City of Greenwood plans downtown fieldhouse

Plans are underway to demolish the 19-acre former Greenwood Middle School property and repurpose the gymnasium to serve as a location for a future downtown fieldhouse. The Greenwood Redevelopment Commission (RDC) has reviewed initial plans for stabilization and selective demolition of the property. Demolition is expected to cost about $1.1 million. If approved, the RDC will fund demolition of the former middle school. The project begins redevelopment of the downtown property, which Greenwood purchased in 2017.

Foster replaces Corey on Greenwood City Council

Within the last two weeks, there have been two at-large members of the Greenwood City Council who have been replaced. Last month, councilman Chuck Landon passed away and his successor, former police chief Bob Dine, was elected Sept. 6.

On Sept. 18, Johnson County Deputy Prosecutor Andrew Foster was elected to the council, replacing Brent Corey. Corey is currently under investigation by the state police after being accused by a workmate of voyeurism.

In a letter to the GOP Chair of Johnson County, Beth Boyce, Corey stated that he was resigning effective Aug. 20 from the council due to a move out of the city.

Foster, his replacement, was born and raised in Greenwood.

"He loves this community," Boyce said. "He has a close relationship with law enforcement and is serious about public safety. He is looking forward to helping further the public safety aspect in Greenwood and being able to serve and give back to the community where he grew up."

Burmese students find acceptance, welcoming environment at St. Mark's Catholic School

By Stephanie Dolan

In the country of Myanmar, once referred to as Burma, a kind of religious cleansing genocide is spreading across the nation as refugees flee in an attempt to safely practice their chosen faiths.

Into the Southside of Indianapolis, nearly 8,000 Burmese families have emigrated from refugee camps in places like Malaysia, India and Thailand, thankful for their new religious freedoms.

Part of that religious freedom includes the choice to educate their children in a parochial setting like St. Mark's Catholic School, located at 541 E. Edgewood Ave.

Coming together

"More of our story of diversity has changed here," St. Mark's Principal Rusty

Albertson said. "Approximately six years ago there was an influx in this community of Burmese refugee families. We really didn't have any in our school at that time and the influx also coincided with the start of the voucher program. So, they were able to use their Choice Scholarship from the state and bring that money with them."

The Indiana Choice Scholarship Program was a law that was passed, pushed by the Secretary of Education, allowing parents to take the money that would normally go to a public school and choose where they wanted an education for their children.

"Right now, we have 250 students out of 400 who are on scholarships," Albertson said. "It's based on the number of family members along with income. It's a sliding scale."

Principal

The voucher provides parents who might be able to afford private education with the ability to use money earmarked for taxes to go to the school of their choice.

"We started with 12 Burmese students six years ago and that number has grown every year," Albertson said. "That growing number has also been reflected in our church. We're funded by our church – whatever expenses aren't covered our church funds the rest. When you go to our 9:30 a.m. mass on Sunday, I tell people it kind of looks like the United Nations, which is cool. We have Burmese people, we have people who are African, we have Hispanic – it's a really nice mix and our school really reflects that now."

Today, St. Mark's educates nearly 170 Burmese students.

Ever growing

Albertson, who has been the principal at St. Mark's for the last 10 years, said that the school went from being 4 percent minority when he started to a nearly 60 percent minority today.

"That's interesting and a real reflection of our community," he said. "It's changed our students in such a positive way, allowing them to be exposed to new cultures. In the 10 years I've been here, I've never had a racial issue at this school."

Albertson regularly meets with a Burmese family council.

“Language is the No. 1 barrier but with a lot of these children, when they start in pre-k, by the time they’re in second grade they speak better English than I do,” he said. “They learn it. They’re helping their parents learn English as well.”

Albertson said the Burmese community is, by and large, very spiritual.

“That’s not to say we’re not affected by the real world but kids are just kids,” he said. “Our Hispanic numbers have also grown as have our African-American numbers. We sing a song in church called ‘All Are Welcome’ and I think that’s really representative of how the students feel.”

While all have always been welcomed at St. Mark’s, the initial influx had teachers scrambling to figure out the best ways in which to impart a foreign curriculum.

“When we first started to get Burmese students, teachers were asking ‘what are we going to do?’” Albertson said. “I responded that we just had to teach them – we had to find ways.”

