have a speaker from Texas who will talk about her self-advocacy journey. We'll have a speaker who talks about the transition from high school to college and even when you're in college, what you can do to become a better advocate within the school system, while managing your time and the issues that come with your chronic condition. We'll discuss how you can be more involved in your school. We're still looking to register high schoolers and college students with chronic conditions."

Those interested can register at cidadvocacy.org. Dave said she hopes that students will feel inspired to continue pursuing their dreams and not let their disability get them down.

"I think that self-advocacy is really important. Whether it's in a personal or professional setting, it's important to know your rights and being able to let other people know that while you may have certain limitations, that doesn't mean everything you want to do is limited... I hope that there can be more discourse and conversations surrounding chronic illness and the fact that there needs to be the same opportunity. There is an obligation for government entities to include people with chronic disabilities and conditions. When you include people with chronic illnesses, conditions, you get diversity in thought. That contributes so much economically."

Lots of loss
this week

It's been a tragic week. The news of the mass shooting in Las Vegas was devastating enough - with 59 lives lost and 527 injured it is deemed the worst mass shooting in United States history.

But the Southside has had some untimely losses this week as well.

Earlier last week, Southport High School teacher Megan Woodward passed away after she reportedly fell while decorating a homecoming float for Friday's Homecoming parade. The exact cause of death is pending. The school is inviting the community to celebrate her life with a service open to the public on Oct. 5, 7:30 p.m. at the Southport High School Auditorium, 971 E. Banta Rd., Indianapolis.

On Monday, Beech Grove City Schools announced that Bruce Osbourn, a parent and girls softball coach, lost his life in a car accident. The school held a memorial vigil on Oct. 3 at the middle school softball diamonds, asking guests to wear something softball related, or his favorite color red to honor his life.

The death of a loved one, and leaders in our community, are never easy. We give our condolences to the family and friends of those who have lost their lives in recent events.

Beech Grove storm water projects continue

Within the next couple of weeks we will begin another phase of drainage improvements. Set to begin in several areas of the city are storm water drain stabilization and maintenance projects. Drainage structures settle and become uneven which may cause water not to enter the drain.

Quotes for a major drainage improvement project between North Bend Road and Redfern Drive should be opened this week. In speaking with residents of this area, this issue has been going on for over 50 years, but soon we will hopefully correct the problem and move on to another drainage area in our beautiful city.

In November of this year we will apply for more federal funding to begin the development of Phase 2 of the Greenway Project (Hornet Avenue east to the Woods of Beech Grove Sub Division), install sidewalks on Thompson Road between Emerson Avenue and 9th Street (north side), and the total reconstruction of Elm Street from 4th Avenue to 9th Avenue including sidewalks and curbs.

On another note, our annual leaf pick up program begins on October 16th and runs through December 15th. Please rake your leaves out to the curb and we'll pick them up.

New sales manager joins Times-Leader Publications

By Brogan Dearing

Mike Schaefer has started full-time as Times-Leader Publications' sales manager.

In the role, he will be focused on growth and development for Hendricks County ICON, the Hendricks County Business Leader, The Southside Times and Center Grove ICON. He also will work in the same capacity with Times-Leader's sister company, Current Publishing, on the north-suburban side of Indianapolis.

M. Schaefer

"I am very excited to have Mike on our team," said Rick Myers, publisher and president of Times-Leader Publications. "I have always had a tremendous amount of respect for his professionalism and his attention to customer service. In addition, Mike has a great knowledge of our industry as demonstrated by his many years of experience in newspapering and direct-mail advertising. He has a passion for the business that is contagious."

Schaefer brings with him years of experience in the newspaper industry. In college, he worked at the Indiana Daily Student, Indiana University's student-run newspaper, and after graduating he stayed on as its sales manager. In the 1990s, he was part owner of a weekly newspaper. After that, he owned a direct-mail franchise for 16 years.

He said he is excited to join Times-Leader because of the value its publications bring to advertisers and, as a result, readers.

"Our products work really well for our advertisers," he said. "We've got great markets, great products and great employees," he said. "I think those are ingredients for success."

While large newspapers are struggling in the increasingly digital news climate, community publications like Times-Leader's continue to thrive.

"The reason we're different is that we carry hyper-local news," he said. "We have something no one else has."

Getting to know Amanda...

