What triggers the paranormal?

HAUNTS & JAUNTS

By Rick Hinton

Paranormal trigger objects are used to draw a connection—plain and simple. They're inanimate objects that hopefully will attract an entity's attention, resulting in some type of contact. This is of course assuming that spiritual entities are drawn to this type of stimuli, or even interested. We only hope they've retained some semblance of their former personality after passing on. However, this may not be the case. Yet we march on as if it were....

Often investigations are targeting spirits of children. So, consequently, these trigger objects are more in line with a child's playful and inquisitive nature: toys, stuffed animals, trinkets, dolls, balls and colorful lights. The goal is to stimulate and play, yet often with questionable results.

Are these 'children' who they were when they lived in this earthly realm? Do they still have the mindset of a childhood taken too soon? Or...could it be something else imitating a child? You should ask these questions, folks. In the "science" of paranormal theory, there are no absolutes.

A current trend of trigger objects drawing the awe of departed children is teddy-bears with a decibel alarm activated by vibration. Larger (and more expensive) models have EMF (electric magnetic frequency capabilities) that illuminates teddy's head and paws when a spirit draws near. Really? Adult spirits, it would appear, tend to bind themselves to not only places, but also earthly possessions. Do children? It's a harder nut to crack for adults in determining what may draw them. Is it a book, an article of clothing, favorite car, a sentimental photograph or a particular piece of music? If they were a drinking sort, is it a bottle of booze set on a bar they frequented?

Investigations seem to center on audio EVP (Electronic Voice Phenomenon) recordings with a skewed rendition of David Letterman's Stupid Pet Tricks, where spirits are asked to perform; and most often with trigger objects of some sort. I cringe every time spirits are instructed to move a ball, thump on the wall, or communicate through an instrument's colorful array of lights. I cringe because I am guilty of doing it too. It's just where we are at this stage of paranormal investigations in this era of exploration. And...I don't see it changing anytime soon.

Trigger objects are a faucet in the tool box of a paranormal investigator. I suppose everyone should have one. And, as we experiment in this realm of uncertainty, every tool at our disposal becomes a means to an end.

Rick Hinton, a Southport resident, loves researching things that go bump in the night. His articles can be read on Facebook: Rick Hinton, Southport Paranormal Examiner. Hinton conducts paranormal investigations with his team, South Central Paranormal.

Bunnies, flowers and eggs galore

We couldn't be happier for spring. The office windows are open to let in the nice, cool breeze while the space heaters get stashed away. In talking with people around town, it sounds like everyone feels the same way. So we're giving it an educated guess that as Easter celebrations begin to take place this weekend, there will be a good turnout. We certainly have plenty of opportunities to get out, hunt eggs, spend some quality time together and take some photos with the Easter Bunny. With so many activities, how Mr. Bunny is going to pull off all of these visits is nothing short of a miracle!

Free community celebrations will take place this weekend. March 19 in Beech Grove, and Southport, 10:30 a.m. at Southport Park. Next Saturday, March 26, don't miss Greenwood's Easter Egg 5K at Craig Park at 10 a.m., Bunker Hill PTO's Easter Egg Hunt from 10 a.m. - noon at Bunker Hill Elementary School, Homecroft's Easter Egg Hunt at 2 p.m. on Southview Drive, Bargersville's Easter Egg Hunt from 12 - 2 p.m. at Maple Grove Elementary School, or Pictures with the Easter Bunny at the Franklin Road library from 11 – 2 p.m. or IMPD and Hubler Chevrolet's Easter Eggstravaganza from 1 - 3 p.m. at Hubler Chevrolet on U.S. 31 S. Make sure to check The Southside Times' calendar this week and next for more details on these family-friendly community events! We're looking forward to seeing you around town, taking in our lovely spring weather and enjoying all of the fun to be had.