Learning on both sides

Albertson said that, at first, it was just an adjustment of getting the curriculum delivered in ways that students could understand.

“We saw these not as special needs students but just as students who needed extra help,” he said.

Albertson also said that oftentimes issues weren’t just about a language barrier but it was also about a certain dialect.

“There are probably 30 or 40 dialects within the Burmese language,” he said. “Burmese is the universal language, but there’s a lot of different languages within that.”

This means that the No. 1 issue is still communicating with parents but sometimes the children help their parents with translating while Albertson also relies on the three Burmese faculty members working at St. Mark’s.

“These parents are very interested in their children’s education,” he said.

The teacher population at St. Mark’s hasn’t just adjusted, it has also grown considerably. The staff includes two full-time ESL (English as second language) teachers.

“We went from 15 staff members to almost 40,” Albertson said. “The culture and the climate here is very good. When parents come here, they all sit around this table when they are interested in this school for the first time. They want to know that their children will grow in academics and have access to athletics. They absolutely will. But our No. 1 thing is getting their children closer to God. That’s what we want to teach here.”

Today, the largest population of Burmese students in the Indiana Catholic Archdiocese comfortably resides at St. Mark’s Catholic School.

“When you look at the building it hasn’t changed from 1948 when it was built,” Albertson said. “But on the inside, it’s very different, especially with the people who make it up. We’re representing the community that we’re in, which is what any school should be doing.”

Principal Rusty Albertson says that the diversity of the students is a reflection of the community itself. (Submitted photo)

Annual Beech Grove festival fell back to the 50s

By Nancy Price

Downtown Beech Grove's 65th annual Fall Festival attracted crowds each day of the festival, held Sept. 12-15. Local live entertainment, rides, a '50s themed parade and food, drink and craft vendors that lined the streets, manned by nonprofits, helped to make this year's festival one of the most successful to date, according to Tim Latimer of the Beech Grove Promoters Club.

"Overall, we agree this was one of our best festivals," Latimer said. "All (vendors) reported some of the highest sales of food products ever. Many reported having to leave to purchase more buns, meat, drinks, etc. due to high demand and sales. Poor Jacks Amusements, who bring the rides and other booths, were very happy with sales as well."

The parade was also very popular this year; the theme was "Flashback to the Fifties". Forty-five floats were decorated to reflect the theme along with music from the era; many women even wore poodle skirts. The Promoters Club awarded cash prizes for best floats. Winners included Center Stage Dance Academy for first place ($200); Beech Grove High School senior class for second ($150); and Beech Grove Bowl's Special Roller's Bowling League for third ($100).

Several local leaders and political candidates, including Beech Grove Mayor Dennis Buckley and Indianapolis Mayor Joe Hogsett, walked or rode in vehicles during the parade.

Latimer said members of the Promoters Club were grateful for the support and/or cleanup efforts from the city of Beech Grove, local police and fire departments, the Department of Public Works and the Beech Grove Parks Department. He also thanked members of the Promoters Club for cleanup after the festival.

"A festival like this puts a great strain on those groups and we are very thankful for their cooperation," he said.

A paranormal diary: part II

HAUNTS & JAUNTS

By Rick Hinton

In the building of a small northern Indiana town, overnight club members sleeping on the second floor have reported sounds emanating from above them where the “Big, Bad, Dark” takes up residence. They have heard footsteps on the stairways and down the second-floor hallway, doors opening and closing on their own accord, doorknobs jiggling, voices heard — low, incoherent and mostly female. Paranormal investigators have also reported a consistent cycle of battery drainage. These events also make caretaker Bob Freeman smile. The history raises questions...

Did the past Order of Odd Fellows somehow establish this building as a nexus point for paranormal activity? Or many incarnations throughout the years? Or even a combination of all of the above? It's a valid observation. There are definitely “odd” things afoot and sometimes not so pretty!

For the time being, Bob has opened the building to paranormal investigations. He donates his personal time to hosting these groups and possibly learning something in the process. He's seen his fair share of investigators circulate like a colony of worker ants, setting up equipment and climbing the three levels of the building for many hours. He's noted the good and the bad: experiencing quack job psychics and those offering something of substance. He's gazed into the eyes of investigators out of breath because they had just experienced something they could not understand.