- We sponsor a lot of Center Grove Football and Center Grove Sports. We do a lot of banquets for the kids.
- I like to shop. Every decision that went into the barn, I shopped for.
- I enjoy watching my daughter do what she's doing. She's in the Valley Riders Club, a horse club that's been around for 50 years. We have the big banquet here. She's in the Johnson County 4-H.
- I like to travel. I love the beach.
- I have bought and flipped houses in the past. I really enjoyed going through that and staging it at the end.

How did Amanda do it?

BEST ADVICE:

Be open to change, new ideas and the unexpected. We had to make a lot of changes through the building process.

WORST ADVICE:

People say you can't do that, when we knew we could.

BEST BUSINESS DECISION:

On our original plan, we were not adding the saloon. This was the best thing we did. With having the bar separate from the main space, it added on the patio. We had to come back and add this to the blueprint. It opened up the door for smaller events.

SECRET TO SUCCESS:

Having a team of people. That is really important. You have to have a team that works really well together. If you have a great staff, that will help you succeed.

IN 5 YEARS...

It could grow into doing our own catering, our own kitchen, adding some full-service options. We're finding a lot of couples would like one-stop shopping.

Events with an experience

Amanda Cottingham celebrates one year since the opening of Barn at Bay Horse Inn

By Nicole Davis

From day one, the community has understood the vision that Amanda Cottingham had for Barn at Bay Horse Inn. The venue had 60 events booked before construction concluded. Having celebrated its first anniversary on Sept. 27, the Barn announced that it hosted 124 events in that year's time - from weddings to fundraisers and corporate events.

Before the business concept came to mind, Cottingham had been debating whether to sell the Greenwood property or develop it. She had 20 years experience as a real estate appraiser and broker. She attended a friend's wedding at a barn, giving her the inspiration to do something similar, but with the modern conveniences of heating, cooling and bathrooms.

"I wanted to be more higher end and offer something unique that you can't find anywhere around here," she said. "Greenwood was lacking unique event centers, a place that was different from a traditional banquet hall, a place not only for weddings but corporate events to provide more of an experience."

She entered the process of rezoning in 2015, thinking if she could get support from the community to go ahead with the project, they would go for it. Greenwood Mayor Mark Myers was an advocate of the construction, she said, and the project began with a groundbreaking in March 2016.

Barn at Bay Horse Inn opened Sept. 15, 2016 with a grand opening celebration.

More than 600 people were in attendance that night: friends and family, business leaders, city officials and brides and grooms who had already booked an event there.

Four events in total were held that first weekend. After the grand opening, The Social of Greenwood held a fundraiser - for which the second annual event, Sparkles and Spurs, is coming up on Oct. 12.

"We want to continue adding elements to make each event as memorable as possible."

- Amanda Cottingham

Since then, it's taken off. The Greater Greenwood Chamber of Commerce awarded Barn at Bay Horse Inn with the new construction award of the year, the Salute Award. Indy A List deemed the Barn the best wedding venue after only being open six months.

Fridays and Saturdays fill up fast, to the point that Sunday weddings are growing more popular. For 2018, the Barn already has 52 weddings booked, 60 events total. Some weddings have also been booked for 2019, with autumn being the most popular season.

Barn at Bay Horse Inn not only has the barn for events, but a log cabin where couples can stay overnight, stables with horses and a donkey, and a saloon. Cottingham's children, ages 10 and 11, help out. Her son will often be on "janitor" duty, while her daughter enjoys helping with the animals, grooming them and getting them ready.

"It's definitely teaching them responsibility and what it's like to own your own business," Cottingham said. "It was a rough year for them, us all being so busy and being a new business."

Barn at Bay Horse Inn held its anniversary celebration on Sept. 27. Through the past year, guests received the opportunity to paint a little on a canvas designed by Cottingham's sister. That mural, featuring the barn and additional colorful nature imagery, was unveiled at the opening, a representation of the past year.

Now looking to the next year, Cottingham said they're always looking for new ideas to make the overall experience better for their guests, from keeping up with trends to perfecting customer service.

"We love adding as much personalization as possible," she said. "We'll give them the cake cart to use. We added a stained glass sign that points to their wedding. We have lots of props we use. We want to continue adding elements to make each event as memorable as possible. Now with the year anniversary with the brides from last year, I'm starting to see their (social media posts). Some of them are pregnant. It's cool to look back. They're using the photos from their wedding day. It's like it was yesterday."