STARS & STRIKES ON THE SOUTHSIDE

The Southside Times is all about people and our community. What do you like in your neighborhood? What don't you like? Who has done something nice, no matter how small and should be recognized? Email your "Stars and Strikes" to news@ss-times.com. Jim Simmons of Garfield Park and Jim Coffman of Beech Grove contributed to this week's Stars and Strikes.

Star: To Susan Grade and Elsy Benetiz at the Garfield Park Arts Center for the March 5 opening reception for their latest exhibit, "Hoosier Women in Art." The reception attracted a huge and enthusiastic crowd, and rightly so, as this is one of the Center's finest exhibits in the recent past. Included are watercolors, pottery and everything in between. And finally, much of the art is for sale until the close of the exhibit on March 26.

Star: To Beech Grove High School Marching Hornets for being one of 14 bands across the United States to perform at the 500 Festival Parade.

Star: To the Southport High School team for their win at Regionals last night. The Cardinals played Terre Haute South, with a victory of 74-44. They will compete at the Semi-state on March 19. Way to go!

Star: To the Greater Beech Grove Chamber of Commerce for their inaugural Community Fair last weekend! Lots of information was provided to the community and more than 4,000 pounds of paper was shredded!

Star: To Southport Police Officer Cameron Ellis who has recently organized a program called Police Officers Giving Back (POGB).

Twice a year, donations will be given to victims of domestic violence and sexual assault as well as benefitting needs for the homeless. Donations may be made to IFD station 53, 5231 S. Arlington Ave. on March 20 between 10 a.m. and 6 p.m. For more information, email cellis@southportpolice.org.

Christopher Reed Greenwood police officer takes a personal approach to law enforcement

BEHIND the BADGE

Greenwood Police Officer Christopher Reed said he enjoys finding opportunities to positively interact with the community he serves. Along with being a patrolman, Reed is a Field Training Officer and bicycle cop.

"We have a limited opportunity to approach the public, to say something that makes them think differently of us," he said. "That's why I like when we're on the bike. The access you get on a bicycle is so much better than in a car. People like to see you out. Going down a trail, people wave to you. It makes you seem more approachable."

Reed, originally from Danville, Ill., moved to Johnson County after college. He resides in Trafalgar with his wife and two children. He is going into his fifth year as a police officer for the Greenwood Police Department.

"I have never met a group of guys that there is no separation of generations," he said. "Once you're in and you're hired, they treat you like you've been their best friend for 50 years."

Reed said he enjoys serving in Greenwood for its small-town feel, with a department that provides opportunities for its officers to grow.

"The training that we get is top notch," he said. "I have access to training anywhere in the U.S. you don't get that in any other job. I went to active shooter training two weeks ago. Anything you want to be trained in is out there so there is no excuse to not pursue different things."

What was your inspiration to become a police officer? I choose to pursue becoming a police officer during the tail end of the recent recession. Careers that once seemed stable began to crumble and consequently crime was on the rise. I needed something that was stable and offered advancement opportunities. I grew up in a family that respected law enforcement so I knew it was a noble position that would require a very special set of skills.

What has been one of your most ratifying moments on the job? I recall responding to the home of a longtime husband and wife. The husband had a health complication and unfortunately did not make it. This was my first experience on the job with such an emotional event from an unexpected death. No amount of training can prepare you completely for that moment. I now had to focus my attention on comforting and supporting the wife. In this instance I felt that just being myself and letting my guard down was what was needed. We just talked...for hours. I tried to connect and show compassion as I would need in the same situation. Weeks later the wife called our department to express her gratitude. Wow, I was able to make a difference! I now look to match that personal approach in as many situations as I can.

What aspect of the job do you find most challenging? An officer's work schedule is very challenging. When the weather is bad we are on the road. When the holidays are being celebrated we are responding to calls for service. When friends are grilling on the weekends we are patrolling the neighborhoods. I surely am blessed to have my position and I understood those sacrifices coming into the job, but it still does

What do you enjoy doing in your offtime? My wife says I am a bit of a hermit. I love just being at home with my family. But being outdoors is always good though. As far as specific interests I am a bit of a gear-head.

come at great cost to our own families.