My own personal experiences have been varied. I've always sensed “something” hovering just below the surface. Buildings — much like people — have their own personalities and easily influence. These remnants can affect in different and sometimes radical ways. While never personally experiencing the great evil on the third floor, I know those who have. I've never seen the apparition strolling the halls of the second floor but a very persuasive video on YouTube leaves no doubt it happened. What I have experienced is audio evidences: voices... particularly one female taunting me and another investigator on the second floor with our names after we introduced ourselves during a recording session. And a frisky game of hide and seek with an unseen phantom on the third floor. There were others:

The doctor's office — feelings of being watched and emotions of elation, anxiety, grace and just as quickly, apprehension; for a period, I lost all control. I was alone, listening and waiting. I soon became not myself, perplexed and highly irritated; watching myself like a participant in a movie. I couldn't control it! This had happened before, several years earlier with another investigator. And for the rest of the night? An investigator touched; Laura being scratched; and Bob being shoved from behind on the stairway. Good times!

In the early morning hours, we left northern Indiana as heavy snow showers descended. The high beam of the headlights revealed a wall of thick flakes streaking toward the windshield like a barrage of white bullets. The road had deteriorated, causing me to slow down and gulp more coffee as we headed south.

As was Bob Freeman, his cane tapping rhythmically against the floor of his building as he checked doors, turned out lights and just listened. I'm sure there was a smile in there also.

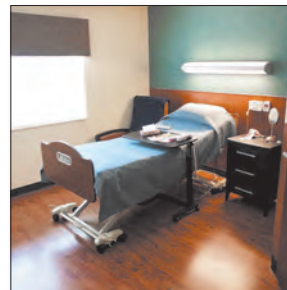

Rick Hinton, a Southport resident, loves researching things that go bump in the night. His articles can be read on Facebook: Rick Hinton, Southport Paranormal Examiner. Hinton conducts paranormal investigations with his team, South Central Paranormal.

Eskenazi encourages gynecological cancer screenings, hosts event

Every year in the United States, there are about 89,000 women diagnosed with a gynecologic cancer. Among them, 29,000 will die.

This Saturday, Eskenazi Health is hosting Women's Health Day, providing numerous vital health screenings for the benefit of all women in central Indiana.

The event is being held during Gynecologic Cancer Awareness Month. Eskenazi is encouraging women to learn more about cancers of the cervix, vagina, vulva, ovaries and uterus, including early detection and prevention.

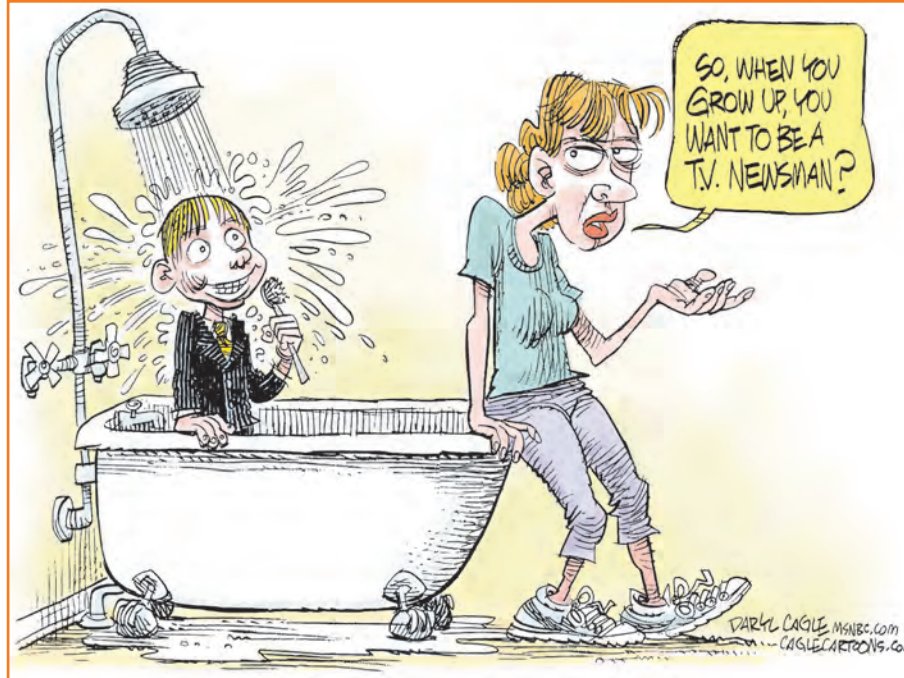

The second most common type of cancer for women worldwide is cervical, yet because it develops over time, it's also one of the most preventable. Deaths from cervical cancer in the U.S. are declining by about 2 percent a year, mostly due to annual Pap tests, which detect cervical abnormalities and allow for early treatment.