PERSONNEL MATTERS

No time like the present

By Mike Heffner

Recently, I had a revelation that one of the major reasons difficult things don't get done is that most people want things to be easy. We live in a world of instant everything (next day delivery, download it now, on demand TV, etc). We want everything figured out before we do it and don't have time to mess with something that creates a delay. No time to change, figure things out or struggle. Those things often have us stuck- in excuse land. We convince ourselves things need to be perfect and that we don't have time.

Ironically, I was able to listen to a professional speaker named Dan Waldschmidt, author of Edgy Conversations. He shared that sometimes you just have to commit and then go make it work. You are not ever going to have all the things you need or all the boxes checked. You will never be motivated enough or have all the stars lined up. He shared that often times the difficulty of the task ahead is the biggest obstacle to our success. If you believe you can't, you won't.

Dan shared that in order to get things done, you just have to put your head down and drive forward. Commit to it and do it with intensity. You will rarely reach success doing something easy. He said "success isn't about the resource you have, but how resourceful you are." Once we commit and have made the decision to move forward, we are headed in the right direction. I seem to do my best work when up against a deadline. That's when I become focused and set everything else aside.

This past week I asked my team, "what needs to happen to get this project out of the gate?" It was stuck in excuse land (too busy, no time, it's not going to work anyway). In reality, we had convinced ourselves that what we were doing now was good enough and we really didn't want to do it, even though we needed a better solution. Everyone was just hesitant. We knew it wasn't going to be fun and it was going to create more work in the beginning. Getting the project out of the gate was going to suck. I placed a deadline on the project and that is when things started to happen - it forced change. We had a mental mind shift and now had an intensity towards the pursuit of awesomeness.

Dan helped me see what goes on in our heads. If you think something will be hard to change, it automatically becomes too hard. The other thing I learned, you have to "embrace the suck" and be willing to do things that are initially hard. Dan said it well when he said, "you only get what you are willing to give." So my advice to you is, there is no time like the present. Commit, suck it up and figure it out. Give it all you have. Be awesome and make it awesome.

Switch to https, or else

By Andrew Angle

Starting in October the Google Chrome browser will show a "Not Secure" warning beside the address line of any pages that contain text input forms.

People tend to put off the things that don't feel immediately urgent. That's why so many of you haven't made a recent backup of the data on your computer. Some don't have a written will. Many have websites that are not security checked or using SSL certificates to provide encrypted connections. Like so many things in life, security doesn't become an issue until something unfortunate happens.

Google has been telling the world to use SSL certificates for a long time, and in 2014 even made https part of its ranking algorithm. Now they are making encryption a more immediate concern for users and site owners alike. If a page includes any text input forms, the users on Chrome browsers will see a message that says, "Site is not secure" when accessing a page that resolves to "http" rather than "https". In this case, the "s" for "security" it refers to is only about having the data connection encrypted so that it can't be easily read by others.

Without the padlock icon showing beside the URL, any page you see or type text into through an unsecure connection can be intercepted at either end, whether it be your own ISP provider, viruses and malware on your computer, the site's web host, or any one of the many "hops" between you and that website. Private companies, governments, and especially hackers like those tech-savvy Nigerian Princes can intercept the content between you and the websites you visit. They can inject malware into connections, steal credit card data and Personally Identifiable Information. Hackers can even replace site content their own version, routing phone numbers to offshore call centers or inserting decoy forms that steal your customer's credit card numbers. They can even swap your site's content with material anything but "family friendly".

Considering the theoretical extent of damage that site owners and users are at risk of suffering due to insecure connections, Google is making a pain of their own to motivate site owners to switch to SSL now, and to warn users that the sites they visit are failing to apply the most basic safeguards to protect their visitors privacy and data.

Go to <https://ss-times.com/ssl> for SSL tips.

PEER TO PEER

Less is more in D.C.

By Howard Hubler

A year ago I wrote an article that indicated that Washington was stalemated in the area of legislation. There was so much divisiveness there that the two sides could not get together to legislate, to pass bills, their main job! I indicated that for a Republican business person, that was a good thing. If there were no more regulations put on the books for a couple of years, the world would still be a good place to live. We would not be dying in the streets.