What are your future goals, rofessionally or personally? I hope to attain the rank of detective and hopefully sergeant in the near future. I have recently been appointed as one of the Field Training Officers (F.T.O.) which is challenging but the proper training for recruits is so vital to the long-term success of our Department. I would like to specifically train in Emergency Vehicle Operations (E.V.O.) Instructor and Bicycle Instructor at some point.

What would you have done if you hadn't of became a police officer? I was in the Union Trades as my father was. I originally got Bachelor's Degree in Training and Development. Both of those definitely helped shaped who I am today but I believe I found my match in being an officer.

Duane Langreck, president of the Southport RDC, discusses a proposed trail that the city will apply for later this year. The trail would span from behind the Walgreens near Madison Avenue to the park. Photo by Nicole Davis

Southport RDC present project updates

The Southport Redevelopment Commission presented news about projects and development in and around Southport at its monthly meeting on March 14. More than 75 residents and community leaders gathered at the Southport Community Center to learn about growth in the city.

Included in the nights discussion was: Dairy Queen owner Mike Griffin announced that his restaurant on Southport Road will begin remodeling starting later this year. They will maintain the old style, adding new dining room elements and fix up the parking lot.

Matt and Jessica Limeberry have purchased the former post office building. The couple has owned Sophia's Bridal for two years, and is at maximum capacity at their current building on U.S. 31 S. They will break ground early April, with construction planned to take four months.

Randy Faulkner & Associates purchased the former Gerdt building, now called Southport Station. Faulkner has moved its headquarters into part of the building. Renaissance Electronic Services will lease 60 percent of the space. The former concrete plant property was donated to the city in 2008. The city has sold the property to Randy Faulkner & Associates, where they will make it a parking lot which the city can use for its events on the weekends.

Villas at the Plaza will be constructed at the former lumber company site. Partnership for Affordable Housing is expected to close on the property soon and begin construction of 93 apartments for people age 55 and older with three spaces for retail near Southport Road. Perry Senior Services will relocate into one of those spaces.

Gwd. Community Center begins renovation

On April 1, the Greenwood Community Center will undergo its first major renovation since opening in 1992. Details of the $2 million project, including floor plans and design renderings, were announced today by the city's Parks & Recreation Department. Major highlights include: Expansion of the adult workout area featuring the latest in cardio and weightlifting equipment; an area devoted to children, open during all center hours, offering play features that are fun, creative and challenging; separate, controlled environments for adult fitness classes, which will allow the center to increase the number of classes offered; and Indiana's third Luckey Climber, a three-dimensional climbing sculpture designed for kids.

The project is expected to take approximately eight months, with an anticipated opening date in late 2016 or early 2017. The Community Center will also extend its hours upon reopening, allowing patrons more opportunities to schedule exercise and recreation around increasingly busy schedules.

Adult softball, youth soccer and T-Ball will be played as scheduled; park shelters will continue to be available for rent; and summer camps and before- and after-school programs will continue as planned and be moved to local schools.

Members of the community will have an opportunity to view the new floor plans and renderings as well. Those items will be on display March 21 - 25 during the center's regular hours.

COVER STORY

t took two months to film Hoosiers, a movie about a small-town Indiana basketball that rose above the challenges it faced to win the state championship.

Thirty years later, and Brad Long still talks about his role in the film wherever he goes, from public speaking engagements or chatting with high school students through his work as a sales representative for Jostens, selling class rings, graduation announcements, caps gowns and diplomas.

"I don't think any of us could have any idea at the time what impact it would have all of these years later," he says. "The reason it's done so well, one, it's a true story. Two, it's a story about basketball but with a theme of redemption and second chances. When an underdog does well, people root for that. It makes people feel better about themselves and makes them realize that they can overcome this obstacle."

