FOR THE RECORD

Homecroff's Gus Karozos celebrates his 100th birthday

On Saturday, Sept. 9, Gus Karozos celebrated his 100th birthday with family and friends at Greek Islands restaurant.

As a 12 year old in 1929, Karozos immigrated to the US, living in Warren, Ohio, with his parents and sister. During WWII, Karozos enlisted in the US Army, serving as one of the first paratroopers in the 376th Field Artillery battalion of the 82nd Airborne Division. After the war, Karozos graduated from Ohio State University where he met his beloved wife, Irene.

In 1952 Karozos settled in Homecroft where he and Irene raised their children, Evelyn, Andy, Jim and Joan.

Gus says a good mental outlook toward life has been the key to his longevity. He credits his strong faith in God and his devotion to his children and grandchildren who have given him life's greatest joys.

Angi Cheeseman, president of Indiana Going Blue, seeks to raise support for law enforcement throughout the country

By Nicole Davis

When Angi Cheeseman's daughter decided to become a police officer, the entire family became engrossed in the career. Angi has participated in a couple citizen's academies and has gone on many ridealongs. She's seen the dedication that the men and women in blue have to their job, along with the disrespect they many times receive simply for donning the uniform.

That's why she became involved with Indiana Going Blue and America Going Blue. The social media pages are a registered nonprofit, for which she is the president.

"We want to increase support for law enforcement," Cheeseman said. "We want to help people to see or better understand what they really do."

The first 'Indy Going Blue' page was launched three days after IMPD Officer Perry Renn was killed. Cheeseman, a 1983 graduate of Center Grove High School, met the founder of the page a few months later and volunteered to help. They launched both Indiana Going Blue and America Going Blue. After awhile, the original people stepped down and Cheeseman stepped up. She recruited other volunteers to assist with the pages.

Indiana Going Blue helps law enforcement officers who have been injured in the line of duty, as well as the families of fallen officers. This year, they have helped raise funds for an officer in St. Joseph who was hit by a semi while aiding others in a snowstorm and for an officer in Carmel who was hit while on patrol on his motorcycle.

"Each time we do something, it's pretty much whatever the officer or the family wants," Cheeseman said.

When Deputy Carl Koontz was killed in the line of duty on Sept. 29, 2016, it was the first line-of-duty death since Indiana Going Blue had formed. Shortly after his funeral, Cheeseman said a deputy from Elkhart County messaged her about an officer taking photographs of the patches on the officers who were at the funeral. Cheeseman took his advice and made a post asking for photographs of patches from departments.

"Within one-half hour of posting it, an officer in the Southern part of the state said you should collect patches - just ask for them and figure it out later," Cheeseman said. "Another trooper, from Eastern Indiana, said you should make a quilt. From the time I posted it to two hours later, I had numerous people volunteering to make quilts. I'm just the middle man. I didn't do much."

Five months after Deputy Koontz was killed, Indiana Going Blue presented the family with five handmade quilts made from the patches.

On July 27, Southport Police Lt. Aaron Allan was killed while responding to the scene of a vehicle crash. The suspect was trapped inside the vehicle and shot Allan multiple times. The incident wasn't far from Cheeseman's now Perry Township home.

She drove over to introduce herself to Chief Thomas Vaughn and offer help in any way she could. Indiana Going Blue began to promote fundraisers that benefitted Lt. Allan's family, with Angi making sure those fundraisers were legitimate by confirming them with Vaughn. She also began collecting patches to have quilts made for the Allan family. As of Sept. 11, Indiana Going Blue had received 450 patches from across the nation in its P.O. Box. Cheeseman would take the mail over to the Southport Police Station and allow the officers to open them. She said they will continue to collect patches until the end of the month, or as needed.

"Southport Police Department was shocked (by the amount of support), but it's not abnormal for the community, the state and the nation to come together in support of them in a time like this," Cheeseman said. "They were overwhelmed, but it's humbling to see everyone supporting them."

In 2015, there were zero line-of-duty deaths in the state of Indiana, the first time that had happened in 30 years. She created a challenge coin to commemorate the news. She was hoping to do another in 2016, but Howard County Deputy Carl Koonz was shot and killed in March. Indiana Going Blue created and sold a coin designed for him. His wife is choosing to use the proceeds for a scholarship fund at Northwestern where he was a school resource officer. The page created another challenge coin in early 2017 when Allen County Sgt. Allen Cox was found unconscious and died in his police car.