So, how is the Trump/Pence administration doing in the regulation department? According to an article written by Fox in August titled "Less is More," they suggest that they have cut the number of regulations on the books significantly. Recall that when congress would not legislate for more regulations to keep us from dying in the streets, the Obama administration found it necessary to start printing new regulations by "Presidential Fiat" to save us all. None of these new regulations were passed through congress. Many of those regs put on the books with Obama's pen or cell phone have since been quenched by Trump.

The Fox article cites from AAF, a conservative think tank, that the Trump administration has approved a fraction of the rules that the Obama administration approved. The article suggest that the Democratic team put up "20 times more" regulations after six months. So, what is the economic impact from the two administrations? Obama's regulations cost a reported $24 billion, while Trumps cost $1.2 billion. I pride myself as being a critical thinker, but I don't know what we would even do with Trumps new $1.2 billion in new rules. Call me stupid. I mean last year seemed pretty good to me, as did the year before and the like. Couldn't we have head off printing some more rules for another year or two? I guess not. Me, when I read a new rule for my industry, do I ever say, "Gosh it is about time, we really needed that?" Not that I recall. There are so many NOTICE and BEWARE signs that I disregard them already.

Ever buy a new appliance and glance at the instruction page? There are two pages of micro print that you have to read BEFORE you even turn your new appliance on. Have you ever read it once? Have you ever been instructed in the proper way to discard a battery? Try the twirly florescent light bulb. You pay $3 for a .75 cent bulb, and to throw it away properly might cost you another $3! Oh, back to the article. In the closing sentence, Nancy Pelosi was quoted as saying the administration was just launching a, "spiteful assault" on us poor folk, denying us fools much needed federal protection. Let me close with my only obvious sentence: She just does not get it!

OPEN 4 BUSINESS

Space to do business

Commercial Self-Storage serves Southside businesses with secure storage and office space

By Nicole Davis

Aimed at helping businesses succeed in their industries by reducing overhead costs for storage and even office space, Commercial Self-Storage opened in Greenwood on Sept. 1.

The Southside storage business introduced the concept with two buildings, 16 storage spaces, which filled up in the first month. Commercial Self-Storage opened two more buildings at the end of September, and is looking to continue that growth, said property manager Adam Hardebeck.

Along with the storage space, Commercial Self-Storage offers all-day access, security, a loading dock and other amenities. Some units have office space built in, and the business also offers office suites available to rent. Hardebeck said by Jan. 1, they are looking to have that furnished office space and a furnished salon building ready to be occupied.

"The nice part about what we have, is there's a lot of shared amenities," Hardebeck said. "It's expensive for a business to rent a place, have security systems, gates, we have a forklift available for community use. We've assumed some of these things people don't necessarily think about that are really expensive. We take some of that expensive and maintenance out of their bottom line."

Why did you open this business?

We have the same setup in Castleton and it's been really successful. It's designed to help small businesses with storage space to run their business and make it affordable. A lot of times, warehouses, you have to get a ton of space with longterm leases and we don't necessarily ask for that. We have units that are varying in sizes from 300 square feet up to 1,400.

What did you do to prepare for opening your business?

A lot of thought went into planning because we saw things that worked really well in Castleton and some of the things that we can fix. Here, we set it up so we can take deliveries from semi trucks. We have a business office that has furnished offices. We'll have furnished salons. It will be convenient for them. They can rent the space and not worry about all of the overhead. People can come in and run their business as soon as they sit down.

Who is your ideal customer/client?

Really, anybody. Our ideal tenants is our businesses, people who need an office and maybe they'll rent some space. The storage units have electricity running to them, lights, they're secure. We're available 24/7 and it's gated access for tenants so it's secure and safe.

How do you plan to be successful?

We want to follow through on the promises we made. We want it to be a nice, appealing property, make sure it's clean and professional and provide a quality product. The nice part is we are able to adapt if we need to, to meet our customers' needs.

What are you looking forward to seeing happen as the business grows?

I'll be surprised to learn how we progress in Greenwood, on the Southside, versus the company on the Northside. Coming in with an idea of where we want to be, where we'll go, and see what happens as we move forward.

Antidote

Mediterranean Diet

NUTRITION

By Wendell Fowler

If you were poisoned and the antidote was in front of you, would you take it? Many folks will not, "Heck no! Tastes like crap." In the age of disease, vitamin-malnourished souls refuse the heavenly cornucopia of plant food vitamin nutrition God created for sustaining our sacred temple health. If you think it's God's will you are sick, find a new deity.