Long attended Greenwood Community Schools until eighth grade when he moved to the Center Grove area. Through high school, he played basketball and ran track and cross country. He graduated from Center Grove High School in 1981.

"I had some great years and great memories in Center Grove High School," he says. "We won sectional my sophomore year. We had a good team my junior year and got upset in the sectional that year. That's what makes basketball great. Anything can happen."

Long graduated from Southwestern College in Kansas in the spring of 1985. He read in the paper about the search for basketball players to portray a high school basketball team in a movie inspired by the Milan High School team that won the 1954 state championship.

"I felt like I was too old, but back then I looked young for my age," he says. "My friends talked me into trying out for a part. It was really a lucky break. I just happened to fit a character they were looking for. I had no acting experience whatsoever. In most sports movies they look for actors and hope they can play basketball. In this movie, they looked for basketball players and hoped they could act."

Hoosiers was released in 1986, written by Angelo Pizzo and directed by David Anspaugh. Gene Hackman starred as Coach Normal Dale with co-stars Barbara Hershey and Dennis Hopper. Long portrayed the character Buddy Walker, the defensive expert. Buddy gets kicked out of the practice early on. Long says the explanation as to why never made it into the film. Interim coach Norman Dale kicks Buddy's father out of the practice so Buddy acted out. Buddy later redeems himself and becomes the team captain.

"Some of my favorite memories are the hijinks that went on with the players behind the scenes," Long says. "One day we were throwing a football around. Dennis Hopper threw the football into one of the lightings on the set." Long goes on to say, "Or, how much attention they paid to detail. The crowd would sit there for hours and the production crew would come in and hand out drinks. After an hour of filming, the director says 'cut.' That's because they didn't have aluminum cans back then. They flew out old glass bottles and reshot those scenes."

Long says the comment he gets most is how historically accurate the film was because of that attention to detail. They used actual towns and gyms in Indiana and allowed Indiana residents to take part in the film as extras in the movie.

"One of my favorite memories, Gene was doing an interview and said these are some of the best extras he had ever worked with," Long says. "He says only in Indiana could you get 8,000 people to come cheer for a fake basketball game. That was true."

After college, Long had begun working with Jostens, the company he still works for today. He and his wife, Lisa, reside in Whiteland. They have two children, Shelby, 26, and Landry, 19. Long says he still enjoys shooting hoops in his driveway and runs every day to stay in shape. He is starting a basketball league at his church, Greenwood Christian Church.

"I'm at an enjoyable time in my life," Long says. "I have two children that my wife and I are very proud of. It's a bit of an adjustment now, with both of them out of the house."

Long says there's been a renewed interest in the movie this year, in the 30th anniversary of the release. The Pacers first wore Hickory jerseys on Nov. 6. Each time they wear them, they honor someone/something that impacted Indiana basketball. There will be a golf benefit in honor of the film in May. He still keeps in touch with many of the other actors in the film, saying they consider each other like college roommates - they don't see each other much but when they reunite it's like they haven't missed a beat.

"I was 23 when we filmed that," he says. "At 53, you get nostalgic and look back and think it just didn't seem like that long ago. It was a humbling experience. Out of the filming of Hoosiers, it led to a lot of things for me in speaking engagements. I speak to a lot of churches, youth groups and civic organizations ... I talk about three things in my faith that are important to me: prayer, scripture reading, and witnessing. I relate that to the movie. I talk about in basketball you have a coach and other teammates that help you. I relate that to my faith in that God is my coach and I have teammates that help me with my walk in life."

With a continued love for basketball and history, Long says he feels privileged to have been a part of a movie that is still talked about to this day.

We knew Hoosiers would do well in Indiana," he said. "People would go see it out of curiosity. Much to our surprise it did well nationally and internationally. Any success that Hoosiers had, I give credit to the writer and director. They really made sure they got it right. It's a movie that really captures its history. I think the Lord was looking out for me to give me the opportunity to do (be part of it). I'm humbled by that."