Eskenazi Health providers and students will be available during 8 a.m. – 4 p.m. on the fifth floor of the Sandra Eskenazi Outpatient Care Center at 720 Eskenazi Ave., Indianapolis, with breast models, blood sugar stations and additional women's health information. Parking is available in the Eskenazi Health Parking Garage.

The Eskenazi Health Center Primary Care – Center of Excellence in Women's Health and the St. Margaret's Diagnostic Breast Center will provide cervical and breast cancer screenings, in addition to screenings for osteoporosis. For those who do not have insurance, breast and cervical screenings will be available through the Breast Cervical Cancer Program. Those interested in attending this event may schedule a time by calling (317) 880-6050.

TOP 10 WAYS TO PREPARE FOR THE UPCOMING FALL FESTIVALS

By Torry Stiles

- Warm up your skills the week before by walking through the mall and constantly saying, "Just looking".
- Buy some Boy Scouts popcorn now and you won't be so shocked by the $7 price tag for a bag of kettle corn later.
- Epipens and diaper wipes. Trust me on this one.
- Learn to negotiate for better parking through the use of stolen handicap parking tags.
- Practice saying, "I love these craft fairs because they inspire me to create my own..." then sneak off to Target the next weekend and buy a bunch of stuff off the shelf.
- Lower your standards for "clean restrooms".
- Bring a leash for your kid and a stroller for your dog.
- Pack a bag with the essentials for a fall day in Indiana: sunscreen, umbrella, mosquito repellent, winter jacket, hand sanitizer, flip-flops and snow boots.
- Finally admit to yourself that if it says, "Made in Pakistan" then it probably isn't authentic, antique Americana.
- Buy one of those big, rolling shopping cart thingies and then forget it every time you head out.

A Simple Favor

A twist-filled ton of fun

MOVIE REVIEW

By Adam Staten

Everything has an end. Whether it's a book, a television series, a meal or a movie; no matter how much we enjoy those things, they all have to end. As much as I've enjoyed watching, thinking about and then writing and expressing my thoughts and feelings on the latest films for nearly six years, this is will be my final review. During that time, I've seen good, bad and terrible films but I've enjoyed reviewing them all. Thankfully, things are ending on a high note as I checked out A Simple Favor.

A Simple Favor is the story of Stephanie (Anna Kendrick), a recently widowed mommy vlogger, who spends most of her time volunteering in her son's classroom. She's happy-go-lucky, extremely socially awkward and since her husband's death, she's also desperately seeking a friend. One day, while picking up her son from school, Stephanie encounters the sophisticated, worldly and well-dressed Emily (Blake Lively). From this moment forward, Stephanie's life will never be the same.

Due to the simple fact that both have boys in the same class, Emily and Stephanie both hit it off and enjoy spending time together. Stephanie is instantly fascinated with Emily's life. Emily seemingly has it all: a gorgeous house, a high-paying, prestigious job and a beautiful family. However, when it comes to Emily, there definitely is more than meets the eye. She is obviously unhappy but no one is quite sure why. When Stephanie performs a simple favor for Emily - picking up her son from school - Stephanie soon goes down a rabbit hole that ends in a way no one saw coming, characters and the audience included.

When thinking about A Simple Favor there are two things that immediately come to mind: the writing and the performances of the leads, if either of them is subpar the film is a major failure. Thankfully, with this film, that is not the case. The story, which implements a surprisingly large amount of humor, truly does keep you guessing until the film's unexpected conclusion. While the many twists and turns may get ridiculous, it oddly keeps you interested and invested, wondering how this thing will end.