Cheeseman said she was hopeful they'd only be making one coin a year, until she heard the news about Lt. Allan. His coin will soon be sold by the page for $13 each. Allan's wife, Stacy, can use the proceeds in any manner she chooses.

"Everything we went through, for about a month, there's a lot you don't think of if you've never gone through it before," Vaughn said. "Since she's worked with surviving families before, she had that insight. It gave us a roadmap of what events could work successfully and what didn't work. At the end of the day, we just want to make sure Stacy and the kids are taken care of. The help has been tremendous. We couldn't have done it without her."

With nearly 93,000 followers, Indiana Going Blue is able to reach more of an audience than the most of the individual departments can, which is why Cheeseman said she enjoys using that platform to share issues that either promote the good work the officers do every day, or show the struggles they go through.

"I don't have things planned," Cheeseman said. "It's whatever happens with current events. I know that God is working here. God has a plan for it. I just take each day and go with it."

The Triska Opera House

HAUNTS & JAUNTS

By Rick Hinton

I've been asked to write about some of my own personal experiences while ghost hunting. While it's not the stuff of dramatic TV fare, there have been memorable occurrences along the journey. There were many 'off' nights when nothing would happen (they don't say much about that on the television weekly shows), yet other times when 'things' took a peculiar twist. One such was the Triska Opera House, just over the state line in Rossville, Ill. It turned into a entertaining evening!

The building was ancient, a former Freemason's Masonic lodge located on the main drag of Rossville. It ran from 1904 to 1947, with the lodge occupying the auditorium's third floor. The first two floors were rented out. An opera house took residence on the first floor, continuing into the late 1920s when it was then converted into a Ford auto dealership, and when that particular tenure ended, a poultry and feed business. In 1935 the second floor was used as a metal fabrications shop. In 1945 an apartment was constructed in the front part of the second floor, with plans for more in the future. That never materialized. Legend dictates that during the prohibition, illegal liquor operations ensued within its walls; with even a visitation by Al Capone himself! Speculation of course, but always a good story! Regardless, it was a busy building, with a lot of history packed within its walls! And ... a parade of people who've come and gone, leaving an imprint possibly remaining behind into this era.

In 2011 David Triska purchased the building, with intentions of turning it into an antique store. He had a simple plan for a business in the small town of Rossville. That soon changed. Paranormal activity quickly dictated a new direction: being pushed, black masses and shadows, footsteps, knocking and thumping, whispers, a woman moaning, strange lights seen on the second floor, doors opening and closing, and apparitions seen in the outside windows from the townsfolk convinced David that he should take a different approach. Just maybe! He was entrenched in the building 24/7, spending the majority of his day (and nights) there. He was a witness. And he wanted answers. He began letting paranormal teams in to investigate. Their experiences confirmed what he already knew. The now entitled-Triska Opera House-was very haunted!

In May of 2014 our team, South Central Paranormal, made the journey along the corridor of I-74 West, turning north after the border to arrive in Rossville and the Triska Opera House. We had heard the stories. Time for some fun!

Something to Crow About Nimble Thimbles Quilt Club hosts 2017 Quilt Show with proceeds going to charitable causes

FEATURE

Bv Nicole Davis

Nimble Thimbles Quilt Club is setting an example, demonstrating how the hobby of quilting can be used both as a modern art form and for philanthropic purposes.

Members make everything from the traditional quilt to backpacks, purses or wall hangings. With those skills, they donated more than 700 items to charitable causes in 2016.

"The unique thing about quilting is you're not in a box that you have to do things a certain way," said Nimble Thimbles president Jan Haley. "It's become more artistic. There is a way of thread painting. There is a way to use your machine and make your design with your threads. I have seen beautiful quilts with people's faces. It's become and art, not just something old people do to get a warm quilt."

Community members can see some of that artwork on display during the 2017 Quilt Show: Something to Crow About on Sept. 22-23 at Scott Hall in the Johnson County Fairgrounds. Tickets are $10 in advance or $12 at the door. Children under 12 are free.