Partnership for Solutions. Chronic Conditions say, "Chronic diseases are the leading cause of death and disability in America: 45 percent of the population – have at least one chronic disease. Chronic diseases are responsible for seven out of every 10 deaths in the U.S., killing more than 1.7 million Americans every year. When left undiagnosed or untreated Chronic diseases can track a person's quality of life. For example, every 30 seconds a lower limb is amputated as a consequence of diabetes.

Needlessly suffering chronic disease and premature death caused from rejecting plant foods, society is encouraged to consume abnormal portions of meat and lifeless processed food. The antidote: regularly eating Mediterranean diet of fresh fruits, veggies, grains, beans, nuts and seeds, healthy fats, and only very small portions of fish and poultry. There is very little dairy, and meat makes only an occasional appearance; usually added in small amounts to make sauces, beans and pasta dishes more flavorful. Wine is optional. Keep it in moderation. Sugar, flour, butter and hydrogenated fats other than olive oil are consumed rarely, if at all.

The Mediterranean diet is Proven to increase life expectancy and protect against heart disease, stroke, Alzheimer's Disease, type 2 diabetes, and cancer. The Diet can prevent cancer, reduce bad cholesterol, risk of Alzheimer's by approximately 40 percent. (Columbia University Medical Center), risk of development of Parkinson's Disease and Spina Bifida.

Sadly, many reject real food and cling to the poisonous American diet where nothing is real or alive. The Mediterranean diet is composed of 'REAL' fresh plant-based foods. Fresh fruits and veggies, grains, beans, nuts, seeds, healthy fats, and small portions of fish and poultry.

By 2025, chronic diseases will affect an estimated 164 million Americans – nearly half (49 percent) the population. Yes, death is a part of life, but not eating plant foods because they taste bad is self-destruction. Food allows us to continue to live and must be prioritized. Deprogram yourself. I understand, it's not easy, but at least begin to love and respect the beautiful, awesome miracle you were created to be.

Battle of the Sexes

Game. Set. Dull.

MOVIE REVIEW

By Adam Staten

Whether participating or simply viewing, sports can and do serve many functions in our society. For those who take part in athletic competitions, sports are a significant source of exercise. For others, it's a great form of entertainment. Sports, if utilized properly, can also impart such life lessons as determination, resilience and fair play. Sports can often serve as an opportunity to bring about change, in which the outcome of a game or a match means something much, much more in society as a whole. One recent film highlights one of these rare instances in history.

Battle of the Sexes is the story of the 1970s tennis match between tennis legends Billie Jean King and Bobby Riggs. At the time of the match, 1973, Billie Jean King (Emma Stone) is the No. 1 ranked women's tennis player in the world. She's deadly focused on her career, getting respect and achieving equality for women in the tennis world and society as a whole. On the other hand, Riggs (Steve Carell), a self-described male chauvinist, is bored, having finished his playing career; he's seeking new activities to feed his fix for competition.

The film begins with King joining an all women's tennis league, potentially putting her lucrative career and reputation on the line. Riggs, an attention seeker of the highest order with a debilitating gambling addiction, sees an opportunity to grab the headlines once again. He begins offering to take on the top women tennis players in the world, betting insane amounts of money on his sure victory. After initially turning down Riggs' offer, King relents and the rest, as they say, is history.

As far as the story is concerned, it's pretty to the point, never really deviating much from the events leading up to the match between Riggs and King. It delves into the personal lives of both Riggs and King up to a certain extent. For the most part, the writing is incredibly bland and boring, resulting in made-for-tv-movie banality.

With such an unbelievably dull and lifeless story, surely the performances will redeem the film, making it somewhat watchable. Well, you'd be entirely wrong if this was your thinking. With the exception of Carell, everyone else appears to be going through the motions, not exhibiting the least amount of personality. Stone is especially disappointing given her prior performances. This is likely her worst performance to date.

Battle of the Sexes is an incredible bore of film, serving up dullness in every aspect. Game. Set. Disappointment. 2.5 out 5.

GOVERNMENT WATCHDOG

BEECH GROVE CITY COUNCIL

Meeting, Oct. 2

What happened:

- Ordinance 8 and 9 were approved on second and third reading. Resolution 13 was approved.

What it means:

- Late William and Barbara (Gross) Townsend (ordinance) each pertained to the city's budget.

Resolution 13 concerns budget advertising and is approved each year. It ensures that the approved voted upon budget is the one that is reviewed by the State.