Cub Scout Pack #499 cheers each other on at annual Pinewood Derby in Southport

By Nicole Davis

Cheers filled the Southport Community Center on March 12 as Cub Scout Pack #499 and their families raced the boys' handmade wooden racecars to see who made the fastest car. With more than 30 Cub Scouts, 11 siblings and their parents, the exhilaration spread throughout the room.

"It's a great event with a high excitement level, promoting comradery with the boys," says Kendra Colberg, a parent. "It promotes a sense of pride in creating the car from start to finish. There was a really good moral this year with the boys cheering on each other's cars. I don't know if it was the flags this year the kids had to wave, but everyone was excited and happy to be there."

Cub Scout Joshua Hensley was named the overall winner. The scouts voted on their favorite car design, naming Bradley Johns' racecar the Best in Show.

Parasite Control

PAWS for THOUGHT

By Dr. Jeff Ambrous

As we enter March, Spring is just around the corner. With the warmer weather comes the thought of various parasites that can attach to your pets.

Heartworms are rather common to see in Indiana. They are spread by the bite of a mosquito. As we all know, mosquitoes are also quite common in Indiana and are often a nuisance in the great outdoors or even in the city.

Fleas are a pest that everyone knows about. They infest our family pets and also wildlife that can live just outside your front door. As the temperatures increases, they will also become much more active and interested in feeding on your pets.

Although usually fewer in number than fleas, ticks are also common problem seen here in Indiana. Not only do they bite and cause skin irritation, but they also can carry a variety of diseases.

This is why each spring (or ideally yourround) it is important to have a heartworm and flea/tick control plan in place. There are a variety of different preventative products

Brandon and Nicole Nicoloff provide bridal bouquets and household décor at Marshmallow Monkey

DECOR

By Haleigh Inscore

For four years, Brandon and Nicole Nicoloff of The Marshmallow Monkey have been bringing rustic home décor and distinctive flower arrangements to Johnson County. For furniture seekers and brides alike, the couple's specialty is the personalization and customization that comes with each customer's request.

It all started, Nicole says, with her grandfather, who was known as one of the first

Hoosier Boy tomato growers. He and her grandmother had built their home and vegetable growing business "by hand" on the

After Nicole's grandfather had a heart attack, her parents (her mother was a floral designer) decided to start a wholesale flower business out of the old market shed. Thanks to Nicole's grandpa, they had inherited a customer base that spanned multiple generations. "So we kind of took the shift from growing tomatoes and lettuce on the family property to repurposing that old building into a place where they could house their dustries for 20 years prior, Nicole in healthcare and Brandon at the Greenwood Fire

Department, the couple decided it was time

tion," Nicole says.

"Every bride's bouquet that we create is truly a piece of artwork," she says. "There's always a surprise included...we get to know them so deeply that by the time they get married, there's something that they always find in their bouquet." One bride, whose friends called her "Duck," received in her bouquet a piece of jewelry embellished with a duck, which was woven "into the wrapping and encasement of the stems."

"Like [my grandfather] always said, 'Good business is built on friendships and how you make people feel, it's not about what you're selling," Nicole says. Brandon agreed: "We enjoy the conversations and getting to know everyone...and they're not always going to remember what we say, but I guarantee when they walk out of here they're going to remember how we made them feel."

They now host customers from all over the country, Brandon say, "as far as Wisconsin that will call as they travel through going to Florida." And there was even one woman who bought a bus ticket from Evansville to come down and visit their shop.

Brandon and Nicole share an affinity for what they call "the bygone era"—a time like the one in which her grandfather lived, where communities were tight-knit and have a "small town feel." They hope to create that type of environment for their own children through owning the shop and continuing to provide personalized services to their neighbors and new friends.

Finding a gown that is uniquely you

WHAT TO WEAR?