The bi-annual event will have more than 150 quilts on display. Members have been challenged to use a piece of crow fabric and incorporate it into the theme of a mini blanket. On Friday, Eleanor (Elly) Levie will present "Rock Your Quilting" with a trunk show and discussion of how to put a personal stamp on everything. Saturday the show will have free mini lessons scheduled every hour beginning at 10 a.m., plus vendors, consignment booths, silent auction and Elly Levie will return for another workshop.

Haley, of Perry Township, and past president Donna McElwain, who resides east of Greenwood, both entered the club for their love of quilting. They quickly discovered the group's love of helping others. When McElwain joined eight years ago, Nimble Thimbles had 35 members. It's now up to 85, ranging in age from 40 years old to 96.

Members make quilts for the homeless, hospice patients, numerous veteran's causes such as the Indy Honor Flight and Habitat for Humanity. They make small, flannel blankets for premature babies at Franciscan Health and weighted blankets for children with autism. They quilt together backpacks for First Steps Reading Program, for preschoolers who also receive four books throughout the year. The ladies made 144 backpacks last year.

"I love our club because of all the volunteer work that we do," McElwain said. "Our purpose is learning new techniques and giving back to the community."

Nimble Thimbles will host sew-ins to work on these projects, but members also take the work home with them. Members can learn off one another, but Haley said they also enjoy reading about new techniques, finding ideas on Pinterest or watching videos on YouTube.

"The things that have changed since our grandmothers did it - they did everything by hand and had little templates they cut out with their scissors and cardboard," McElwain said. "We have rotary cutters, you can cut a lot of fabric at one time. Sewing machines are more modern. That's the appeal. You can use an entire computer program."

Haley and McElwain said they look forward to the upcoming quilt show to exhibit the hobby that they all love so much, learn new things and use funds raised to give back to the community.

5 Gus Karozos of Homecroft just celebrated his ____ Birthday with family and friends at Greek Islands restaurant. Happy Birthday, Gus!

You brightened the street, Lionel Hills

For 12 years, Lionel Hills entertained drivers and passengers at the intersection of Thompson Road and Emerson Avenue. With his headphones on, Hills would ride his bike, sitting on it backwards, while dancing with fun props or doing tricks such as juggling. Sadly, the entertainment is coming to an end. The former spot of a veterinarian's office with limited hours has since become a dental office that will be open 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., not allowing for the empty parking lot where Hills would ride.

"I would like to say thanks for all of the support," Hills wrote on a Facebook post. "The honks, the waves, those that stopped by to say hello and those that gave me tips even though I didn't do it for money. I appreciate all of you. It's been fun and exciting the whole time riding there. But seemingly, it has come to an end. And I'm okay with it now. I've had that lot for a long time and I thank God for gracing me with a talent that I could share with the community."

The community loved Hills' talent so much, they created a Facebook fan page in his honor: Guy on Thompson and Emerson that Rides His Bike Backwards, And Juggles! In the spring, Hills was even invited to perform during a Beech Grove High School basketball halftime show!

We loved driving by that intersection to see what Hills was up to that day, and to see the way he made people smile that was his whole point. The Southside Times interviewed Hills in 2011, where he shared, "Sitting at a light is not easy. I do it so the light won't seem so long for them. I look at the people looking at me. Some smile, some wave, some just look. It makes me feel good."

We're sad to see you go, Lionel, and we hope you can find another hobby that makes you as happy or happier than this one did!

If Genuinely creepy and chilling

MOVIE REVIEW

By Adam Staten

Fear, terror or at least the impression that our very existence hangs in the balance is a sentiment a wide swath of the population craves. How else could one explain the continual popularity of bungee jumping, roller coasters and skydiving? Simply put, people enjoy a good scare and the accompanying adrenaline rush every now and then. One of the more common ways of fulfilling this need of fear and terror are through horror films. One new film is likely to have audiences flocking to it in anticipation of encountering a good scare... or two or three.

It is a film based upon the classic Stephen King book of the same name. The film, set in the 80s, is the story of a creepy, demonic clown that literally feasts on a town's poor, unfortunate children. After a number of the town's children turn up missing, a ragtag group of children set out to find out what is behind the series of disappearances. Over the course of their investigation, each of the children experience strange, seemingly supernatural occurrences that would have weaker-willed individuals questioning their sanity, running in the other direction or both. However, what they eventually discover is something much, much worse than any of them could have ever imagined.