In brief...

- The police department requested that the city council transfer funds for the purchase of new police cars. The 2017 budget allowed for three officers to be hired this year. That did not happen this year, but the police department is in the process of filling those three positions. Instead, the police department would like to transfer $110,000 from salary to purchase approximately three new police cars. Clerk Treasurer Dan McMillan confirmed that there were funds available for this, and proposed that the council approve $220,000 for 10 police cars. The motion was approved.

GREENWOOD COMMON COUNCIL

Meeting, Oct. 2

What happened:

- Ordinance 17-54 was brought before the council with an intent to consider and Resolution 17-31 was introduced to the council.

What it means:

- Ordinance 17-54 seeks to amend the current rezoning map, and rezone approximately 32.36 acres located on the Southside of Cutsinger Road and approximately 1,400 feet west of Averitt Road. This rezoning will make way for a new single-family development.

Resolution 17-31 will express interest in the purchase of property at 1294 Fry Road. The property owner approached the parks department with a request that they express interest in his property and the parks department has taken this request to the council.

What's next:

- Ordinance 17-54 passed and will be rezoned accordingly and Resolution 17-31 will go before the council for its first reading at the Oct. 16 meeting.

In brief...

- Many Greenwood residents attended the Common Council meeting Oct. 2 in opposition to the rezoning of 32.36 acres on Cutsinger Road. This rezoning will make way for the development of a new neighborhood and the current residents feel that this will congest their streets even more. "The traffic is already a major problem," said Cutsinger Road resident Don Eades. "I don't think that right now is a good time to rezone this property."

"One of the main reasons I am opposed to the rezoning of these 32 acres," said Franklin Faull, "is because of the traffic. Back in 2011 you did a study and there were 32,000 cars at the intersection of Averitt Road and Cutsinger Road then. There have been multiple subdivisions built since then. If I leave my house at 6 in the morning, it will take me maybe 10 minutes to get to I-65, but if I leave at 7 it will take me 20-25 minutes to get to I-65. That is because all of these neighborhoods are using Cutsinger to get east and west. Cutsinger is already overrun and you are going to dump a thousand more cars onto it."

The residents are not against the neighborhood, but in the traffic that it will bring. Cutsinger is used as a shortcut for many going east and west throughout the area.

In an effort to reduce foot traffic on Cutsinger and to limit the density allowed for the subdivision Councilor Corey proposed that the Ordinance be amended to limit the density of the rezoned area to no greater than 2.1/ The subdivision has also committed to create a pathway within the 32 acres that leads to Freedom Springs.

The Plan Commission voted 5-2 in favor of the plan and the Greenwood Common Council voted 5-4 in favor.

Weekly Devotion

16 Behold, thou art fair, my beloved
SONG OF SOLOMON 1:16A

A song we have sung in the past said, "Let's talk about Jesus, the King of kings is He, the great I AM the Way, for all eternity." So, let's talk about Jesus, the Christ, the only begotten Son of God.

All that I believe about God the Father, the Holy Spirit, and the Bible is what I see in the life, the death, the resurrection and the ascension of Jesus Christ as well as His promise to return for His bride, the church. Everything written in the Old Testament speaks of His first advent and everything in the New Testament speaks of His having fulfilled everything written about Him in the Old Testament. He either has fulfilled it or will fulfill it and has and will do it in grace and beauty. He was never ugly in His countenance nor ugly in His behavior. He was always a marvel to behold in His ability to keep His presence of mind while all about Him was losing self-control.

From the moment He was born, plots were being formed to put

Him to death. It seems that no one wanted Him to be here but here He came. He was, to say the least, an inconvenience to those who had propagated their lies concerning God and God's intentions toward man. He still is. It was Jesus who spoke the words, "God so loved the world." Think about those words coming from the ultimate Prophet of God. As Nichodemus said of Him, "A man sent from God."

He, Jesus, was God and is God and will always be God. He is One with the other Two who make up the Godhead of heaven and earth.

Is He yet fair? Don't use that phrase as in even-handed but in the sense of beautiful. He is even-handed, that is, no respecters of persons. But more than that, He is the most beautiful of all men in His person-fairer than the fairest of ten thousands. He is the beautiful expression of God to us who need God so very much. Question is, is He YOUR beloved?

God bless and go and have a great day.

Paul A. Kirby is the pastor at the Church of God at 3939 S. Emerson Ave.