Kendrick and Lively, while not turning in Oscar-level work, are still a lot of fun to watch. They are obviously game for anything as they turn in fun and interesting performances and never seem annoyed by the often ridiculousness of the story.

A Simple Favor, while not a perfect flick, is still a ton of fun with its many twists and turns that keeps you guessing to the very end. Thanks for reading and have fun at the movies!

Fall is time to prepare for the colder months

Saturday is the first day of fall. The kids are back in school with pressing demands from school events and weekends are full of football games. Saturday is the first day of fall, and homeowners may want to take a few minutes to assess needs around their homes.

Now is the time to prepare for the colder months and local heating and cooling experts advise that now is the time to prepare your unit for the upcoming winter.

"Your unit has been running a lot," said Chris Huser of Lamping & Huser Heating & Cooling. "Now is the time to make sure the burners, gas valves and safety controls are operating properly."

Doug Bartram of Annee & Bartram Heating and Cooling also advised homeowners to call in a service check to clean the furnace and make sure everything works.

"The main thing is to have their furnace serviced before winter. I think it is very critical and make sure the filters are clean. It is really important, especially in the winter time, to keep filters clean," Bartram said.

Dan Hornaday of Flooring by Stretch Rite said autumn has traditionally been a time when homeowners invest in new carpet.

"Carpet is going to be a popular choice for the winter time because it is warm and comfortable. It has been losing a bit of a market due to hard surface but carpet is still a popular choice," Hornaday said. "The waterproof carpet is going pretty good. The silk carpet is nice and soft. That has been really popular as well."

Also homeowners should prepare their lawns and property for the coming year said Kelly Bowling of Indy Rental and Sales.

"We rent a lot of aerators and seed slicers for getting their seed out. We also rent chippers and sidewalk edgers frequently for fall cleanup. Moles are a problem this time of year and we have lawn rollers to create compaction," Bowling said.

Fall is also a time to enjoy family and friends outside. Bowling also said this time a year is a popular time to throw a party at home. She said Indy Rental and Sales can provide tents, tables, chairs and other items for outdoor gathering. For the kids, they have bounce houses.

"People are back to partying," said Bowling. "We also have some inflatables, we have bounce houses, a football toss very popular this time of year."

Why cats need yearly veterinary visits just as dogs do

PAWS for THOUGHT

By Dr. Bruce McLaughlin

It is a common misperception that cats don't need to go to the vet as often as do dogs. This misperception exists for many reasons, including:

- 1. HOUSE CATS DON'T GO OUTSIDE SO THEY DO NOT NEED VACCINATIONS. This is not necessarily true. Being a house cat does NOT mean a cat cannot be exposed to potentially fatal diseases such as feline leukemia or feline immunodeficiency virus.
- 2. CATS DON'T GET SICK AS OFTEN AS DOGS. Cats are no healthier than are dogs. Cats are, however, masters at hiding disease and not showing symptoms. Oftentimes by the time a cat acts truly sick the disease or sickness has progressed into an advanced stage. This is why it is so important to have an annual blood screening to determine the health of your cat.
- 3. CATS ARE SELF-SUFFICIENT AND DON'T NEED A LOT OF CARE. This is definitely a misperception. It may be true that cats use litter boxes and don't need to be let outside. However, cats do require attention from owners: play time, petting, grooming, regular feeding, etc. When cats do not receive an appropriate amount of attention it often manifests in behavioral issues such as improper elimination outside of the litter box and other behavioral issues.

4. CATS ARE HARDER TO TAKE IN A CAR OR INTO THE VET'S OFFICE. Cats definitely are creatures of habit and don't like going in the car or going into a vet's office. However, strides have been made in how cats are handled in a vet's office. We now work very hard at making visits for cats as stress-free as possible. We often use spray pheromones that help calm cats and other measures that make their visits less stressful for both the cat and cat owner.

In summary, it is very important that your cats receive annual examinations and periodic lab work. There is a high incidence of kidney disease, thyroid disease and diabetes in cats. If these issues are caught early (before your cat shows outward symptoms) the issues are treated more successfully and the life of your cat is extended.

Please call us for more information on how to bring your cat into the office and our newer procedures for a stress-free visit for your cat.

For sale by owner or agent? Which is best?