As far as the story goes, It is a genuinely scary tale of children confronting a creepy clown and their own fears in the process. It is more of a psychological horror film as it relies on jump scares and its eerie, unsettling atmosphere than on gore. However, while the story is a beloved horror classic written by a master of all things weird and unsettling, It does drag a bit. Toward the later fourth of the film or so, it begins to feel as if the director is trying to fill time. The children's search gets to a certain point where it doesn't progress, so much so that it becomes a tad repetitive and boring. Also, because there are so many children in the group, a number of them are severely underdeveloped.

Despite the issues with the story and direction, the film does feature some strong and standout performances from its young cast. No matter how good the child actors are, It is Pennywise's tale and the actor portraying the creepy clown delivers in a chilling and truly horrific performance.

It is not a story for everyone, especially those who dislike clowns, but for those who enjoy well-constructed horror films, they are sure to enjoy this one. Genuinely creepy and chilling. 4 out of 5.

PEER TO PEER Big things come in big packages

By Howard Hubler

A year ago I was driving down the interstate minding my own proverbial business, "but what to my wondering eyes did appear, what is that great big box on the interstate doing around here?" As Clayton Moore indicated in his tome, The Night Before Christmas, these people saw a jolly old elf and did not what to make of it. I saw a box bigger than a house trailer going down the interstate and did not know what to make of it either. To be truthful, I thought it was a Vice President Mike Pence's motorcade. I figured, had it been Trump, I would've heard about it on the news.

In the opposing lane was a state police car by itself way out in front of something I could not quite make out. Eventually there were two more police cars, the three cars each straddling I-74 like pace-cars on the parade lap at the 500. The next thing I knew, here came a semi trailer hauling a box so big I couldn't see how it possibly could make it down the interstate. Behind this huge box were an array of police cars, and then eventually I saw all lanes of bumper-to-bumper traffic doing 45 miles an hour, more or less, going down the interstate. I thought thank goodness this doesn't happen very often and thank even more goodness that I'm not in that huge multi-thousand vehicle backup going along behind it. Being a creature of logical thinking, I said surely this must be some aerospace or national defense delivery to be as invasive as all of this was. The only thing I knew for certain, this was not Mike Pence.

Fast forward a year later, I go down the interstate and sometimes past two or three of these mega-motorcades transporting everything from 300-foot-long wind propellers to great big boxes full of I do not know what. Sometimes, the police allow you to slowly pass by the motorcade, at other times the shipment is so big that all the traffic just crawls along behind it. When did this all start? Yes eventually, I got stuck behind these, not once but two or three times. I could see me going to an early morning meeting that I called myself, only to arrive in the room full of angry people a half an hour late and explain, "It wasn't my fault, it was the fault of a 300-foot-long propeller".

I am not a "go write your congressman" kind of a guy. When you have a Republican state, generally speaking, logic dictates the activity. I know most of this activity is occurring on interstates, with a Republican Congress, I would think logic would dictate there as well. For my two cents, these people need to be moving their equipment after dark.

All those tomatoes!!

NUTRITION

The Southside Times

By Wendell Fowler

Right now, season tomatoes are plentiful and cheap, so store some for winter.

Here's why: Tomato skin contains high levels of antioxidant, lycopene proven effective against many forms of cancer and overall health perks. The many health benefits of tomatoes can be attributed to their juicy wealth of nutrients, fiber and sun-kissed vitamins.

One large tomato contains 40 percent of the daily vitamin C, impressive amounts of vitamin A, K, B6, folate, and thiamin, and good source of protein, fiber, potassium, manganese, magnesium, phosphorous and copper. Partially due to the impressive levels of potassium found in tomatoes, consuming a tomato daily reduces the risk high blood pressure. Vitamin A has been shown to reduce the effects of carcinogens and can protect you against lung cancer. If you're a cigarette smoker, tomatoes' coumaric acid and chlorogenic acid, fight against nitrosamines, the main carcinogens found in cigarettes. Yes, tomatoes are acidic, but after you eat them, they make your body pH more alkaline: an unfriendly environment for cancer and disease.