By Jessica Limeberry, owner of Sophia's Bridal

You've gotten engaged, set a wedding date, found the venue, and maybe even reserved your dream photographer. Now what do you do? It is time to shop for the perfect wedding gown!

There are so many fun (and funny) TV shows now that showcase the ins and out of weddings, particularly wedding dress shopping. While these are entertaining to binge watch, sometimes they give us unrealistic expectations of how your experience should be. At Sophia's Bridal, Tux, and Prom, we want everyone's experience to be perfect. Maybe you are loud and emotional, or maybe you're more shy and quiet. Both are perfect. The most important part of the whole process is that you get to relax, enjoy yourself, and find the wedding gown that is uniquely you!

We like to say that finding the perfect wedding gown is a lot like finding the man of your dreams. You never quite know when it will happen, and it isn't always exactly what you expect. But when the moment happens, you know. We always recommend that you go shopping prepared to fall in love. There are two key things you can do to get ready: decide on your budget, and carefully pick your entourage.

Budget can be a scary six-letter word, but it is absolutely essential to your experience! There are gorgeous wedding gowns in all price points, and your consultant should be able to help you find the perfect combination of style and price. When deciding who to bring with you on your wedding gown hunt, bigger isn't always better. Sometimes, lots of opinions can be overwhelming, and some places can't accommodate huge parties. If you are planning on bringing a larger party, consider making a weekday appointment. At Sophia's, we also do private appointments on Sundays for those larger groups who want an even more personalized experience.

The best piece of advice the Sophia's consultants have for a bride is to relax, enjoy, and trust the experience. We are here to walk you through the whole process, and our biggest goal is to make you feel loved and beautiful.

Sophia's Bridal is located at 7015 U.S. 31 S., Indianapolis. For more information, visit sophiasbridalandtux.com

Barn built for wedding bells

Bay Horse Inn to construct a rustic-style barn which will fit modern wedding trends

VENUE

By Haleigh Inscore

The Barn at Bay Horse Inn in Greenwood is a concept that owner Amanda Cottingham and her team have been working toward since May of 2015. On Feb. 29, the group celebrated the groundbreaking of the new venue, which will be constructed on a seven-acre portion of 35 acres that belong to Amanda and her family.

The facility is named after the house that Amanda grew up in, which Karen Brandon, the Barn's marketing director, explains was actually "eight barns that had been combined into one dwelling."

"So it was very unique," Karen says, "and the gateway into the home was an etched glass window that had 'The Bay Horse Inn' written in it."

"When we were naming this," Amanda says, "I wanted it to have a meaning and there's a lot of people that know me from childhood that know what that means."

In addition to weddings, Amanda says the Event Barn will be equipped to host corporate events, fundraisers for non-profits, and other community functions. It will feature a saloon, bride and groom's rooms and enough space to seat 425 guests. An option for overnight accommodations on the property is "the Inn," an updated cabin that sleeps about six guests.

According to project coordinator, Sarah

McCarty, the Barn will "have the feel of an old barn, but with modern amenities," built with weddings in mind.

"You can come in and not a lot will have to be done, basically. There will be chandeliers hanging all the time, we'll have string lights, the lighting can be dimmed to fit whatever the need is," Sarah says. The Barn will also be built for year-round service with heating, cooling, and a large stone gas fireplace.

The Barn will satisfy a growing rusticstyle wedding trend. Sarah says brides and grooms are attracted to the natural landscape that the site has to offer for photos. "I feel like people want that outdoorsy effect...where they're not necessarily picking the most glamorous of things." Popular flower arrangement choices also mirror this natural theme, often including wildflowers, grasses, leaves and twigs rather than a traditional rose bouquet.

At the core of this project is Amanda's relentless effort in making it a reality. Karen, who has worked with the family business, Cottingham Realty, for many years, says, "She's someone who had this idea and did her research, did her background...she dug her feet in and went to work and is making it a reality. Within a year of her idea, it will be here." The Barn at Bay Horse Inn will celebrate the grand opening of the Event Barn in September.