REAL ESTATE

By Dawn Whalen
Whalen Realty Group

In the current market, homes in many areas are selling quickly, so it makes sense that some homeowners may opt to sell their house themselves instead of enlisting a licensed realtor. The primary reason people choose this method is profit. By saving the average 6 percent sales commission, many feel like they're walking away with more money in their pocket and while this may be true for some sales, it's definitely not the norm. Here's a few things to remember about listing a home For Sale By Owner (FSBO) versus using a licensed realtor.

1. PRICING – This is the trickiest part of listing a home and the most important. If the price is too high, buyers won't be interested but if it's too low, the seller is giving away money. Real estate agents have experience finding a home's sweet spot in the market by comparing it to recently sold homes in the area, the quality and age of the home and how well it's been maintained. Many times, FSBO homes are priced too high and can linger on the market longer, which then gives the home a stigma that something could be wrong. A home is most likely to sell within the first few weeks of it being on the market.

2. SHOWINGS – The idea of showing a house sounds easy but there's really a fair amount of work involved. For example, it's a good idea to try and weed out people just wanting to browse, from those who are legitimately interested in purchasing. Then, there's the scheduling of the showing, cleaning and possible staging that needs to take place. The biggest drawback to showings with a FSBO home is the potential for the seller to be present. Many buyers feel uncomfortable sharing feedback with the seller, whereas an agent serves as third party to receive comments.

3. APPROVING THE BUYER – Just because a potential buyer puts an offer in on a FSBO home, it doesn't mean they're qualified and have the funds to afford it. Realtors work with lenders to confirm that buyers have the funds available and are approved for a mortgage. It's a waste of time and effort to go through the motions thinking a house is sold only to learn the buyer can't afford it.

4. PAPERWORK – In Indiana, buyers of homes built before 1978 are encouraged to pay for a lead-based paint test and radon tests for any property with a basement. If neither party in a FSBO transaction have an agent, it's important that the seller be knowledgeable on what's legally required to close, including the proper inspections, disclosures and tests. A standard real estate disclosure form allows sellers to identify any known defects in the home, including major systems, roof, mold and water damage, among other details.

5. MARKETING – With so many listing sites and social media available, it's easy to think that by posting a home FSBO, with or without an MLS, it will get sold but agents also use their network to garner attention. It's common for an agent to contact other realtors and let them know a new property is for sale and many also send notifications to their network of potential buyers letting them know when new houses are available.

Selling a home by owner can require a lot of work and research on behalf of the homeowner and for working families or people with busy schedules, saving the commission may not be worth the potential headache. Real estate agents are here to help make the home selling process easy.

To the moon and back

FEATURE

By Stephanie Dolan

Many things can bring a community closer together – an event, a person... even a dog.

A dog like Luna, who was rescued from the Southport High School parking lot after being discovered with a seemingly injured eye and blisters on her paw pads from walking on hot cement.

While her condition could have made her aggressive, Luna was grateful to have found people willing to help her.

"I work as a media clerk at the Southport High School library," Taylor Peters said. "On Aug. 3, our superintendent found a dog roaming our parking lot. He brought her into the doorway and called for our principal and assistant principal. They then called for Ashley Quinlin. Ashley is my sister and she works as the administrative assistant to our assistant principals."

Quinlin called up to her sister in the library, knowing that she had a leash in her car.

Luna was initially scared, refusing to make eye contact with anyone... until Peters arrived.

"I immediately sat on the floor with her and put my hand out for her to smell," she said. "I let her know that she was safe and a good girl and her tail wagged."

Peters took Luna to a local shelter, hoping to find a microchip, but came up empty. The shelter was good enough to look after Luna until the end of the day when Peters could come pick her up.

"I convinced my fiancé, Justin, to let us take her home," she said. "I am beyond blessed to be marrying a man who understands me to the fullest."

During the time Luna was at Peters' home, she visited the vet, who made it clear her eye would likely have to be removed. The cost for this surgery? $2,000.

"I took to GoFundMe," she said. "I created a Facebook page for her. I shared her story. I posted pictures and asked for help. Our school library sells coffee for $1.50 and we took it down to $1.00 with all of the proceeds going to Luna's surgery fund. The donations starting coming in."