For fresh summer goodness this winter, harvest just-picked tomatoes now and cook up a big pot of all-purpose tomato sauce, skin and all. Just this weekend I took about two dozen tomatoes, washed them well, chopped them up and put them into my food processor in batches, along with green peppers, onion, lots of garlic, a bit of tomato concentrate, Himalayan salt and pepper and pureed the daylights out of them. Then I simmered the sauce over medium fire for 10 minutes. After it cooled, I put the all-purpose sauce into freezer bags, laid them flat and froze the packages for future use for pasta, soups, chili and sauces. The nutritious red sauce will taste like it was made from fresh tomatoes, with a bright, fruity aroma, health creating vitamins and fiber. Also, cut fresh tomatoes into cubes and store them flat in the freezer for fall and winter soups and stews.

In a hurry to make a quick supper for Sandi recently, I went to our Fountain Square backyard garden, plucked cherry tomatoes fresh off the vine, cut them in half and tossed them into a sauté pan with oil, lots of garlic, salt and pepper and let them gently, not violently, cook over low heat. Then, at the last moment, I added cooked pasta and a handful of freshly harvested basil leaves, tossed it all together and dusted it with parmesan for a quick "right-out-of-the-garden" late summer pasta dish exploding with flavor and health-creating nutrition. Life is good.

Trapuzzano speaks to Roncalli student body

Mercy – Jennifer Trapuzzano, a 24-year-old Catholic widowed mother who lives in Indianapolis, brought her message of mercy and forgiveness to the Roncalli High School student body. Three years ago, her husband, Nathan, was murdered two blocks from their home while out for a morning walk. Trapuzzano gave birth to their daughter, Cecilia, three weeks after Nathan's murder. Even in his death, Nathan's faith continues to be a witness to others and has brought countless people back to the church. Trapuzzano has taken steps to not only forgive but to pray daily for Nathan's murderer.

After graduating Manual High school at the age of 18, Leon was drafted and entered the army. During his 33 months of service, after the invasion of Cerlano, his company was sent overseas on Christmas Eve and spent a year in Italy which ended in Corsica. In 1945, Leon and Sugar Robinson reconnected and wed in November 1947. They were married for 42 years and had two children, Pam and Tim. Leon enjoyed watching and attending various sporting events starting with Edgewood Grade School to tailgating at Purdue University football games. In 1989, Sugar, died. Leon continued working for Perry Township Schools where he met Kim Walton, who would be his companion for the last 27 years. The last few years, they resided at Franklin United Methodist Community. Leon is survived by his brother, Raymond Meyer; children, daughter, Pam (Dick) Irwin and a son, Tim (Nancy) Meyer; longtime companion of 27 years, Kim Walton; four grandchildren, Ryan (Mandee), Mandy (Bryan), Melissa, and Matthew (Katie) and seven great-grandchildren, who called him Papa the Great. Funeral services were Sept. 9 at G. H. Herrmann Madison Avenue Funeral Home, 5141 Madison Ave. He will be laid to rest in Concordia Cemetery.

vering because God who has promised us salvation and sanctification and His constant presence, is faithful Himself. Is this not our justification for going forward when others are retreating and falling away? Let us think for a moment of those who have been so wounded by life and its hard ships but who never once wavered, that is, hesitated to believe all of the great promises of God of deliverance. Deliverance not only from sin but from the lust of the flesh. This is important. We need their witness. Those who have lost their fortunes, their families, their lives, all for the sake of the gospel (the new Testament body of promises). Jesus brought them to us and we either believe them or we don't. What do they mean to us? They mean everything or nothing at all. What do we believe and how much do we believe of them and in Him, Jesus Christ? This is the question of the day. Not, how large is the congregation we attend and how are we doing financially and how many were baptized last Sunday? The question is Who we believe and what?

Think of God's love which is greater far than tongue or pen or word processor could ever express. Either we believe He loves us or we don't. It is that simple. If we believe, we accept our lot in life, whatever it is, and continue the struggle for Christ's cause. We put it all on the line for Him. We come together with others who feel the same. We encourage them and provoke them to do more and to stay close to the family. We do what we do because it is the right thing to do.

God bless and go and have a great day.

Paul A. Kirby is the pastor at the Church of God at 3939 S. Emerson Ave.