Miracles from Heaven; Jennifer Garner shines

MOVIE REVIEW

By Adam Staten

Films have the amazing ability to make audience members experience a variety of feelings and emotions. Whether it is a slapstick comedy, a gory horror or a non-stop thriller with an abundance of unforeseen twists and turns, through the images projected on the screen, filmmakers are able to manipulate our emotional state. Now, in order for any film to have any kind of effect on us, audience members must be able to empathize with the characters. One new film that attempts to use that audience's identification with and compassion for its central characters is Miracles from Heaven.

Miracles from Heaven is the film based-up on the book of the same name. It's the truelife story of an extremely happy middle class church-going family in Texas living what appears to a picture perfect life. However, that perfection is shattered in a big way.

One of the family's three young girls begins complaining of severe stomach pains. Understandably worried, the mother and father rush their young daughter to the hospital only to be told by doctor after doctor that there is nothing wrong with young Annabelle. However, her mother, Christy Beam (Jennifer Garner), refuses to accept the diagnoses and demands answers until she hears the unfortunate news: Anna has a rare and deadly digestive disorder for which there is no cure. While trying to find a cure for their daughter, the family's finances and faith are put to the test. What follows is what can only be described as a miracle.

> Miracles from Heaven is a faith-based film that revolves around the idea of faith. However, unlike most films of the genre that suffer from cringeworthy acting and bad writing, Miracles from Heaven does not. Jennifer Garner's strong and heartfelt performance carries the film throughout, even when there are definite lags and slow points when the direction becomes a bit questionable. Almost as equally as good is the young girl who portrays Anna. She provides depth and believability far beyond her age.

The film's biggest flaw, besides its at times sluggishness in moving the story forward, is an unnecessary character. Queen Latifah, who appears on screen for less than five minutes, plays a waitress who befriends Christy and Anna. Besides providing a few laughs, her character is completely unnecessary.

While, it's not a perfect film, Miracles from Heaven, is an enjoyable film that features a strong lead performance. 3 out of 5

AN OPTION

Don Gusto PJ Mexican Grill

The scoop: Driving on South Meridian, it was easy to overlook the little red building at Hanna Avenue intersection. After driving by it a hundred times or more, a stop by Don Gusto PJ Mexican Grill will probably lead to a few more stops in the coming months. Tortas, or Mexican sandwiches, is one of the restaurant's signature dishes. Try The King with ham, breaded chicken, cheese, sausage, chorizo and eggs or go for the Queen with breaded beef, ham, cheese and eggs. I went for a vegetarian torta which is included in a vegetarian section of the menu. Try some of their other authentic Mexican dishes: alambres, machete, chilaguiles, sopes, huaraches, pambasos, and other more familiar items like tacos, enchilladas and guesadillas. The next time I go I might go for the breaded tilapia.

Type of food: Mexican

Specialties: Tortas, or Mexican sandwiches,

Recommendation: Del Rey Mexican Sandwich

NUTRITION

By Chef Wendell Fowler

Right now, hundreds, perhaps thousands of sports fans are gleefully sucking down insipid, health-trashing, unctuous corn chips asphyxiated in a molten, psychedelic yellow cheese-like substance from a tin can; an affront to food purists. Gosh you're an easy mark: content with low-grade, inauthentic, inferior nutrition in the name of instant pleasure. Go Team!

Do you settle for-whatever-in your feed bag? We're indeed mammals; a trainable species that can be sucked in to the black vortex of any food fare bedecked with bells and whistles, lilting mascots, and shiny, bright colored packaging. We mustn't forget stewardship. God did not create us to be absentee landlords. The biblical assignment for man to responsibly care for him or herself has apparently been written out of the scriptures while diseases born of malnutrition are the new norm. News flash: you were created by a loving God to express perfect health.