Luna has had her right eye removed and with it, a tumor. She has stage three cancer, according to the Oncology Department of the Purdue Veterinary School. She's wearing a cone, waiting for her sutures to heal and is still looking for her forever home.

Luna is looking for a special person willing to love her and see to her own special needs.

"She does loose leash walking," Peters said. "She learned how to sit, lay down, spin and roll over. She howls when emergency vehicles go by. I would come home from work and sit down on the couch to read and she would hop up, lay her head on my leg, and snooze while I read my book. She showed me just how good of a dog she is."

Currently, Luna is staying with Peters' future sister-in-law, Brooke. She is on meds but is also willing to do almost anything for a treat.

Southport High School will continue their coffee fundraiser for Luna through the end of September. In October, a "Halloween Pawty" is planned from noon to 4 p.m., Oct. 28, at the Baxter YMCA. This event is intended to raise funds for both Luna's care and the Oncology Department at Purdue.

For more information on Luna and upcoming events, visit her Facebook page at facebook.com/LunasJourney2018. To donate, find Luna's GoFundMe page at gofundme.com/seeing-luna-through-surgery.

Jefferson Shreve named to District 16 council, replaces Jeff Miller

FEATURE

By Nancy Price

A former Indianapolis City — County Councilor has been sworn into office again, following the departure of Indianapolis Councilor Jeff Miller, who resigned from office last month before entering a guilty plea to "rude touch" of three underage girls.

Jefferson Shreve, who represented District 23 in Perry Township from 2013 – 2016, has replaced Miller for District 16, which includes parts of Perry, Center and Wayne townships.

Shreve is the owner and president of Storage Express, which has 107 locations across five states. He said he is looking forward to economic development opportunities in District 16. Employers within the district include Eli Lilly and Company, Rolls Royce, Farm Bureau and Anthem, as well as public facilities, such as the Convention Center, Lucas Oil Stadium, Bankers Life and White River State Park.

"The district encompasses challenging redevelopment opportunities, including Circle Center Mall – and perhaps most tantalizingly – the former GM Stamping Plant site," Shreve said. "I'm juiced about the possibilities ahead toward figuring out the many ways we may bring these opportunities to bear for all of us."

In addition to his experience through District 23, Shreve has lobbied to get on the Metropolitan & Economic Development Committee and has taken a seat on the Public Works Committee.

"I expect to be an active member of both, toward advancing the economic development and infrastructure improvements needs of my district," he said.

Shreve, who worked alongside the Ballard administration during his time with District 23, said he is looking forward to the experience he will gain while working with the Hogsett administration.

"I'm eager to get a sense for the contrast in the two administrations," he said.

Shreve is also excited about the upcoming challenges and making a difference for residents of the diverse townships he will serve.

"Council members spend a lot of hours in their chairs at caucus, committee and full council meetings," he said. "If I can't contribute while in my seat, then the citizens have the wrong person on the job. I go in hopeful that I can add value. And get some good things done!"

Educational institutions within the district include the University of Indianapolis and IUPUI. Shreve and his wife, Mary, both alumni of Indiana University, recently gifted the IUPUI campus with funds to create a gateway and new student scholarships. Shreve has also served on numerous boards through IU.

Will you please bless the food?

NUTRITION

By Wendell Fowler

Every food you eat in its pure raw form, the way it organically exists in nature, contains the energy of the sun, moon, wind and rain. Earth is your body. Your body connects with earth that sustains all life and provides everything we need. Do you voice gratitude for this miracle?

The dinner table is an altar of gratitude. Saying a simple, sincere prayer of thanks before a meal can be an excellent way to practice gratitude, center yourself and raise your food's vibe. God makes food for the birds but doesn't hand feed them. We must co-create our health with a giving mother nature, not a board of directors and a factory.

When I began eating plant-based foods, not only did my health vastly improve but I felt more connected to my inner, higher self. Focus and clarity improved as my vibe continued rising. Wonderous, miraculous experiences began entering my life. I also perceive more of what my guardian angels whisper as I silently pray and meditate.

When we eat a piece of food and absorb that food's energy into our temple's cells as God designed, we are purified and create greater harmony with mind, body and spirit. Therefore, we should offer prayers of infinite gratitude for earth's healing, restoring and bountiful apothecary of plant medicines.

The quality of nourishment directly influences the quality of overall wellbeing, aliveness and connectivity to divinity. When we eat low-energy, chemically-processed dead junk foods and GMO produce, we receive '0' vitamin energy; hence, well-being and connectivity to the universal flows are weakened. Microwaving, frying, canning and dehydrating significantly reduce foods' energy, by the way.

Do you bless your food with sincerity? We know there's power in prayer.

Quantum physics proves blessing food can affect changes in peoples' physiological readiness for eating and causes changes to the structure and energy state of the food itself. But the compulsory, sing-song recitation of "God is great. God is good. Let us thank him for this food.." is lacking.

An exquisite way of expressing gratitude and blessing the food you're about to eat is to begin by bowing your head with palms faced upwards, inhale a deep, calming breath, exhale and then mindfully give thanks while focusing on your words. In your mind's eye, shine the light that you are onto your meal. However, if you thank God for the Brussels sprout, he'll know you're lying.

Give it up for Rustic Citrus

GRAMMAR GUY

By Curtis Honeycutt

I wish Rustic Citrus was the name of a band I played in back in college. We would have probably been some kind of folk/funk fusion, with banjo, mandolin and an entire horn section. I would have played cowbell and sung in the chanting sections of select songs. But alas, I wasn't in a band in college; "rustic" and "citrus" are simply two different anagrams for my first name.

Word nerds like you probably already know this but an anagram is a word, phrase or name with the letters rearranged to spell something else, like "debit card" and "bad credit". And anagrams have a long history.

Anagrams go all the way back to Ancient Greece, first used by either Pythagoras in the sixth century B.C. or by the poet Lycophon in the third century B.C. Plato and his followers claimed to use anagrams to unlock hidden, spiritual meaning in words and phrases. But my favorite example of anagram nerdiness in history took place long after the Greeks geeked out on switching letters around.

In the 17th century, King Louis XIII enjoyed anagrams so much that he hired an official Royal Anagrammatist named Thomas Billon to entertain his court with the clever rearranging of their names in amusing or mystical ways. Billon was the combination of a jester and obsessive word scrambler. For the record, if anyone's hiring, that sounds like an awesome job for me.

I have some favorite anagrams. For instance, "stifle" is an anagram of "itself". In Oklahoma (my home state), two cities on the opposite end of the state, "Altus" and "Tulsa", are anagrams of each other. The brand name Spandex was made by rearranging the letters of "expands". I don't want to play favorites here but an anagram for Presbyterians is "best in prayer" (and also "Britney Spears").

Finally, "eleven plus two" equals "twelve plus one". Don't let that blow your mind too much. And — don't worry — I'm not going to change the name of my column to Anagrammatist Guy, although I am considering the pseudonym Mr. Ray Gugam. Is Curtis Honeycutt "hectic unto yurts"? I'll let you decide.

Weekly Devotion

5 But He was wounded for our transgressions, He was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace was upon Him; and with His stripes we are healed.

6 All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way; and the Lord hath laid on Him the iniquity of us all.

ISAIAH 53:5-6

In these two verses we find all of the reasons for our love and admiration for our Savior, Jesus Christ. It would be well today for every one of us to go back to Isaiah 53 and to read the entire passage concerning what Christ would do and did do for us all. Jesus did not discriminate and do what He did for the Jews alone. He did what He did for all of the world regardless of a person's skin color or what or whom that person had put their faith in religiously. Jesus did not come to merely establish a new religion on the earth. He came to give us something tangible that we could put our faith in for a lifetime and for eternity once this life was finished.

I am a Christian today because I believe that anyone that would go to this trouble and to this extreme for me is worthy of my trust and my love and my devotion. Jesus alone is that One Person who is worthy of it. I am a child of God because of His opening the door of access to God for me and for you and for all others.

There are many theologies and many perspectives on the life of this man who was God come to be with us and who is still God being with us but there is only one truth and He says that He is the Truth and The Way and the Life. My prayer for all that read this is that everyone will forget their personal opinions and study to know the truth so that they can correctly separate the truth from opinion and come to know Christ personally as a Savior and a friend of all friends as well as Lord of all lords. May it be so.

God bless and go and have a great day.

Paul A. Kirby is the pastor at the Church of God at 3939 S. Emerson Ave.