Bet the farm that when Nachos were invented the corn wasn't genetically altered, spiced with herbicide and then fried in filthy cottonseed or peanut oil and then topped with "cheese sauce" from a can that leaches cancerous BPA. Please grasp the insanity of not paying attention to your food choices or reading labels?

I purchased a can of ready-to-use Nacho Cheese and saw it was made from cheese whey, partially-hydrogenated soybean oil (trans-fats that cause heart disease), modified food starch natural (wink, wink) flavors, sodium phosphate, maltodextrin (an intense carb), salt, MSG (Neurotoxin), sugar (cancer fertilizer), cheddar and 'blue' cheese (way down at the bottom), and succulent yellow 5 and 6 food dye, banned in European countries where warnings are issued about their possible side effects. It is still freely and extensively used in the US, nevertheless. The Center for Science in the Public Interest report yellow 5 and 6 seem to cause hyperactivity in some children. Liquid gold my butt; this toxic twaddle is poison to your temple and you should be alarmed they think you're so gullible.

American Icon, Velveeta "cheese" (wink, wink), is made from milk, whey, milk protein, whey protein concentrate, sodium phosphate, 2% or less of: salt, calcium phosphate, lactic acid, sorbic acid(preservative), sodium citrate, dodium alginate, enzymes, apocarotenal and annatto for color, and cheese culture. Purists say Velveeta is technically not cheese. It is a cheese-like substance. In industry semantics, Velveeta is packaged as a "pasteurized prepared cheese product". In other words: processed. You deserve the best, not the least.

Mother's Day 2016

"What advice or wisdom has your mother shared with you that you believe will be most important to your future?"

Mother's Day is a timeless tradition that allows us a day of celebration with the person who brought us into this world—our mother! Though we try our best to appreciate Mom the whole year round, we sometimes lose track of all she's done for us. Take this Mother's Day as an opportunity to show Mom how much you care with a genuine letter from you, personally! Though we know it's difficult sharing all the wonderful things about your mother in just one page, we ask that entries do not exceed one page or 300 words. Elementary or middle school students from the following schools are eligible to submit one essay: Beech Grove, Center Grove, Franklin Township, Greenwood and Perry Township or if you attend a public, private, parochial or charter schoool in zip codes 46107, 46142, 46143, 46203, 46217, 46225, 46227, 46237 or 46239. Please include your name, age, grade, and school or home address on the letter as well. The three best entries will be selected and published in the May 7 issue of The Southside Times. The winning entry will receive a pizza party for his or her class.

Deadline for submissions is April 25

Mail or drop off your entry to: ATTN: Mother's Day, The Southside Times 7670 S. US 31, Indianapolis, IN 46227 or email entries to: moms@ss-times.com

Weekly Devotion

"Bless the Lord, O my soul: and all that is within me, bless His holy name. Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all His benefits: Who forgiveth all thine iniquities; who healeth all thy diseases; As far as the east is from the west, so far hath he removed our transgressions from us."

~ Psalms 103:1-3 & 12

When it comes to being a believer in the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit and the Holy Word of God, we are blessed. Now, to turn those blessings back to the Lord is the thing. We have been blessed with all the benefits of being the children of the great King of kings and Lord of lords. He is God above every god man might imagine. He is far above all the movie stars, rock stars, political stars, or business stars who become idols of the people who follow after them as though they could work some marvelous miracle for them when all any of these can do is temporarily distract them from the real problems that they have and, that is sin.

I want to bless the Lord with my soul and with all that is within me. I know where all of my benefits originate and Who is in charge of this day as well as of any other day that I might live on this earth. When He is finished with me here, He will bring me to His house in Paradise and, later, following the coming of Christ for His bride, in His eternal heaven. I know this because He said so and I believe Him no matter those who say otherwise. Without Him I can do nothing and without Him I am nothing.

God bless and go and have a great day.

Paul A. Kirby is the pastor at the Church of God at 3939 S. Emerson Ave.
